C'mon man, pull yourselves together. I don't know much about this multiple personality business, but I'm sure it's not so bad. I have to say that I was not real thrilled with some parts of your letter, so I was not sure which of you I should bother to write back. But, I figured you guys must be pretty close, and I didn't want to hurt anyone's feelings (unlike some psychotics I could mention who don't care whose feelings they trample on). Look on the bright side, nobody has to hide in the trunk when you go to a drive-in movie, you can claim four dependants on your tax returns, you can all use the same toothbrush, you'll never be lonely and five can ast as cheaply as one! So cheer-up, put on happy faces, and at least try to be Sybil to each other.

Advice from Butch Baxter is a new weekly addition to the Features section of the Villanovan. It is intended for entertainment purposes only. The characters and letters are purely fictitious, and any resemblance to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Happy Birthday

Jeff Gillies

Theresa Brock

Dana Shafie

DAEDALUS EDUCATION SERVICES LSAT Now At Villanova!
GO FOR IT!
GRE • GMAT • LSAT
CALL 215-449-6941

A104 Physical Education

My first time tutoring was a night to remember. My student was something called Bone Crusher Reed, a.k.a. Billy Jo, defensive tackle for the football team.

I had the shock of my life when he answered his dorm room door. He was about six foot seven...in diameter. And when he shook my hand, I thought I'd never get it back.

So there I was, face-to-knee with the big man on campus, wondering how I was going to relate American Literature to The Hulk.

But then he pulled out a can of Orange Cappuccino. I was shocked! Could it be that this tough jock liked its delicate taste? And when Bone Crusher brought out the bone china, I was beyond belief.

Reading the expression on my face, he said, "What can I say? I like it. The Café Francais is pretty good, too." Well, who's going to argue, I thought. As we sipped our Orange Cappuccino, I discovered that Billy Jo loves reading novels; his only problem was poetry. So I gave him tips on reading Emily Dickinson, and he gave me a copy of Ann Beattie's "Falling in Place."

All I could think was, Dad's never going to believe this!

General Foods® International Coffees. Share the feeling.

© 1988 General Foods Corp.

collegiate camouflage

S	N	I	U	G	U	A	G	C	E	Z	P	C	C	N
E	G	A	S	D	O	N	O	D	E	R	M	H	E	E
U	E	A	U	T	A	U	L	T	U	Q	A	A	Z	T
R	U	S	E	A	R	U	E	F	Y	R	H	M	A	E
W	Q	N	S	B	M	N	M	U	D	F	C	P	Q	F
M	A	N	E	I	O	L	L	I	R	T	U	D	U	F
M	R	T	L	M	T	E	N	U	E	A	D	D	X	U
O	B	L	T	E	L	A	Q	S	E	R	G	N	I	B
N	E	E	E	E	U	L	M	S	G	U	A	G	O	U
T	I	G	N	W	A	T	S	F	F	E	T	U	R	D
O	G	E	N	A	U	U	Z	A	M	S	C	Q	C	S
R	D	R	A	N	O	G	A	R	F	H	A	W	A	T
O	C	E	Z	R	R	E	Z	U	E	R	G	G	L	O
C	U	A	E	R	O	M	O	R	R	I	O	N	E	R
R	A	H	C	O	R	R	A	S	S	I	P	O	D	D

Can you find the hidden French painters?

BOUCHER
BRAQUE
CEZANNE
CHARDIN
COROT
COURBET
DAUMIER
DEGAS
DELACROIX
DUBUFFET
DUCHAMP
DUFY
FRAGONARD
GAUGUIN
GREUZE
INGRES
LEGER
MANET
MATISSE
MILLET
MONET
MOREAU
PISSARRO
REDON
RENOIR
ROUAULT
ROUSSEAU SEURAT
UTRILLO
WATTEAU

Solution page 23

Dating a stranger can be fun

(Continued from page 13)

work I brought home. I knew it. The romance ended before it began.

I was wrong! I did get some school work done, and he did call back. Friday at 7 p.m. was the time of our date. And the place? He asked if he could meet me somewhere. For an instant I thought that maybe he really was a spy. But then I thought that he could just be a normal guy with the "fear of meeting mom and dad" syndrome. I told him that the best place to meet was my house.

Friday evening found me watching the end of a "Little House on the Prairie" rerun. I thought an hour would be sufficient time to get ready. Again, I was wrong.

To my surprise, the outfit I planned to wear was dirty. I forgot that I still had to sterilize my contact lenses if I did not want to squint all night, and my new haircut required extra styling time if I did not want to leave the house looking like Pippi Longstocking.

Consquently, at 6:55 p.m. I was running around the house wearing my glasses, a towel and a pair of socks (truly romantic attire) as I prayed fervently that "the date" would not arrive on time.

My prayers were answered, all too generously; at 7:15 the phone rang. "Hi. I'm not at your house yet."

"No fooling, huh?" I answered.

"Well you see, I went to the gas station and now my car won't start up so I have to borrow my dad's car. I'll be over in a half hour."

"Likely excuse," I thought as I switched my body from high to low gear. But he did have the courtesy to call, so I gave him the benefit of the doubt. I did not regret it.

In less than a half hour the doorbell rang. My sister answered it. I heard the deep voice but was afraid to look at him.

When I could no longer avoid the moment of truth, I was surprised to see a normal looking, blue jeaned, brown-eyed and blond-haired college student. He did not look like a mobster, let alone act like one. In fact, if my intuition served me correctly, he seemed a bit nervous.

Still, I had my doubts. I thought to myself, we will not have anything in common. He will talk about pastry dough. I will talk about Shakespeare and we will have a blast. Of course he does know my sister. We could always talk about her all night. That should be fun.

But much to my surprise, I soon discovered that we both shared a passion for sleeping late, game shows, MTV, suspense movies, jogging, veal marsala and Fosters Lager.

Of course, I cannot see the future, but the success of my first blind date taught me not to be so sceptical of them. Who knows? One day I just might have kids who tell their friends, "My mom and dad met on a blind date and they're a perfect match."

Happy Birthday

ΔΔΔ

Jen!!

Word of the Week

Sherbetty

A) an ice cream-like substance made of yogurt and sherbert
B) a drunken stupor
C) a lacey, frilly collar worn during the Renaissance period
D) a trio of banjo players

Solution page 19

AFRICAN SUMMER SAFARI

TARANGIRE NATIONAL PARK • GREAT RIFT VALLEY • SERENGETI PLAINS • NGORONGORO VOLCANO CRATER • LAKE MANYARA • MOUNT KILIMANJARO • ARUSHA PARK • MASAI TRIBESMEN • RARE BIRDS AND WILDLIFE AND MORE.

PRIVATE CAMP WITH THATCHED ROOF TENTS • SWIMMING POOL • ALL AMENITIES AND MEALS • PRIVATE LAND ROVERS WITH OVERHEAD HATCHES • GUIDES AND DRIVERS • GROUPS OR INDIVIDUALS • JULY AND AUGUST 1988

for more information call or write to:

MUTTONTOWN TRAVEL CORP.
Vicki Lazarus 516-921-6840
6800 JERICHO TURNPIKE • SYOSSET, NY 11791

$2 OFF ANY COMPACT DISC AND $2 OFF ANY CASSETTE OR LP $10 MIN. PURCHASE
CD CLUB OR SALE PRICES NOT INCLUDED.
SALE ENDS FEB. 27, 1988
JUST FOR THE RECORD, INC.
ROSEMONT VILLAGE MALL
LANCASTER AVE.
ROSEMONT, PA

B.J.'s BILLIARDS
PLYMOUTH SQ. SHOPPING CTR.
RIDGE AND BUTLER PIKES
CONSHOHOCKEN, PA 19428
825-4699
14 Regulation Tables
Open Late 365 Days A Year

SNOW MAY BE WHITE - BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE
GOLDEN IMAGE TANNING CENTERS
566 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA
Located Next to Al E Gators
CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
525-7125

• Safe UVA Tanning
• Open 7 Days
• Complete Privacy
• Relaxing Atmosphere
• Trained Technicians
• Wolff/ Coppertone Products

ONE FREE TANNING SESSION! New Customers Only Limit One Per Person With Coupon Only Expires 3/31/88

SAVE $9.00 7 VISITS ONLY $35.00 New Customers Only Limit One Per Person With Coupon Only Expires 3/31/88

We feature:
Novalux Lamps exclusively from patented SCA Wolff System
"The World's #1 Choice in Indoor Tanning"

COLLEGE DISCOUNT — 20% OFF ANY PACKAGE
Villanova Student I.D. Required
American Express Cards Accepted
Have FUN in the SUN Longer this Spring Break!

THE ART BIN

To the Editor:

I/we took particular offense at the cartoon appearing in this week's _____ section of The Villanovan. Most offensive was the _____ and tasteless _____ of the _____ in question. I/we have included the offensive sketch (much to my/our disgust) as a point of reference. _____ is a complex and sensitive issue/ group and the cartoon is a bit of filth and a _____ and a _____ and an _____; need I/we go on?

Very Truly Yours,

_____

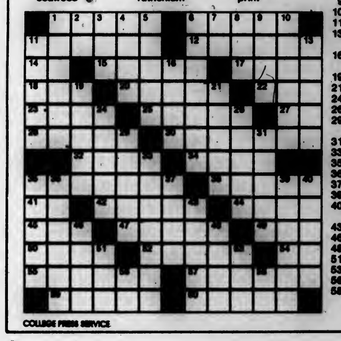
P.S. You better print this.

Meet Johnny Hoon

by Andrew Bulljon

WE INTERRUPT THIS POTENTIALLY OFFENSIVE COMIC STRIP TO SAVE POTENTIAL READERS FROM POTENTIAL OUTRAGE AND INDIGNATION.

WE NOW BRING YOU THIS NICE, CLEAN, AND THOROUGHLY LESS ODIOUS COMIC STRIP.



WE ARE SORRY FOR ANY INCOVENIENCE DUE TO THIS CENSORING.

A.B.

The Villanovan Crossword Puzzle

The Weekly Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Talk idly
6 Vapor
11 Praised
12 Museum custodian
14 Either
15 Field flower
17 Learning
18 Footlike part
20 Steps over a fence
22 Excavate
23 Heraldry: grafted
25 Strikes
27 Symbol for sodium
28 Long-legged bird
30 Sedition
32 Couple
34 Ashes of seaweed
35 Insects
38 Hello
41 Concerning
42 Aquatic mammal
44 Food fish
45 Limb
46 Surfeits
48 Snare
50 Old name for Thailand
52 Hindu queen
54 Diphthong
55 Follows first
57 Masked
59 Twin of Romulus
60 Song-and-dance acts

DOWN
1 Father or mother
2 Symbol for ruthenium
3 Sum up
4 Afternoon parties
5 Prepares for print
6 Frolic boisterously
7 Symbol for tellurium
8 Lamprey
9 Footless
10 Bread of sheep
11 Runs easily
13 Daughter of King Lear
16 Deposit of sediment
19 Mine excavation
21 Fencers' swords
24 Muse of poetry
26 Seasons
29 Scotchman's outfit
31 Piece of cutlery
33 Holds back
35 Metal
36 Weirder
37 Bristle
39 Begs
40 Mediterranean vessel
43 Tears
46 Heavy club
48 Search for 51 Dad's partner
53 Yalie
56 Greek letter
58 Guido's low note

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

Boisjoly

(Continued from page 13)

by the workings of NASA. He is worried that another Challenger disaster is on the horizon. "I am deathly afraid that the same thing that happened to Challenger will happen again. If it does, it will mean the end of the manned space program."

As a result of his resignation, Boisjoly received 60 percent of his formal salary for two years. In 11 months this compensation will cease, and Boisjoly has put his home in Utah up for sale and is currently seeking other means of support. In the meantime, he is drawing on his own personal experience and speaking to students nationwide.

His aim is to make public the story of what really took place and to outline the unethical practices that were put into motion to make the decision to launch the Challenger.

He hopes to promote ethical discussions toward technology, and hopefully to change the current system in the workplace, integrating ethics with technological advancements.

Through speaking at these universities, Boisjoly hopes that "many students will make a difference. Instead of one voice I will be 1000. Only through this will come change in the workplace."

Rubes® By Leigh Rubin

CARTOON CRIMINALS: Do we really want them as role models for our children? (Celebrity characters impersonated).

Chris

HAPPY 2-YEAR ANNIVERSARY!
I LOVE YOU ALWAYS,

CATHY

Hail to the Chief!
Congratulations to
Jackie Gentile
New President of Alpha Omicron Pi

A TAN FOR ALL SEASONS

Now you can get a deep, dark, long-lasting tan in just six 30-minute sessions with our unique tanning program. And you won't burn, peel or age your skin in the process!

Unlike conventional sunlamps, our Sontegra "skin-friendly" tanning beds emit only the safest tanning rays. Relax in a cool, comfortable environment while tanning from above and below simultaneously.

STUDENT SPECIAL
12 Visits — $59
Co-Pay Membership Plan
1 Month — $29
3 Month — $59
$3 Per Session
HOURS
Mon.-Fri. 9 a.m. - 8 p.m.
Sat. 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Sun. 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.
ROSEMONT VILLAGE MALL
Rosemont, Pa. 19010
527-3105

VILLANOVA INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

6-WEEK VIENNA SUMMER LANGUAGE PROGRAM
VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY — INSTITUTE OF EUROPEAN STUDIES
JUNE 11 - JULY 24

PROGRAM

The objective of the VU-IES Vienna Summer Program is to increase German language proficiency. Students will be required to enroll in either the beginning, intermediate or advanced levels. The 6-week program is taught by Villanova and Austrian University faculty. Students at the beginning level may take a second three-credit topics courses in economics, history, political science or art and architecture (taught in English). A total of six (6) semester credit hours are allowed. VU-IES organizes excursions in addition to a summer ball.

- Beginning or Advanced Beginning German, (3 credits)
- Intensive Intermediate German (3 credits)
- Civilization (3 credits)/Austrian Literature (3 credits)
- East European Economics (3 credits)
- East-West European Politics (3 credits)
- Vienna: Growth of an Urban Civilization (3 credits)
- Austrian Art and Architecture (3 credits)

LOCATION

The Villanova-IES summer program is centered in the Palais Corbelli, a lovely eighteenth century palace located in the heart of Vienna. Facilities include a library, classrooms, study lounge and practice rooms.

HOUSING AND MEALS

Students are housed in private Austrian residences. Housing arrangements do not include meals. Students can eat at inexpensive Mensas or local restaurants.

PROGRAM COSTS

The comprehensive fee is $2,090 which includes round-trip ticket (NYC-Vienna-NYC), tuition, required excursions and the Villanova fee. It does not include meals, optional trips, insurance nor personal expenses. Applications plus $300 are due by April 15, 1988, the balance of fees is due and payable in full on May 15, 1988.

ADMISSION REQUIREMENTS

- University student status with a 2.5 QPA on a 4.0 scale.
- Acceptance by Villanova University and IES.

For applications, contact Dr. Mario P. Aliaz (645-4705), Dr. Charles H. Heimsteg (645-4691) or Dr. Thomas M. Rohe (645-7525).

Q and A to promote good health

By
Marcia Costello, M.S.R.D.
Nursing Department
Cindy Lauer, R.D.
Food Service

March is National Nutrition month, and to help promote good health, a question and answer column will appear in the Villanovan for the next several weeks. If there is a particular question you would like answered, please mail it to Dougherty Hall Food Service, Cindy Lauer, R.D.

1. What are the differences in nutrient content between low fat milk, skim milk and whole milk?

The primary difference is the amount of fat each milk product contains.

---

2. Why is it recommended that Americans increase their intake of fiber?

Dietary fiber is the plant cell wall material which is resistant to human digestive enzymes. It is found in fruits and vegetables and breads and cereals made from whole grain products. Dietary fiber is composed of several different components, each of which exerts unique properties when consumed in the diet.

Oat bran, which is found in oat cereals and also sold separately in health food stores, has been shown to lower blood cholesterol levels. Diets high in cellulose and hemicellilose have been associated with a lower incidence of colon cancer in populations whose diets are high in fiber. The current American intake of dietary fiber is approximately 15 grams per day. The recommended intake by the National Cancer Institute is 20 to 25 grams per day.

---

3. Is margarine lower in calories than butter?

Margarine and butter both contain a similar amount of calories. One tablespoon of butter contains 108 calories and one tablespoon of margarine contains 102 calories. The difference between these two fats is related to their saturated and polyunsaturated content. A tablespoon of butter contains 7.6 grams of saturated fat and 0.5 grams of polyunsaturated fat. A tablespoon of margarine contains 1.8 grams of saturated fat and 5.1 grams of polyunsaturated fats. A diet high in saturated fat has been associated with raising blood cholesterol levels, and increasing the risk of developing coronary heart disease.

Here is the breakdown of the nutrient content of one cup of milk:

	calories	carbohydrate grams	fat grams	protein grams
whole milk, 3.5 percent fat	150	11.0	8.0	8.0
low fat milk, 2 percent fat	121	11.7	4.7	8.1
skim milk	86	11.9	0.4	8.4

Word of the Week Solution

Sherbetty

B) a drunken stupor

Successful Careers in Communications Start Here . . .

Friday, March 25, 1988
12:30 pm to 4:30 pm
Strawbridge & Clothier
8th & Market Streets
Philadelphia

PCAW's 13th Annual Communications Career Conference For Men and Women

For registration/ brochure see Dean of Students or call: Betty Bisaccia (215) 499-4243

EASTER PLANT SALE

WHEN: March 23; 1:30 p.m. to 6 p.m., 24 and 25; 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.
WHERE: DOUGHERTY HALL (NORTH LOUNGE)
BENEFIT: St. Edmond's Home Scout Troop
MAKE CHECKS PAYABLE TO: Rosemont Optimist Club
SPONSOR: Social Action Office & Rosemont Optimist Club

LARGER SIZES AVAILABLE: Call Agnes at EXT. 4424

LILIES		5-6 BLOOMS - $8.
TULIPS	5 BLOOMS - $5.	5 BLOOMS - $5.	6 BLOOMS - $6.
HYACINTHS	1 BLOOM - $2.50	5 BLOOMS - $5.	5 BLOOMS - $7.50
GARDENIAS	$19.
MUMS	$5. and $7.
DAFFODILS	$6.
GERANIUMS	$2.50
IMPATIENS (Hybrid)	$5.
ASSORTED BASKETS	$9.
AZALEAS	$15.

ASHER'S EASTER EGGS ½ lb. $3.
PEANUT BUTTER, PEANUT CREAM, FUDGE, COCONUT

GUADALAJARA SUMMER SCHOOL

University of Arizona offers more than 40 courses: anthropology, art, bilingual education, folk music and folk dance, history, phonetics, political science, Spanish language and literature and intensive Spanish. Six-week session. July 4-August 12, 1988. Fully accredited program. Tuition $510. Room and board in Mexican home $540.

EEQ/AA

Write
Guadalajara Summer School
Education Bldg., Room 225
University of Arizona
Tucson, AZ 85721
(602) 621-4723 or 621-4720

CRUISE SHIPS
NOW HIRING M/F
Summer & Career Opportunities (Will Train). Excellent pay plus world travel. Hawaii, Bahamas, Caribbean, etc.
Call 602-680-0778 Ext. 811H

LSAT GMAT GRE

GET INTO THE GRAD SCHOOL OF YOUR CHOICE

MCAT, DAT, NCLEX, NMB, CPA, BAR REVIEW & OTHERS
Prepare with The Best
546-3317 • 659-9111
KAPLAN

THE MOST IMPORTANT COURSE YOU'LL EVER TAKE!

INTERVIEWING DYNAMICS
LEARN THE MOST IMPORTANT SKILL OF YOUR CAREER
HOW TO INTERVIEW

- SELF EVALUATION
- RESUMES
- INTERVIEW QUESTIONS
- ROLE PLAYING
- INDIVIDUAL ATTENTION
- GOAL SETTING
- APPLICATIONS
- HOW TO INTERVIEW
- HOW TO DRESS
- LIMITED CLASS SIZE

FULL DAY SEMINAR $99
(215) 643-3460
John Patrick Assoc. Seminars

CONGRATULATIONS
TO THE 1988-89 EXECUTIVE BOARD

PRESIDENT
JOHN PRICE

VICE PRESIDENT
RICHARD DOMENICO

VISUAL ARTS
WALT McDONALD

SECRETARY
MAURA NOLAN

CONCERTS
CHRIS IPPOLITO

INTER-UNION
SUSAN LEWIS

FESTIVALS
TRUDY VOIGT

PUBLICITY
JACKIE LANZA

SALES AND ENTERTAINMENT
TERRI VU

LECTURES
RICK JOHNSON

SOCIAL FUNCTIONS
LISA MORGAN

THE UNION PAGE

Want to Travel, But Don't Have any Money?

TRY EUROPE

on 84¢ A DAY

MARCH 21
C.C. CINEMA
FREE LECTURE

THE STUDENT UNION NEEDS YOU!

APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE IN UNION OFFICE FOR:

TREASURER
—Responsible for all Union Financial Affairs

RECREATION COORDINATOR
—Plan one day trips to Atlantic City, New York

—Plan competitions, tournaments outdoor programming

—Plan Spring Break Trips
—And so much more-
APPLICATIONS DUE MARCH 22

THIS WEEK

ROBOCOP (R) ORION

MARCH 17 and 18
6:30 and 9 P.M.
$2
C.C. CINEMA

MARCH 22
CONCERTS COMMITTEE
presents

BARBARA BAILY HUTCHINSON

LIVE AT THE TERRACE
5:30-7:30 P.M.
BELLE AIR TERRACE

NEXT WEEK

C.C. CINEMA
6:30-9 P.M.
Tickets $2
MARCH 24 & 25

BALLROOM DANCING
FOUR CLASS SERIES
APRIL 6, 13, 20 AND 27
7:30-9 P.M.
$10

CONTACT UNION OFFICE FOR MORE INFO

CULTURAL FILM SERIES
presents
WRITTEN IN THE WIND

MARCH 19 AND 21 7 P.M.
MARCH 20 3:30 AND 7 P.M.
C.C. CINEMA

THE STUDENT UNION WISHES CONNELLY CENTER A HAPPY 8TH BIRTHDAY

THE CORR CHAPEL SERIES
presents

ELENA EASLEY
CELLO

PETER KIRCHNER
HARPSICHORD

MARCH 20 CORR CHAPEL
3 P.M. FREE

Entertainment

Springsteen got lost in the Tunnel of Love

By KEVIN HECHT
Senior Reporter

(Photo courtesy of Spectrum)

Bruce Springsteen returned to the Spectrum for two sold-out concerts on March 8 and 9.

The jeans and T-shirt were gone, replaced by a more conservative look. So was the unabashed raw energy. It was replaced with a refined and introspective intensity. The 24-year-old New Jersey kid who wanted to die in an everlasting kiss on Born to Run is now a 38-year-old man who wants steady contentment and all the time that heaven will allow. Bruce Springsteen, like everything else in the world, has gone through changes and has grown in new directions. This growth was made glaringly apparent on March 8 and 9 at the Philadelphia Spectrum.

Gone were the precious standards such as "Thunder Road," "Jungleland," "Badlands" and "The River." These songs were replaced with a surprising array of new material that is a far cry from the standard Springsteen playlists of the past.

At the show's opening, Springsteen invited the audience to ride with him through a "Tunnel of Love," and ride they did, from the early, light romantic strains of "Be True," to Elvis Presley's "Love Me Tender" and an encore presentation of "Rosalita" (described by Springsteen as the best love song he ever wrote).

Fans in attendance were treated to a large dose of the new and the unreleased. From his latest album, Springsteen presented the haunting resonance of "Two Faces" and "Tougher Than the Rest," the melancholy of "One Step Up," and the reflective verse of "Brilliant Disguise" and "Walk Like a Man."

The grinding emotion of "Spare Parts" was one of the evening's highlights, introduced by Springsteen's philosophic commentary stating that sometimes a person has to give up their old dreams, "or the world will keep breaking their heart over and over again."

Letting go of the past and moving on played a major role in the show's song selection. The new, unreleased songs "Coward" and "Part Man, Part Monkey" were interspersed with songs such as "Roulette," "Seeds" and "Be True," which have never been released on a studio album.

As usual, the marathon extravaganza was split by an intermission. "Born In The U.S.A." ended the first set in a rousing fashion, and the second set included rare glimpses of older material, such as "Hungry Heart" and a powerful rendition of "She's the One," as well as the traditional "Detroit Medley" in one of the encore performances.

As always, this show was more than a concert. It was an unforgettable experience orchestrated by a man who really is a personification of rock music. The genius of this master of story-telling is his ability to stand as a voice that expresses feelings inside us all, and this is what may make Springsteen's music so appealing.

Although his latest tour provides for a great performance, I still felt that something was missing by the end of the evening. It became all too apparent that Springsteen wanted to give the audience a different view of himself. He even relinquished his title during "Rosalita," as he changed the lyrics to say, "You don't have to call me lieutenant Rosie, and just don't call me Boss!"

As entertained as I was by this concert, I was always waiting for something that never came, and I wished that I could go back in time to see "Jungleland" once more.

In his introduction to a poignant acoustic version of "Born to Run," Springsteen explained that he wrote the song about two kids who were trying to run away, only to find out that they were trying to run to a place that really resided deep within themselves the whole time. Springsteen explained that life is really a journey to find that place inside us all. Just as he ran to find that place, he hoped that his music has helped his fans along their personal journeys as well, but sadly, the very music that paved the way for Springsteen's path was missing from the show. This music that means so much to Springsteen's popular aura was left out, leaving an unfillable void in an otherwise entertaining event.

The E Street Band, as always, played an outstanding set. Nils Lofgren was cool, Patty Scialfa was hot and Clarence Clemons is still the big man. Danny Federici, Roy Bittan and Max Weinberg rounded out what is the best live band in the world.

Springsteen admitted in "Glory Days" that he hopes he does not grow older while holding on to days gone by. His music is changing and growing so this does not happen, and his live set is changing, too.

I guess it is a fact of life that times and people change, and I realize the reasons why the latest Springsteen tour is so different. One cannot hold on to the glory days gone by, and with this in mind, I enjoyed a wonderful, entertaining show that is still the best in rock and roll, but I still can't help but remember a time when . . .

Richard Marx rocks Pulsations party

(Photo courtesy of Pulsations)

Richard Marx rocked Pulsations on March 12 for Eagle 106's first birthday party.

By KATHRYN QUIGLEY
Entertainment Editor

Radio station WEGX, known as Eagle 106, celebrated its first birthday by throwing a party at Pulsations nightclub in Glen Mills, Pa., this past Saturday night. Eagle 106 lined up some of dance music's newest stars for its guests, who had won tickets given away by the station.

Pulsations is known for playing slick dance music. That is what most of the acts played, dance music that was slick but had no substance. It is no surprise that the performer who stole the show was a rock singer.

The first act of the night on Pulsations small stage was the English duo known as Blue Mercedes. Their single, "I Want To Be Your Property" is rapidly climbing the dance charts.

"I Want To Be Your Property" is the only song Blue Mercedes sang, or rather lip-synced. Vocalist David Titlow and keyboardist Duncan Miller had pep, but could not dance. They looked rather silly bouncing around on stage, especially Titlow in his shorts and leather jacket. (If they were trying for the Wham! look, it was not working.)

The Cover Girls were quite a contrast. The group is composed of Margo Urban, Caroline Jackson and lead singer Louise "Angel" Sabater. They wore silver lame and lip-synced and danced to three songs from their Show Me album. The guys in the audience were salivating. One guy with many gold chains around his neck leaped on stage to dance with Angel.

The Cover Girls had a lot of energy, but are basically a bubblegum band. The only difference between them and Tiffany is that it is not a crime to "Show me, show me that you really love me," if the Cover Girls asked.

Men Without Hats, the band that had disappeared after their 1983 hit "Safety Dance," was the next act. Compared to the Cover Girls, they looked positively comotose.

Perhaps bored is a better adjective. There are four keyboard players in the group and not one has much to do. The guitarist also does not appear to contribute much to the group.

Lead singer Ivan is a confused cross between INXS' Michael Hutchence, U2's Bono and someone auditioning for the "Pirates of Penzance." Some of the crowd started getting restless after the band's second song. Half the people were cheering, and the other half were booing and yelling "Van Halen" and "Freebird."

The audience was quelled once the group started playing "Pop Goes The World," their latest hit. The guitarist even played something.

Taylor Danne looks like Charo but does not do the cha-cha. She struts and glides while doing some soulful, passionate singing. Her album is titled Tell It To My Heart and she sang three songs from it, including the title track. The audience went nuts during her act. She was burning up and her fever was catching.

The star that shone the brightest at the Eagle 106 party was not a glossy, syntho-backed singer. Richard Marx, 23-year-old rocker, tried to blow the roof off Pulsations, but instead blew out his amp. This was because he was the only act to perform live. Marx mentioned this several times.

"You've heard some great music tonight, but now you're going to hear some great live music."

Marx was backed up by a five-member band. His guitarist (for odd fact of the week) is the actor/musician who played Jason Walton in the TV show "The Waltons." Marx also plays the keyboards and did so for most of his act.

The beginning of his nine-song set included one of his biggest hits, "Should've Known Better." He played other cuts off his Richard Marx album including "Don't Mean Nothing" and "Have Mercy."

Marx can soften his hard rock edge with ballads such as "Endless Summer Nights," which he played as an encore. Marx was a fitting end to a show that was an example of how things start out bad and get steadily better.

Luci Jankowski, Staff Reporter, contributed to this article.

On The Scene...Entertainment Tidbits

By STEPHEN POWERS
Staff Reporter

Watch out, Johnny — the late-night talk show wars are heating up again. Less than a year after Carson-challengers Joan Rivers and David Brenner received their pink slips, a whole new bunch of talk shows will saturate the airwaves in the near future with the hopes of dethroning "The Tonight Show" from its late-night dominance.

The main contender: Pat Sajak, of "Wheel of Fortune" fame. Sajak recently signed with CBS to host a 90-minute talk/variety show that will go head to head with Carson and the first half of "Late Night with David Letterman" sometime next year. (No, Vanna White will not play his sidekick.) The new program will replace "Hunter" reruns, "Top of the Pops," and several first-run action series.

Meanwhile, to cut down on his workload, Sajak will step down as host of the NBC daytime version of "Wheel of Fortune" in December. However, he will continue to host the nighttime version, which is the most successful syndicated series in television history.

Contender #2: Morton Downey, Jr. The abrasive, controversial host currently appears on superstation WWOR and his show will be nationally syndicated in June. Downey is rude and often insults his guests and audience, but has such a loyal following in New York that he has become the inspiration for "The Chris Elliot, Jr. Show," a regular parody on "David Letterman." It remains to be seen if the nation is ready for Downey's antics.

Contender #3: Linda Ellerbee, late of ABC's "Our World." Ellerbee will surface on "And So It Goes," described as "a talk show with pictures" for syndication. The show, which is named after Ellerbee's autobiography, hits the air next January. A large number of ABC affiliates have expressed interest in airing the program after "Nightline."

Contender #4: John Mulrooney, and anyone else Fox can persuade to host "The Late Show." Mulrooney, the star of a new version of "Candid Camera," hosts the resurrected talk show two nights a week. Fox is still searching for a permanent host for the show, which sunk last year with Rivers at the helm.

In addition to the above four hopefuls, NBC sports personality Bob Costas will start working the night shift soon, but will not compete with Carson.

Meanwhile, to cut down on his workload, Sajak will step down as host of the NBC version of "Wheel of Fortune" in December.

NBC plans to air "Later with Bob Costas" after "Late Night with David Letterman" (get it?) starting in August. Costas says that sports figures will make up only about 20 percent of the show's guest, the rest being actors, journalists and other newsmakers. Each program will feature an in-depth interview with just one guest, but interviews with celebrities such as Bruce Springsteen could be spread over two nights or more.

On the subject of talk shows, the current strike by the Writers Guild of America has forced "The Tonight Show" and "David Letterman" out of production. The two shows depend heavily on pre-written comedy material and may not return until the strike is settled. Jay Leno, who hosts "Tonight" on Mondays, has taped several shows, using his own material, which will be aired over the next few weeks. Other than Leno's shows, both "Tonight" and "Letterman" will air reruns.

The same strike could also affect daytime game shows and soap operas very soon. Most soaps have already stockpiled a month's worth of scripts, but are running out and could be forced to shut down. ABC is reportedly considering airing "The Best of General Hospital," with reruns featuring alumni Demi Moore, Genie Francis, Emma Samms and Rick Springfield.

If the strike lasts long enough, it could push back the start of the fall television season. It has already delayed the premieres of several new spring replacement series; CBS' new Christopher Lloyd comedy, "The Dictator," has been replaced by "My Sister Sam" and a new "Smothers Brothers" show will probably be replaced with "Magnum, P.I." reruns.

SHORT TAKES: Filming has begun on "The Naked Gun," a big-screen version of the 1982 ABC cult spoof "Police Squad." Leslie Nielsen, who reprises his television role, and Priscilla Presley star. The movie is being produced by the same team who made the original "Airplane."

And finally, reincarnation seems to be the hot movie theme in Hollywood. Hot on the heels of "Hello, Again" and "Made in Heaven" come "Life After Life" with Cybill Shepherd, "Stitch in Time," about a cop who returns 40 years after his death, and "Dead Heat," with Joe Piscopo as a cop who is shot and killed, but is later "jump-started" back to life.

SOURCES: USA Today, The Philadelphia Inquirer.

For What It's Worth . . .Commentary

By BILL CARR and MICHAEL AIMETTE
Staff Reporters

I.R.S. Records has recently branched out from its typical rock and roll format by creating I.R.S. No Speak, four new albums featuring purely instrumental rock. Miles Copeland, president of I.R.S., is quick to point out that these albums are strictly rock and roll — hardly jazz or New Age.

Of the four records, the standout is Wishbone Ash's Nouveau Calls; powerful and melodic music unencumbered by lyrics. Miles' brother, Stewart Copeland (ex-Police member), contributes with The Equalizer & Other Cliff-hangers which is a bit orchestrated and highly experimental. Pete Haycock's Guitar And Son is a collection of tedious blues jams which one would be wise to avoid, while William Orbit's release is slightly less risky; a well-balanced mix of electric and acoustic instruments with catchy melodies and an excellent rhythm section. Obviously, these albums are not meant for commercial success, but three of the four bands are excellent examples of the advancements made in rock music today, and are pioneers of an exhilirating brand of music.

Midnight Oil, the intensely political band from Australia, finally seems poised for success in America. Diesel And Dust, the band's most recent album and third in its history, is currently No. 3 on the college charts. The first single from the album, "Beds are Burning" is Midnight Oil's most accessible and catchy single to date. The band has always hoped to extend the overwhelming success it has garnered in its homeland to the states, but it is not willing to sacrifice its politicism in order to do so. "Beds are Burning" should give Midnight Oil the best of both worlds. The band has proven its songwriting ability, but the extent of its commerciality will probably depend on how well the American audience responds to the, shall we say, unique singing of lead vocalist Peter Garrett. Midnight Oil will be performing in Philadelphia March 28.

After nearly 12 years, The Cars have officially broken up due to both personality clashes and lack of recent success.

After nearly 12 years, The Cars have officially broken up due to both personality clashes and lack of recent success. No big deal, of course, since they've been terrible for quite some time now (not to mention the fact that Ric Ocasek has practically run the show single-handedly in recent years); except for a smattering of decent singles, they haven't recorded anything good since their self-titled debut album.

More importantly, Minneapolis-based Husker Du has disbanded. The critically acclaimed trio have mysteriously quit recording their third album for Warner Brothers and the nature of the break-up remains unrevealed. The band, formed in 1978, recorded six independent LPs and EPs moving from hardcore to more diverse musical territories in the process. Their last release, Warehouse: Songs and Stories, was a brilliant, double album that seemed to place the band on the brink of commercial success . . .

As you probably know by now, INXS will be coming to the Spectrum in Philadelphia on March 25. Let's hope that INXS, known for its excellent live shows, keeps up the tradition by not focusing on material from KICK. Either way, the show will be worth seeing for INXS' opening band, Public Image Limited.

Robyn Hitchcock is about to begin a U.S. tour. This is one not to miss, folks. Hitchcock and his band, The Egyptians, will be in Philadelphia April 4 in support of Hitchcock's new album Globe of Frogs (see last issue's review). In addition, Hitchcock's friend and longtime fan Peter Buck (of R.E.M.) will be playing guitar on the tour. The Canadian band Grapes of Wrath will open. Since the Philly show falls over Easter break, we graciously provide these addtional dates: The Beacon, NY, March 31; Trenton/City Gardens, NJ, April 2.

Next week: Why we hate MTV, new records reviewed, other fun stuff.

HOW'S YOUR LOVE LIFE?

INTRODUCING:
INTER-COLLEGIATE PERSONAL ADS

RIGHT NOW THIS AD IS APPEARING IN MANY COLLEGE NEWSPAPERS SUCH AS PRINCETON, PENN STATE, TEMPLE, RUTGERS, PENN, ETC.

Inter-Collegiate Personals provides a simple means for students from different universities to meet one another. For $25 you will receive ALL of the current listings, PLUS the insertion of your own ad.

SAMPLE LISTING

SEX: F AGE: 18 RACE: W HEIGHT: 5'2 WEIGHT: 105 HAIR: Blond EYES: Blue COLLEGE: Penn MAJOR: Pre-med HOMETOWN: Phila
Interests include poetry, crafts and physical fitness. Would like to meet sensitive, athletic male. WRITE TO: PN-0001

Each listing is assigned a unique code to which others may write. The letter is then forwarded to the student. All names and addresses are kept confidential.

Send $25 along with your ad. Include your sex, age, race, height, weight, hair and eye colors, college, major, hometown, school and interests (up to 100 words). Also include your school and home addresses and phone numbers for our records.

SEND THE ABOVE TO:
INTER-COLLEGIATE PERSONALS
DUBLIN HALL, SUITE 200
1777 WALTON ROAD
BLUE BELL, PA. 19422
(215) 628-4719

Friendly Floppies . . .

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

THE FAERY TALE ADVENTURE ••••½ MICROILLUSIONS AMIGA, C64/128, GS, IBM

The Faery Tale Adventure is the best adventure game to come along in a while. Combining a strong story line, large geography to explore, beautiful graphics and simple-to-use interface, the game truly brings together all that adventurers love. In The Faery Tale Adventure, you guide three brothers through the land of Holm to defeat a necromancer and retrieve a talisman that protects their village. A unique aspect of game play is that you only switch to a different brother when the one currently in use dies.

No keyboard entry at all is required for The Faery Tale Adventure. All commands are entered via pull-down menus and icons, even movement commands (a compass is used). The graphics present an overhead offset three-dimensional view laden with clear and colorful images. With a large area to explore (144 by 100 screens), you cover all types of terrain and never get bored.

TORCHBEARER ••• FREE SPIRIT SOFTWARE C64/128

Torchbearer is a small graphic adventure with an overhead view of the landscape you travel through, similar to the Ultima games. All commands are entered through single keystrokes and the game is small in size in comparison to others in its genre. Still, Torchbearer captivates the player and soon you will find that an hour or two have gone by while searching for the Torch of Truth in the land of Pastoria.

It seems that Talis Vaultheart, an evil wizard, stole the Torch and hid it in Pastoria. You have to defeat Vaultheart and recover the Torch to save the land. Choices of races include: human, sprading, gnome, dwarf, gardkin and elf. Choices of profession include: bar keeper, blacksmith, farmer, locksmith, merchant, philosopher, physician, tailor and trapper. Choose your race and profession wisely to gain the best skills with which to tackle this entertaining guest.

DEJA VU •••• MINDSCAPE C64/128, MAC, IBM, ST. AMIGA, AP

Deja Vu is subtitled "A Nightmare Comes True." Nothing better describes this graphic mystery/adventure from Mindscape. You wake up in a bathroom stall with no knowledge of who you are or where you are. The police and the mob are both after you as a suspect for murder. Throughout the game, the goal is to discover who really was the murderer and find out your true identity. This is a tough game, but it is made easier to play with the unique icon/menu-gased system.

In Deja Vu, all commands are entered by clicking on appropriate boxes at the top of the screen. There are eight of these boxes (examine, open, close, speak, operate, go, hit and consume) and some prompt for other information. What makes Deja Vu unique are the ability to click on objects in the picture window to select and manipulate them and the great graphics.

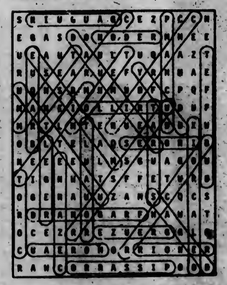
ARKANOID ••••½ DISCOVERY SOFTWARE INTERNATIONAL AMIGA

Arkanoid is simply the best arcade translation that I have ever seen for any computer. That is a very strong statement to make, but Arkanoid warrants it. Toted as the No. 1 game in the arcades for at least two years, it takes the concept of destroying brick walls with a paddle and ball from the arcade classic breakout and gives it an entirely new direction.

In Arkanoid, the paddle is called a Vaus and the title comes from a ship you must save by clearing 32 rounds of space wall configurations. Besides the walls, four types of moving obstacles descend and move all around the screen. Also, power capsules come out of walls as they are destroyed by the ball and do such things as give you fire power and extra lives and slow down ball speed. Graphics duplicate the arcade game, but there should be more rounds.

EMERALD MINE ••••½ CONSTELLATION SOFTWARE AMIGA

Created in Germany by Kingsoft, Emerald Mine borrows game concept from the Boulder Dash games and makes it better. In this arcade-type maze game, you must move your on-screen character through 80 screens to collect (by walking over) smaragds, diamonds, dynamite and keys.



The keys open up other areas of the maze and the dynamite is useful against the various foes in the maze. The smaragds and diamonds add to your score and you can not exit a maze until a certain amount are collected. Some of the creatures encountered in the various game levels are: robots, flyers, bugs and eaters. All are harmful to the touch.

Emerald Mine has impressive graphics and uses the full power of the Amiga to present itself, from sound effects to detail. The game will never bore you, keeps a high score list on the disk and allows multiple players.

FEUD ••••½ MASTERTRONIX C64/128, AMIGA

Feud is a very easy game to play and requires almost no commands, yet still manages to present a challenging graphics adventure that deals with only one element — magic. Playing Feud consists of collecting herbs, mixing herbs in a cauldron to create a spell and casting spells — nothing more. The goal is to beat your brother Leanoric, an ill-tempered wizard, in a feud of magic. As Learic, you travel the land, collecting the ingredients you need for the spells.

A map is included with the game, as well as a list of the spells and the ingredients needed to activate the spells. The only thing left to learn is how to use the spells — this will take practice. The graphics are great in Feud and the game is refreshing in a software world overpopulated by a lot of games that are pretty much the same.

! Celebrate !
Graduation or End of the Semester with a trip to CANCUN
departing Philadelphia:
May 14* - 7 nights ONLY $599
or
May 23* - 4 nights ONLY $479
Includes airfare, accommodations at beach front hotel, transfers and more
BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
Call your local travel agency:
An Invitation to Travel, Inc.
Rosemont Plaza Apts. #221
Rosemont, PA 19010
525-1521
*Many other departures and destinations available.

Entertainment Calendar

The Spectrum
Pattison Place
March 19, 20 — Harlem Globetrotters

Art

Philadelphia Art Alliance
251 S. 18th St.
March 21 — Professional Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts' lecture
March 22 — "Crunch"
March 24 — Guitarist Waco Smith

Philadelphia Museum of Art
Parkway at 26th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.
215-763-8100
March 18-27 — "Recent Acquisitions II:" Prints, drawings and photographs before 1900

Philadelphia Museum of Art
Parkway at 26th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.
215-763-8100
Through March 27 — "Recent Acquisitions II:" Prints, drawings and photographs before 1900

Music

Ambler Cabaret
March 18 — Beru Revue/Amazon
March 19 — The Stand with The Code/Problem Child
March 22 — Secret Cities
March 25 — Room 43
March 24 — Skam

23 East Cabaret
23 E. Lancaster Ave.
Ardmore, Pa.
215-896-6420
March 18 — Flamin' Caucasians/Blue Rocks
March 19 — Bricklin/Hoi Polloi
March 22 — WKVU College Night
March 24 — Billy Price and the Keystone Rhythm Band

Theater

Annenberg Center
3680 Walnut Street
Philadelphia, Pa.
215-898-6791
March 16-April 3 — Julius Caesar

Band offers unique 'morality'

By JEFF GILLIES
Assistant Entertainment Editor

Guns N' Roses, the newest success on the heavy metal circut, are currently enjoying the attention their debut album Appetite For Distruction is receiving. Although the album has been out for a few months, only now has it begun to reach the level of success of which it is worthy.

Guns N' Roses are loud, offensive, sick and vulgar, with a tongue-in-cheek outlook on sex, alcohol and fame. However, despite all these typical qualities, Guns N' Roses are different. How? The answer is simple: listen to the album. There are very few, if any, rock and roll cliches, or stolen guitar riffs in the music. It is fresh, overflowing with guitars from start to finish, and filled with powerful drums.

Guns N' Roses have a very distinct sound that makes them difficult to compare to other bands. They are sort of a cross between the rhythm and writing style of Aerosmith and the energy and spirit of Motley Crue back in the days of "Live Wire."

Guns N'Roses are loud, offensive, sick and vulgar, with a tongue-in-cheek outlook on sex, alcohol and fame.

Appetite For Destruction opens with the primal screams of singer W. Axl Rose, as "Welcome to the Jungle" kicks in. The peak level meter on the stereo slowly rises to the top and rarely moves for the rest of the album.

"Welcome to the Jungle" is presently the #1 requested video on MTV, and is perhaps the best song on the album. The rapid-fire guitar and some of the fastest drumming since Neil Peart of Rush compliment the unique and brash voice of Axl.

For those easily offended, beware; on Appetite For Destruction nothing is sacred. The obscenities fly and the band takes some not-so-moral views on sex, drugs and even drinking and driving. The lyrics rival those of even the most lewd and lascivious heavy metal bands such as W.A.S.P.

"It's So Easy" and "Out Ta Get Me" are particularly obscene. "Mr. Brownstone" looks at drug addiction with the line, "I used to do a little, but a little wouldn't do it, so a little got more and more."

Although these lyrics are prevalent on most of the tracks, there are some good, clean songs that could probably level the house if played loud enough.

"My Michelle" is one of the best songs, and steers clear of the dirty language. Guitarists Slash and Izzy Stradlin' throw out a flurry of notes that seem never ending and suddenly the pace slows down again.

"Paradise City" is an excellent song with a slightly slower and softer tone than the rest of Appetite For Destruction. Although it flows slowly, the lightning-quick guitars emerge toward the end.

Surprisingly, the band even shows some blues influence in "Anything Goes," an overtly sexual song. "Thinking About You," "Sweet Child O' Mine," and "You're Crazy" are some of the other songs that leave a favorable impression on the listener, except for the lyrics, which is also the case on "Nightrain."

If Appetite For Destruction is any indication of the future of Guns N' Roses, this band will be going places. The heavy metal scene has been so predictable lately, that a new face in the crowd is more than welcome. Make no mistake, Guns N' Roses has enormous talent and should be around for a long time to come.

"BEAUTIFULLY EFFECTIVE...One very special, curious, all-seeing child whom we watch as he goes through the process of growing up. EUZHAN PALCY IS A NEW WRITER-DIRECTOR OF EXCEPTIONAL ABILITIES."
—Vincent Canby, NEW YORK TIMES

"EUZHAN PALCY BRINGS SO MUCH WARMTH TO HER FILM."
—Janet Maslin, NEW YORK TIMES

"IT IS TO BE SEEN AND SAVORED."—Andrew Sarris, VILLAGE VOICE

"A STUNNING AND POWERFUL FILM."—Molly Haskell, Ms. MAGAZINE

Connelly Cinema

7 p.m. March 22

Sugar Cane Alley
(Rue Cases Nègres)

a film by Euzhan Palcy based on the novel by Joseph Zobel starring Darling Legitimus, Garry Cadenat, Routo Seck
a co-production of Dimanche – Diffusion – Soprofilms

Sponsored By Office of International Studies

The International Fraternity of
Phi Gamma Delta
Welcomes the Founding
Pledge Class of the Delta
Colony of Phi Gamma Delta Go Fiji!

Patrick Blewitt
Matt Clemens
Chris Cunniff
Bill Dion
Michael Dudrear
Jack Egan
Eric Gangloff
Kenneth Gallen
Jeffrey Gostyla
Michael Graban
Richard Gray
Kenneth Heiser
Christopher Hines
Stephen Kane
Jim Kapp
Erik Karanik
Stephen Lewis
Steve Luksa
Conrad Mayer
Michael Mayer
Scott Mckessy
Eric Moulaison
Gregg Pacchiana
Neil Parachini
George Pav
Christopher Pepe
Michael Petruzzi
Douglas Pizzirusso
John Poe
Victor Pumo
Charlie Ryan
William Solari
Scott Sprauer
Brian Tierney
Edward White
Mark Zifchak
Mike Zifchak

'Hairspray' is in a class by itself

By VICKI Di STEFANO
Staff Reporter

Avant garde filmmaker John Waters has once again released a weird and wild comedy that is in a class by itself. Satirical "Hairspray" is the antidote for anyone who has ever gagged while viewing a fluffy teen flick.

Baltimore in 1962 is the backdrop for the wacky, tacky tale of bouffant-haired Tracy Turnblad (Ricki Lake), a porky high school girl who becomes an overnight sensation. Tracy skyrockets to fame via an appearance on the Corny Collins Show, a locally televised American Bandstand-style dance party that is just as goofy as its title implies. Complications accompany Tracy's sudden success. Tracy's teased tresses incur the wrath of her mother Edna (Divine) and her principal, who is so infuriated by Tracy's "hair don't" that he exiles her to a homeroom for the mentally impaired.

Intense rivalry develops between Tracy and the Corny Collins teen queen, Amber Von Tussle (Coleen Fitzpatrick), when Tracy steals both the spotlight and the boyfriend belonging to the other girl. Amber is obnoxious, brainless and conceited. She is also the prototype cutesy teen movie protagonist; it is a blast to watch her receive her comeuppance from such an atypically glamorous heroine as plump, plucky Tracy. Velma Von Tussle (Debbie Harry) caters to Amber as the ultimate stage mother who resorts to donning surgical gloves to remove a popularity-threatening blemish from her daughter's chin.

Amber's father Franklin (Sonny Bono) is the Crazy Eddie of the amusement park industry. His polyester wardrobe does not merely make a fashion statement; it does it at the top of its lungs. Franklin shares his wife and daughter's determination to squelch Tracy and her career.

Amidst these threats and additional obstacles, Tracy and her friends are seriously concerned about integration. Black music played on Corny Collins is enjoyed by the kids and exploited by the adults, yet the dance halls and television shows permit only white participants. Aided by an interracial couple, who at one point dress as nuns to escape detection, Tracy, her boyfriend and their supporters create chaos by solving the segregation issue with hilarity and style.

"Hairspray" is the eleventh film written and directed by John Waters, the master of mayhem and uncommonly bizarre movies. Waters' other comedies include "Lust in the Dust," a Western spoof, the cult favorite "Pink Flamingos" and "Polyester," for which theatres equipped viewers with scratch and sniff cards simulating on screen scents and smells, a gimmick known as "Odorama."

Waters' comic genius is reflected by his casting. The role of Edna was specially written for Divine, the transvestite actor who is Waters' high school friend from Baltimore, the setting of all his movies.

Waters has starred Divine, whose given name is Harris Glenn Milstead, several times previously in his films. Divine once again provokes laughter with the outrageous, deadpan portrayal of a sensuous, 300-pound woman. The minor male role of hardboiled Arvin Hodgepile is also played by Divine. "Hairspray" is Divine's last and arguably best film; the 42-year-old actor died of a heart attack on March 7.

Lake's endearing portrayal of scale-tipping Tracy will charm anyone who prefers hot fudge sundaes to nautilus workouts. Lake dominates the amusing finale with her amiable personality and cockroach emblazoned ballgown.

Epitomizing bad taste, Harry and Bono are delightfully rancid as the Von Tussles, a match made in hell. It is obvious to witnesses of Bono's various show days that he was typecast and possibly provided his own costumes.

Ric Ocasek and Pia Zadora have cameo roles as a beatnik couple who are typical of the late sixties mod faction but alien to the social mores of 1962. They influence Tracy's crowd to disregard convention and take action to support their beliefs.

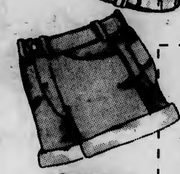
Waters himself appears in the movie as a psychiatrist who belongs in a mental ward. The doctor tortures Tracy's best friend with shock treatments and restraining devices in an attempt to deprogram her desire for an "undesirable" young man.

"Hairspray" is an entertaining comedy for those who enjoy sophisticated off-the-wall humor.

Tammy Bakker sings!(?)

By KATHRYN QUIGLEY
Entertainment Editor

Just when you thought life could not possibly get any more exciting, Tammy Faye Bakker releases a single. Bakker is the wife of de-televised evangelist Jim Bakker.



The song, "The Legend of Jim and Tammy" shows that Tammy Faye can sing about as well as she can apply make-up. "The Legend of Jim and Tammy" is kind of a country-western rap song about how Jerry Falwell is the cause of all Bakker's problems. In the song, Tammy Faye sings that at first, Falwell promised to help them avoid a supposed take-over plan by Jimmy Swaggart. (Now how can that have been true, since we now know that Swaggart was very ... busy these last few years). But instead of helping, Tammy Faye sings that Falwell "... at once began the deeds the people would never forget."

The flip side is a song called "Farewell, We Love You." Tammy Faye sings to her P.T.L. (People That Love) to not "... give up till heaven." Mere words can not describe the feeling these songs and Tammy Faye's singing evoke. One thing is apparent however, Tammy Faye should not quit her day job to become a singer.

Why not dress for a different kind of success this Summer?

O.K., maybe volunteering for a week in Appalachia won't get you into Who's Who in Business, but it will make you feel pretty good about yourself.

We're the Glenmary Home Missioners, a group that provides single, Catholic men and women with the opportunity to share their good fortune with others. If you would like to spend a week helping out in Appalachia this Summer, fill out the coupon below and return it. You'll work hard, but fringe benefits like new friends and self-satisfaction will make it all worthwhile.

GLENMARY home missioners

Tell me more!
I'm interested in learning about:
_____ Men's Week _____ Women's Week
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Birth _____ Phone _____
Month Day Year (Area Code)
College _____ 08/88

Fill in the above coupon and send to: Glenmary Volunteer Program, P.O. Box 465618, Cincinnati, OH 45246-5618, or call 513/874-8900.

Classified and Personal Advertising

CLASSIFIEDS

Tennis Instructors for city youth program July/August. Car and experience necessary, excellent salary and gas allowance; call program director for an application: 636-5363.

Government Seized Homes from $1. (U repair). Foreclosures and tax-delinquent homes. For current repo list call (refundable) 1-518-459-3546, ext. H-6185, 24 hours.

Waiter/Waitress — Full and part-time shifts in busy, casual restaurant. Must have experience, be well-groomed, quick to smile, and enjoy working with people. Call 646-0477. Ask for Donna or Mary Beth.

Walk to school from 2 bedroom fully furnished Radnor House Condo, air conditioned, balcony, completely remodeled, one and one-half yrs. old, available for occupancy July 1. Inquirers call 201-488-7688.

Babysitter needed. Two to three days per week, beginning May 16, within walking distance of the University. Salary negotiable. Call 525-3013 after 6 p.m.

Help Wanted — Coed overnight camp in Pa. seeks staff for summer '88. Waterfront, riding, crafts, nature, arts & crafts, sailing and assistant cook. Call 941-8935.

Camp counselor jobs in the Poconos. Great recreational staff needed. Tennis, swimming, lifesaving, Ropes course, gymnastics, archery, canoeing, riflery, crafts, and more. Salary $1,000 per season. Phone (800) 443-3564 or (215) 667-6212. Camp Nockamixon, Cassville, PA 16623. Camp Nockamixon, Cassville, PA 16623. Female counselors and unit leaders also needed. Call Mr. Mike at 215-667-6212 anytime or call after 5 p.m. 667-4565.

Manpower Temporary Services. Call 265-6300. All skills needed immediately: office and light industrial. Enjoy your summer with extra money in your pocket. King of Prussia and surrounding areas.

Summer opportunities. College students: great summer job opportunity one hour from New York City. Girls' residence camp seeks program, nature, and arts and crafts specialists, counselors, waterfront staff, cooks, nurse and maintenance personnel. Competitive salary, benefits, plus room and board. Contact: Camp Director, RD #3, Box 80, Bemus Point, N.Y. 14712 or call (716) 386-8465.

Bus people and wait people wanted for day and evening shifts. Top salary, one mile from campus. Apply at Cornerstone Mill, Haverford and Conestoga Roads, Bryn Mawr. 527-2070.

Summer jobs: $6.10 per hour or commission. Advertising sales. No experience necessary. We will train. Car necessary. Call Bill Deeds at (800) 344-8766 for details and application. Mabry Marketing Group, Ltd.

Condo for sale or rent, Radnor House, two bedrooms, furnished. Walk to campus, air conditioning, pool. Call (201) 831-8288 immediately.

Make up to $25,000 this year! RECRUIT students on campus for well established company. Flexible hours, part-time. Call (800) 592-2355 ext. 200 for more details. Outstanding opportunity for motivated individuals. Call Maureen or Suzanne today 667-0600.

Looking for a technical assistant. Must be able to troubleshoot on Apple 2E's. Work study preferred, but not required. 25 hours per week during performance weeks. Nights and weekends. $4 per hour. Villanova Theatre Vasey 108.

College students: earn $6 to $10 per hour part-time. We are looking for bright, enthusiastic, friendly individuals to service our current customers nationwide. Flexible evening and Saturday shifts available. For immediate interview call: 527-4884.

Word Processing, resumes, reports, manuscripts, letters, etc. $3.50 per page, double-spaced - $5.50 per page, single-spacing. Resumes, $6 per page. Call after 5 p.m. 687-5997. Ask for Vera.

Homeworkers wanted! Top pay! College Industries, 121 24th Ave., N.W. Suite 222, Norman, OK 73069.

Hiring — Government jobs — your area. Many immediate openings without waiting list or fee. $15,000-$68,998. Call (602) 838-8885, ext. 8687.

Paralegalist wanted for film classes. No experience necessary, will train. $4.10 an hour. Freshmen preferred, communication arts department, 646-4780.

Radnor House one-bedroom air-conditioned condominium. Ninth floor, park view, $630 per month plus utilities. Call Colleen at 539-7030.

Now hiring — Well-established Devon-based corporation now interviewing for part-time personnel. We seek arts, business and economics majors to work commercial accounts receivable and perform credit analysis. Your degree is not enough — supplement your resume with business experience in the most respected company in our industry. We need bright, aggressive individuals to fill several vacancies in our staff quickly. Just look at the benefits: no experience necessary, 15 to 20 flexible hours per week, salary $8 per hour plus bonuses. Interested? Contact Steve Shaver between 1-5 p.m. today to arrange an interview. The number is 687-4801.

Professional Resume Preparation — write, edit, update, print, copy and type. Same-day service. U.S. Typewriter and Resume Center, King of Prussia Plaza, King of Prussia. 265-7666. Hours: Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-9:30 p.m., Sunday 12-5 p.m. It is never too early!

The United States Marine Corps Judge Advocate Corps is looking for a few adventurous, physically sound law students for a no-obligation summer internship leading to a commission as an Officer of Marines. Good pay, travel, promotion and immediate courtroom experience in criminal, labor, contract, civil and environment law, plus the challenge of measuring up to the Corps' exciting standards. To learn more, call 388-5568 and ask for Captain Farr.

Big Sip, Heaven was a helluva place! Thanks for a great T.G. — KAO.

PERSONALS

Hole LXAI, We are so psyched to continue the party with you! The T.G. tonight will be quite a fiesta! Get ready to do slammers! Love — the Sisters of Delta Delta Delta.

Dear Mr. Stim, Welcome back! I missed you so much! Next year we're going together! I love you! Mrs. Slim.

Denise, Thanks for being such a great tour director. We had a blast! The "B" group.

Computer, Thanks for all the laughs and thrills! See you in a short while. The bunny Maniacs — Lisa, Jane, Danielle and Stef.

Hey Dopey, Had a blast taking care of you last week — but then again I always have TTOMIL when I'm with you! L&K, T.

Jim, Thanks for brightening an otherwise boring week. Hope to spend much more time together. Perhaps my London Broil can match your Chicken Cacciatore. Love, Me.

Hole Kimmer, Bridgit and Anne, We Did Cancun! Bueno, Bueno, Bueno, Bueno, Bueno! Su Amiga Natalia.

TKO, Looking forward to bumping "elbos" with you this Saturday! — KAO.

To Lisa, Jane, Danielle and Stef, Thanks for the great week. I loved the skiing, pitchers at Steve's, Thumper's and A.P. Master Bunny Mania is sweeping the campus. Love, The Captain.

Hey Barbados — Here's to rum punch, banana boats, bruises, Mr. Stik, the Jolly Roger, Fiesta, taking out the U. Penn offensive line, causing bar fights, and of course yacking! The Bank's for you!

TONIGHT!

ACS
WKVU

DANCE -A-THON

for Cystic Fibrosis

March 18, 8 p.m. – March 19, 8 a.m.

Day Hop: Dougherty Hall

Cystic Fibrosis Foundation

Donation: $6 per person includes:
food, contests, prizes and entertainment (featuring Tier 7)

Tickets available in 215 Dougherty Hall or C.C. Lobby (9 a.m.-4 p.m.)

With April 1st fast approaching,
Joe Nocella needs no coaching,
Although he may be crying,
It's not from a lack of trying,
Best of Luck on your test,
Hope you succeed with your quest!

"THE 122 CREW"

Graduate Nurses
LIGHT UP YOUR FUTURE with
1988 NCLEX Success

Announcing Two New Courses for the BOARDS

RN / MCP
• PREP • PHARMACOLOGY

- Start with an "Exam-Think" mode.
- Comprehensive learning experience.
- Best value tuition!
- PREP Money back guarantee!

The NCLEX Advantage

RN is a trademark of Medical Economics Company Inc. registered in the U.S. Patent & Trademark Office

June 4, 11, 18

Mary Ellen Obreiter
Nurse Recruiter
734-4586

Where tradition & innovation meet.

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
SUMMER SESSIONS '88

GRADUATE and UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

BUSINESS
ENGINEERING
MATHEMATICS

COMPUTER SCIENCE
NATURAL SCIENCE
LIBRARY SCIENCE

LANGUAGES
COUNSELING
EDUCATION
HUMANITIES
THE ARTS

DAY and EVENING CLASSES

SESSION I — Wednesday, June 1 to Wednesday, June 29

SESSION II — Friday, July 1 to Monday, August 1

Wednesday, June 1 to Monday, August 1

CONTINUOUS REGISTRATION until the day before each session begins.

REGISTER NOW!

For summer Bulletin, write:
SUMMER SESSIONS OFFICE
Or, if you prefer, call:
(215) 645-4220

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

connelly center
villanova university

THE CONNELLY CENTER BOARD OF DIRECTORS

ANNOUNCING THE IMMEDIATE OPENINGS FOR TWO STUDENT POSITIONS

One position is for an on-campus resident and one position is for an at-large representative, both to serve two year terms from June 1, 1988 to May 31, 1990.

The Connelly Center Board of Directors is composed of 13 members. These members represent Villanova students, faculty, staff, administration, trustees and alumna/alumnus. The board develops policies and acts as the guiding force for certain aspects of the Connelly Center. Its purposes and responsibilities are to develop policies and recommend procedures for the use of the facility, conduct programs and aid in evaluating the Connelly Center's overall operations. This is done in a manner consonant with the interest of Villanova and in keeping with policies set forth by the Trustees of Villanova University.

These two vacant student positions on the Board are established through a petitioning process. Petitions are evaluated by the Board's standing committee on nominations. Students, faculty and staff of Villanova University may petition for membership on the Connelly Center Board of Directors by obtaining an application in the Connelly Center Administrative Office located behind the Information Desk. Petitions must be returned to this office by Tuesday, March 29, 1988, for review by the nominations committee.

Student Government's coming to you with

VOTER REGISTRATION

March 20 Stanford, Moriarty, Delurey halls

March 21 Sullivan, Corr, Austin halls

March 22 Fedigan, St. Mary's halls

★ Look for us between 7 and 10:30 p.m. on your dorm's night.

★ If we miss you please come to Dougherty Hall 204 to register.

★ Have a vote in local, University-related issues!

Basketball

(Continued from page 32)

Kenny Wilson engineered two Wildcat upsets in the Big East Tournament.

the Wildcat win and propelled the Cats into the finals for the first time since 1982.

"We executed well and did what we were supposed to do," said an elated Massimino. "The players deserve all the credit."

Plansky was again 'Nova's high scorer with 25 points. West added 16 and Greis chipped in 14.

Despite their success in the first two games, the Wildcats ran out of gas in the final against Syracuse. The Cats were down by just five at halftime, but Sherman Douglas, Rony Seikaly and Co. pulled away in the second half for an 85-68 victory.

Stephen Thompson led the Orangemen with 25 points and Douglas poured in 24 as Syracuse captured its second Big East Tournament title. West scored 25 and Plansky finished with 15 for the Wildcats.

Searching?

ARE YOU SEARCHING?
WE ARE, TOO . . .
Searching for young
Catholic men, like you . . .
To live and work with the poor . . .
To share their sorrows and joys . . .
To care for the needy little ones . . .
To bring Christ into their lives . . .
To join the Columban Missionary Priesthood . . .
If you have a heart big enough,
JOIN US!

COLUMBAN FATHERS
MISSIONARIES
in ASIA and LATIN AMERICA

FOR MORE INFORMATION,
WRITE OR CALL:
Father Michael O'Loughlin
Vocation Director
Columban Fathers
St. Columbans, NE 68056
(402) 291-1920

Name _____
Street _____
City State Zip
School/College Age
Phone: ( ) _____

Wildcat grapplers falter in finals

By MONICA BYRNE
Staff Reporter

It has been a very tough wrestling season, filled with ups and downs. Recently, the Villanova wrestling squad finished up its 1987-88 season with Eastern Regionals held at Edinboro University, Pennsylvania. Unfortunately, the Cats did not do as well as expected.

'Nova tallied a mere 17 points to place 13 out of 16 teams. According to assistant coach Andre Metzger, "the team didn't get a lot of respect."

The younger wrestlers, including freshman Lyndon Campbell, who was seeded first in his weight class, had very rough performances. Disappointed that Campbell was knocked out after his first round and consolation first round matches. Metzger emphatically stated that "you can't expect freshmen to hold up the team all the time; you can't count on a freshman to carry the team emotionally unless there are sophomores, juniors and seniors to help."

No doubt about it, Villanova is a very young team. Yet, it does have a lone upperclassman who starred at Easterns. Junior Cat Tom Rogers won four of five matches to secure a third-place finish at 177 pounds. Rogers finished a fine season at 19-6 with four pins.

Overall, certain individuals had a great year. Campbell, who, according to coach Metzger, "is still growing" had an exceptional 22-3-2 season with six pins, despite his unfortunate ending. Tad Thormodsgaard finished strong at 15-9-1 and Al Re III at 12-14-1.

Metzger liked what he saw this year and said he's "very happy with the kids that came through. We have a lot of good kids but those who got hurt have to learn how to work through their injuries." Since he still competes, he definitely realizes that "you need a motivator and it's a big commitment."

Looking ahead, Metzger seemed very optimistic. The Cats are apparently very excited about next year and are already "starting to train hard and will have an extensive post-season workout which will carry through the summer."

'Nova swims to third in Easterns

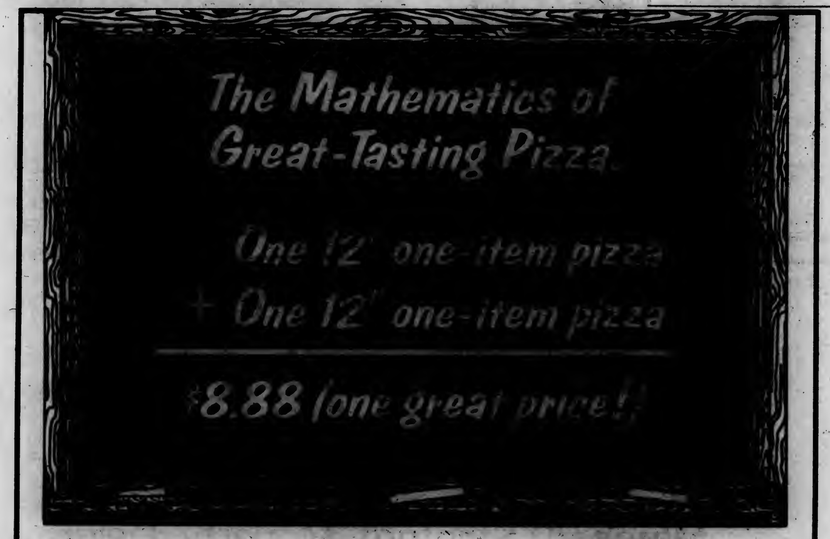
By KARLA BECKNER
Staff Reporter

The Villanova women's swim team followed up their second-place Big East finish with a strong third-place showing at the Eastern Championships held at West Virginia University in Morgantown, West Va., Feb. 25-27.

West Virginia University took the title with a total 701 points. Duke University followed in second place with a 580 score and Villanova brought home the third-place trophy with 539 points.

Sophomore Danielle Mackey took the only individual title for the Wildcats with her win in the 400-yard individual medley. Her time of 4:38.45 set a new Eastern Championship and West Virginia University Natatorium record, surpassing the 4:39.93 time set by Maria Alvarez of West Virginia in 1980. Mackey also placed third in the 200-yard individual medley.

Mary Mayfield set a new school record of 2:27.23 in the 200-yard breaststroke, beating her own record of 2:27.85 set at the Big East Championships this year. She finished second in the event.



Other team standouts included Laurel Fournier, who placed second in the 100-yard freestyle, third in the 200-yard freestyle and fourth in the 500-yard freestyle, and Liz Kennedy, who finished second in the 200-yard butterfly. Mayfield also captured a second in the 100-yard breaststroke.

In the relays, the team of Mackey, Mayfield, Teri Messenger and Fournier took a second in the 200-yard medley relay. Mackey, Mayfield, Kennedy and Fournier teamed to place second in the 400-yard medley and Mayfield, Kennedy, Messenger and Fournier captured a second in the 200-yard freestyle relay.

The Wildcats closed out their season with a 6-3 record.

(File Photo)
Danielle Mackey

Nothing adds up like the great taste of Domino's Pizza®. In fact, we guarantee it. If you're not happy with your pizza for any reason, we'll bring you another pizza or a full refund.* We also guarantee to deliver your hot, delicious pizza in 30 minutes or less. If we're late, you get $3.00 off your order.

So what are you waiting for? Call Domino's Pizza today!

*Check your local store for guarantee details

Call us.
Wayne
293-0980
128 W. Lancaster

Open for lunch
11 AM-1 AM Sun.-Thurs.
11 AM-2 AM Fri. & Sat.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
© 1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE.

Double deal
Present this coupon to receive two 12" regular one-item pizzas for just $8.88.
One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable. Expires: 4/7/88
Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

Dinner for four
Present this coupon to receive a 16" large two-item pizza and four 16 oz. bottles of Coke® for only $9.90.
One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable. Expires: 4/7/88
Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

$2.00 off
Present this coupon to receive $2.00 off any 16" large two-item pizza.
One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable. Expires: 4/7/88
Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

Players earn awards

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

Senior forward Lisa Angelotti has been named Big East Conference Player of the Year, and freshman guard Sandy Litkenhaus has been named to the Big East all-Freshman team.

Angelotti averaged 19.8 points and 8.4 rebounds for the Cats this year and was also named first team all-Big East and all-Big Five. Litkenhaus averaged 3.2 points and 1.6 assists per game and appeared in all 28 games.

For Angelotti, the award was a reflection of the success of the team.

"I was surprised and happy to win the award. I really think of it as a great team honor. Not many people thought highly of us this year and we went out and had a great year.

"My teammates played great this year. There's no way I could have won it without them. I'm really proud of this team and the way they played," said Angelotti.

This marks the fourth straight season that this award has gone to a Villanova player. Former Wildcat star Shelly Pennefather won the award the previous three years.

"Playing with Shelly for three years was great," she continued, "because she was such a great player and a great role model.

"It would be foolish to say I didn't think about this award before the season. I set it in my mind as a goal, but once the season started, I put it behind me. I'm sure in a few years, I'll be able to look back on this and really appreciate it."

Litkenhaus, who has had her share of ups and downs in her first year, was both surprised and pleased with her all-Freshman team honors.

"It was a surprise and I'm really happy about it. I knew it would be hard adjusting to his (Coach Perretta's) system. I was hoping just to play.

"It's been rough, but on the whole, it has been worth it. I enjoyed this season and I'm glad I came here."

Freshman guard Sandy Litkenhaus

B-ball honors

First Team

Mark Bryant	F
Derrick Coleman	F
Charles Smith	C
Sherman Douglas	G
Dana Barros	G

Second Team

Jerome Lane	F
Shelton Jones	F
Rony Seikaly	C
Charlie Smith	G
DOUG WEST	G

Third Team

Cliff Robinson	F
MARK PLANSKY	F
TOM GREIS	C
Steve Wright	F
Michael Porter	G

Player of the Year- Charles Smith, Pittsburgh

Freshman of the Year- Sean Miller, Pittsburgh

Defensive Player of the Year- GARY MASSEY, VILLANOVA

Final standings

* Not including tournament games

Men

	BIG EAST W	BIG EAST L	Overall PCT	Overall W	Overall L
Pittsburgh	12	4	.750	22	5
Syracuse	11	5	.688	22	8
Georgetown	9	7	.563	19	8
Villanova	9	7	.563	19	11
St. John's	8	8	.500	17	10
Seton Hall	8	8	.500	20	11
Boston College	6	10	.375	15	12
Providence	5	11	.313	11	16
Connecticut	4	12	.250	14	13

Women

	BIG EAST W	BIG EAST L	PCT	OVERALL W	OVERALL L
Syracuse	13	3	.813	20	7
Villanova	11	5	.688	20	7
St. John's	10	6	.625	18	9
Boston College	10	6	.625	16	10
Connecticut	9	7	.563	17	10
Providence	7	9	.438	13	14
Pittsburgh	5	11	.313	13	14
Seton Hall	4	12	.250	9	18
Georgetown	3	13	.188	7	20

COME MEET OUR NEXT UNITED STATES SENATOR

Villanova students, faculty and friends are cordially invited to the grand opening of Professor John Logue's U.S. Senate campaign headquarters on March 20 at 1-3 p.m.

The headquarters is located at 821 South 11th St. in Philadelphia. Dr. Logue will be available to speak with you.

Our office will be open to the public throughout this campaign. Everyone is encouraged to stop in and visit.

Needed: A campus coordinator to arrange volunteers at V.U. for the John Logue for U.S. Senate campaign. Must be gregarious and willing to organize, schedule and carry out an assortment of assignments during the course of the campaign. More than one person may be needed.

Needed: Typists to prepare letters to be sent to persons, groups, and the media as part of our campaign.

Call 829-0755

Vote for John Logue for the U.S. Senate on April 26

527-4330
FAST FREE DELIVERY!!
WITH $6.00 MINIMUM ORDER
LA NOVA PIZZA COMPANY
789 Lancaster Ave. • Villanova, PA
Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 11 a.m.-1 a.m. • Fri. & Sat. 11 a.m.-3 a.m.
Owned and operated by Vincent Amendola, former owner of Vincent's Pizza in Overbrook
Considered the best Pizzeria in West Philadelphia
NOW HIRING

PIZZA	Large	Medium	Small
Cheese	6.15	4.75	3.75
Pepperoni	7.45	5.75	4.55
Mushrooms	7.45	5.75	4.55
Sausage	7.45	5.75	4.55
Ground Beef	7.45	5.75	4.55
Green Peppers	7.45	5.75	4.55
Onions	7.45	5.75	4.55
Anchovies	7.45	5.75	4.55
2nd topping	1.10	.80	.65
3rd topping	.90	.60	.50
Special	10.50	8.50	7.30
White Pizza w/ch.	6.15	4.75	3.75
Broccoli Cheese	7.45	5.75	4.55

Stromboli	Lg.	Sm.
Italian	8.85	5.75
Pepperoni	7.50	5.00

Sicilian
(one size only)
$10.50

Steaks Available Soon!!

HOAGIES

ITALIAN SPECIAL	3.30
(imported ham, genoa salami, capicolla, provolone cheese and prosciutto, topped with pure olive oil and spices)
ITALIAN HOAGIE	2.95
HAM & CHEESE	2.80
PROVOLONE & SALAMI	2.80
TUNA	3.10
TURKEY	3.30
ROAST BEEF	3.60
CHEESE	2.60

(All our meats are delicatessen quality!) Sandwiches also available HOT!!

Tax is not included

WITH THIS COUPON
$1.50 OFF
SICILIAN PIZZA!

MONDAY & WEDNESDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 pizza any size
Get 2 toppings for the price of 1!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

TUESDAY & THURSDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 large pizza
get two 16oz. sodas FREE!!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

FRIDAY, SATURDAY & SUNDAY
Buy a large pizza
with one topping
Get one FREE liter of soda
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

Rouse, Cosgrove lead VU past Delaware Tech

By STEVE KIRSCH
Staff Reporter

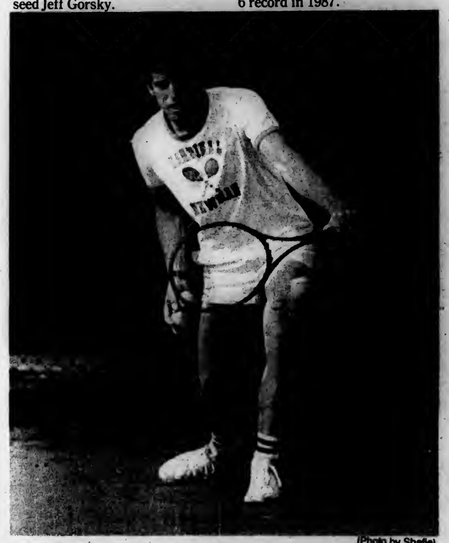
The Wildcat tennis team opened its 1988 season strongly as it routed Delaware Tech, 9-0, March 14. The Cats were led by No. 1-seed Mike Rouse, who defeated Tech's No. 1-seed Walter Brunett 6-0, 6-1.

Rouse, a junior from Haverford, also won the singles title at the Swarthmore College Winter Tennis Championships, which were held Feb. 19-21.

Rouse was Head Coach Dr. Robert Langran's No. 1-seed in both his freshman and sophomore years, so he has the experience necessary to play against the best which Villanova's opponents have to offer. In his victory at Swarthmore, Rouse defeated Christo Zewbit, South Africa's top collegiate singles player, 7-5 and 6-1. Rouse did not lose a set in five matches on his way to the title.

Also victorious at Delaware Tech were No. 2-seed Pete Leonard, No. 3-seed Mike Freedman, No. 4-seed Mike Loughman, No. 5-seed Dave Cosgrove and No. 6-seed Jeff Gorsky.

Leonard, a sophomore from Northport, N.Y., had little trouble handling Tech's Lin Bunting, winning 6-0, 6-0. Freedman, a junior from Schnectady, also won handily, 6-2, 6-0.



Loughman whitewashed his opponent, 6-0 and 6-0, while Cosgrove and Gorsky each won by identical 6-1, 6-0 scores.

Following the clean sweep in the singles matches, the Cats continued their winning ways in the three doubles matches. The No. 1-pair of Leonard and Freedman won easily, 6-0 and 6-1.

The No. 2-team of Gorsky and John O'Dwyer had a tougher time, but pulled out a 6-4, 6-4 victory. And finally, the No. 3-team of Cosgrove and Dave Rizzo won an 8-0 match to arrive at the final score of Villanova 9, Delaware Tech 0.

Langran pointed out that Delaware Tech is not one of 'Nova's toughest opponents and expected a tougher match the following day when Rider College visited. The Cats will also host King's College on March 20 at 1 p.m.

The Cats are coming off a 20-6 record in 1987.

(Photo by Shafie)
The Villanova tennis team opened their season with a victory over Delaware Tech.

Athletes of the Week

VICKY HUBER and MARK PLANSKY

This week Saco East has Co-Athletes of the Week. One is the women's track team's Vicky Huber — and the other is the men's basketball squad's Mark Plansky.

Huber, a junior, set an NCCA Tournament record in the mile with a time of 4:31.36. One hour later she won the 3000-meter race with a time of 9:05.57. The two victories made Huber, the first female ever to be a double winner in the NCAA Tournament.

Plansky, a senior, led 'Nova to second place in the Big East tournament. Against St. John's in the opening round, Plansky tossed in the winning three-point shot with under a minute to play. Plansky scored 19 points in the game.

In the following game, against Pitt, Plansky netted 25 points. In addition he was named the first team All Big East Tourney, the third team All Big East and was voted Big East Scholar-Athlete of the Year.

Saco East University Sportswear
JACKETS ● CAPS ● T-SHIRTS ● PROMOTIONAL ITEMS
1045 LANCASTER AVE., BRYN MAWR 527-4188

GreekPride
Quality Heavyweight Sweats
For your Fraternity & Sorority
Are now just a Free Phone Call Away
•No Minimum Order
•You pick the colors
TOLL FREE (800) 346-4441

EDUCATION
SWARTHMORE
ASSISTANT DEAN
Primary responsibilities: administration of housing, orientation, and residential education programs (including assignment of rooms for new and returning students); coordination of office publications. Other responsibilities include liaison work with Resident Assistants; leadership of committees; participation in policy formation in student life area.
Qualifications: Bachelor's degree (Master's preferred) with excellent interpersonal, organizational and computer skills. Previous postgraduate experience in student affairs administration helpful; direct familiarity with patterns of residential life at a small, highly selective, co-educational liberal arts college is essential. Position available as early as June, 1988.
Please send letter of application and resume by March 25th to: Assistant Director, Office of Personnel Services, SWARTHMORE COLLEGE, SWARTHMORE, PA 19081. EOE.

— BODY TONING —
BRYN MAWR BODY·TECH
The Newest in Fitness on the Main Line
A luxurious salon featuring 7 separate toning stations combining Isometric, Isotonic, High Repetition, Non-Strenuous exercise.
☐ Loss of Unwanted Inches
☐ Improved Circulation
☐ Increased Flexibility
☐ Reduced Cellulite
24 N. Merion Ave. Bryn Mawr
next to Illusions - 527-5555
COMPLIMENTARY VISIT
10% OFF FOR STUDENTS

(Photo by Orr)
After a 3-7 Florida swing, the baseball team looks to improve against Eastern competition.

Baseball falls to 3-7

By DOUG SCANCARELLA
Sports Editor

Villanova's baseball team is off to a disappointing start in 1988. The Wildcats returned from a 10-game Florida road trip with a 3-7 record. Despite the poor start, there is solace in the fact that the Cats started off slow last year and finished strong. That team suffered a 5-6 Florida road trip, but finished the season with a 35-18 record (Villanova's best record since 1908).

In the 1988 opener, third-year Head Coach George Bennett helped lead the Wildcats past the University of Pittsburgh, 8-4. 'Nova fell behind early, but a five-run sixth inning led to an impressive Wildcat comeback. 'Nova was led by Bob Coina, Bob McCreary and Mike Svanson, who collected two hits each.

The win went to ace reliever Rob McPartland, who came into the game when starter Mike Wismer, who pitched five solid innings, left with an elbow injury. Wismer is expected to miss about a month of the season.

The next day the Wildcats suffered their first defeat of the season when they were toppled by Eckert College, 4-0. Rafael Novoa, a junior, was on the mound for the Cats. Last year Novoa went 7-2 and was named to the Big East all-tournament team. Against Eckert, Novoa was still playing well as he held Eckert to just six hits. Novoa was still charged with the loss, however.

The following day the Wildcats tallied 21 hits as they hammered Ithaca College 15-6. Junior Garrett Clancy belted three doubles and one single while Dennis Booth pitched seven innings for the win.

After the impressive victory, disaster struck as Villanova dropped the following six games. Two homeruns, compliments of Clancy and Gary Scott, sought for naught as V.U. fell to ACC power Wake Forest, 8-3. St. Joseph's topped the Wildcats the following evening 5-3. Villanova stranded men on every base in the last inning as they dropped their second straight.

Next 'Nova lost two consecutive double-headers. On March 10 the Cats suffered a 4-3 heartbreaker at the hands of Ithaca, the squad they blew out two days earlier. Later that night VMI mauled the Wildcats 16-4. On March 11 IUP and Bradley defeated the Cats. Once again Villanova stranded men on base in critical times.

The Cats closed out the road trip with a win over Chicago State. Kevin Cain led 'Nova with two hits and three RBI's as the Wildcats outscored Chicago 6-1. Booth collected his second win

'Nova's record now stands at 3-7 but Bennett remains optimistic. "Our goal is to get to first ... period. I have confidence in this ball club. These kids know how to win."

Towson State trips lacrosse

By JOHN SWIFT
Statistician

The Villanova men's lacrosse team opened the 1988 campaign March 12 in the Philadelphia Classic against a strong Towson State University team. The Cats dropped a tough 14-8 decision in an excellent and well-played game.

Towson State has traditionally been one of the top lacrosse programs in the nation. In general, the Baltimore area has fostered excellent college lacrosse and this year's Towson State squad is no exception.

Villanova is no slouch either. The Cats are coming off a 7-6 season and hope to improve on that mark this year. The stage was set for what proved to be a great match-up.

After the first quarter, Villanova led by the slim margin of 3-2. Kevin King, Bobby Essig and David Hone tallied goals for the Cats during the opening period.

Towson State rallied in the second quarter scoring four unanswered goals to take a 6-3 lead. Chris Sullivan of Villanova scored just seven seconds before the intermission to pull the Wildcats to within two goals at halftime.

Towson State opened the second half with a bang, scoring three of the first four goals of the third quarter to extend their lead to 9-5. John McEvoy and Sullivan each scored a goal to cut the lead to 9-7 at the end of the third quarter.

Towson State put the game out of reach in the fourth quarter as they outscored Villanova 5-1 to hand the Cats a disappointing 14-8 defeat.

Despite losing, Villanova looked promising in their season opener against a very talented team. Villanova's John Nugent was credited with a team high seven groundballs.

The Cats play at the University of Pennsylvania on March 16 and at Providence College on March 20.

(Photo by Trimble)
Towson St. University toppled the Wildcat Lacrosse team 14-8.

Happy 22nd Birthday
KEVIN HECHT

A Brief Case For Paralegals.
It's the challenge and excitement of working with lawyers (or on your own) on all types of legal issues, specializing in one of five areas: litigation, corporate, real estate, pensions, or estate law. Next session, May 31 to August 31 with classes Mon.-Fri., 8:30 am - 12:30 pm on both campuses.
33 college credits required for application.
Call 215/459-4968 or 302/652-1051 or send in coupon.
Widener UNIVERSITY
We take your education personally.
Chester, PA Wilmington, DE
To: Paralegal Certificate Program, Widener University, P.O. Box 7139, Wilmington, DE 19803
Please send me a Paralegal Application Packet.
Name
Address
City State Zip
I'm interested in ☐ PA Campus ☐ DE Campus VU with classes starting in ☐ May (day) ☐ Sept. (eve.) ☐ Jan. (eve.)

You'll get first hand experience in the courtroom right from the start. In three years, you could handle more than 3,000 cases in a wide variety of subjects from international to contracts to criminal law. If you think you have what it takes to be a Marine Corps Officer and lawyer, talk with the Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer when he visits your campus.
Have 190,000 clients from the start.
More than 190,000 Marines could use your service.
We're looking for a few good men.
Marines

Sports

Plansky leads Cats to Big East final

By JOHN RICCO
Sports Editor

Only two and a half minutes separated Villanova from a 19-12 record and possibly a second consecutive year without an NCAA Tournament berth. The Wildcats trailed St. John's 66-58 in their first round Big East Tournament game last Friday, and the Redmen looked assured of extending their undefeated mark over the Cats at Madison Square Garden (MSG). Fortunately for Villanova, however, Mark Plansky was still on the court.

The senior co-captain, determined to lead his team back to the tournament he won as a freshman, would not let the Wildcats lose, and his subsequent performance was one that MSG fans will not soon forget.

In the final three minutes against SJU, Plansky drew two clutch offensive charges, tallied an assist, a rebound and five points, including a three-pointer with 0:49 remaining to put Villanova up by one. The Plansky-led Cats held on for a 71-68 victory, stunning the Garden crowd and dropping the host Redmen to 17-11.

Plansky, who was honored earlier in the week as the Big East men's Scholar Athlete of the Year, finished the contest with a team-high 19 points, while teammates Gary Massey and Doug West pumped in 17 and 13, respectively. Shelton Jones had 23 in a losing cause for St. John's.

Head Coach Roland V. Massimino was extremely happy with the play of his senior forward, and said afterwards, "Obviously Plansky's play and his award indicate what type of player he is. I've never had a player play all five positions and he does it well."

The following day 'Nova faced the regular season Big East Champion Pittsburgh Panthers, a team which had defeated them rather easily in their two previous meetings this season. Plansky and the Wildcats, however, entered this contest eager to pull off an upset.

Following a 38-38 deadlock at halftime, Villanova started to bang the ball inside to sophomore center Tom Greis and the results were excellent. In a 30-second span Greis drew center Charles Smith's and back-up center Bobby Martin's fourth fouls sending both to the bench with over 13 minutes to play.

The absence of both Smith and Martin enabled the Cats to hang close to the heavily-favored Panthers and created the "barn-burner-type" game perfectly suited for some more Plansky heroics. Plansky did not disappoint.

With under a minute to play, Greis kicked the ball out to Plansky for a wide open three-pointer giving 'Nova a 70-69 lead. "I had a good feeling about it (the shot)," said Plansky. "Tommy (Greis) kept the ball long enough for me to get open. Jerome (Pitt forward Jerome Lane) went to play him and I was left wide open."

Two Greis free throws with seven seconds remaining sealed

(Continued on page 28)

(Photo by Shafer)

Mark Plansky's stellar play at the Big East Tournament powered VU to two upset wins.

Wildcats earn at-large bid

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

With two straight road losses to Pittsburgh and a first round exit from the Big East Tournament, the Villanova women's basketball team headed home for spring break, certain their successful season had come to an end.

However, their 20-8 record and difficult schedule did not escape the notice of the NCAA selection committee. In what was regarded as a major surprise, the Wildcats were awarded an at-large NCAA Tournament bid.

The Cats, seeded eighth in the East Regional, hosted Atlantic Coast Conference third-place finisher Wake Forest University here at duPont Pavilion Wednesday night to open the tournament.

Head Coach Harry Perretta seemed both happily surprised and dumbfounded by the bid. "I don't know how to explain it. I don't even want to try to explain it. Syracuse and St. John's also received bids, so the East is now getting a lot more respect."

Wake Forest entered the contest with a 22-7 record out of the powerful ACC conference. The Demon Deacons are seeded ninth, a notch below Villanova. The winner of this opening round tilt travels to Tennessee to face the top-ranked Volunteers.

As of Tuesday afternoon, the 'Nova coaching staff still had not seen any film of Wake Forest.

"We don't know much about them," commented Perretta.

Said assistant coach Lynn Tighe, "We just got two films from games in December. All their recent games were in their own conference, so we could not get any of those games."

Although missing eight days of practice and preparing for a foe they knew precious little about had the Cats on the run, they were not complaining.

They were happy to be running at all.

(File Photo)

Women's Head Basketball Coach Harry Perretta

Runners stun NCAA

By MICHAEL E. JONES
Staff Reporter

During this past spring break, while many Villanovans were packing the sun tan lotion and wine coolers for their southern excursions, six members of the women's track team were packing their racing flats and sweats for two days of serious competition at the Myriad Arena in Oklahoma City, OK where the NCAA Championships were to be held.

While many Villanovans came back with deep, dark tans, the women's track team came back with the second-place trophy and stories of dominance. The Wildcats finished with 52 points, placing second behind a much larger Texas team, which finished with 71 points.

In the words of Head Coach Marty Stern, "We had a perfect meet — we went out there and batted four for four." The junior connection of Vicki Huber, Kathy Franey, Celeste Halliday and Michelle DiMuro once again reminded other collegiate runners that Villanova is a major force to be reckoned with, in case they had forgotten. Huber pulled off an impressive double, winning both the mile and 3000 meters in times of 4:31.46 and 9:05.67, the former establishing a new NCAA meet record.

The 3200-meter relay quartet of freshman Michelle Bennet, DiMuro, fellow junior Meg Moisen and Halliday nipped the first-place trophy as well in a time of 8:34.05.

About an hour after the relay, Halliday and DiMuro grabbed second and third respectively in the open 800 meters with times of 2:08.68 and 2:09.41. The previous day in the 800 trials Halliday ran a 2:07.22, which set a new Myriad Arena record.

Franey took second place in the mile with a personal best of 4:38.91, which highly impressed Stern. "Kathy had as good a meet as any athlete for any school. She was to me a major hero in the meet. She's the second best miler in the U.S. The best one lives down the hall from her."

Franey is looking to join three of her teammates at the Olympic trials — Huber has already qualified in the 1500 and 3000 meters, and Halliday and DiMuro have both qualified in the 800 meters.

Vicky Huber

Relay team wins championship

By TERRY KELLY
Staff Reporter

The men's winter track team capped off its toughest two weeks of competition of the season on March 13 with an NCAA championship in the 4 x 800-meter relay. This win marked the first time in five years that the team had won an indoor event, despite the fact that it was the team's only entry in the meet.

The weekend previous to the NCAA championships the team took two seconds, a third and a fourth at the IC4A championship meet. The top individual performance of the meet for the team came from senior Mark Sullivan in the 800-meter run. Coming of a disappointing seventh place finish in the Big East, the senior ran an excellent race to finish a mere .15 seconds out of first place.

Sullivan's excellent time of 1:51.09 just beat out his teammate Aidan O'Regan, who finished in fourth place. The freshman ran a 1:51.16, his best time ever, in his first major indoor championship meet. If he continues inhproving he is really going to help the Cats regain their reputation of being a national powerhouse in the next four years.

The team's only other individual entry resulted in another extremely strong showing from a freshman. Finn Kelly ran probably the best 1000 meters of his life to earn third place behind Steve Balkey of Penn State and Paul Gambrah of George Mason.

His time of 2:25.85 put him just over a second out of first place. He showed in his first major championship meet that he too will be a huge asset to the Cats' future.

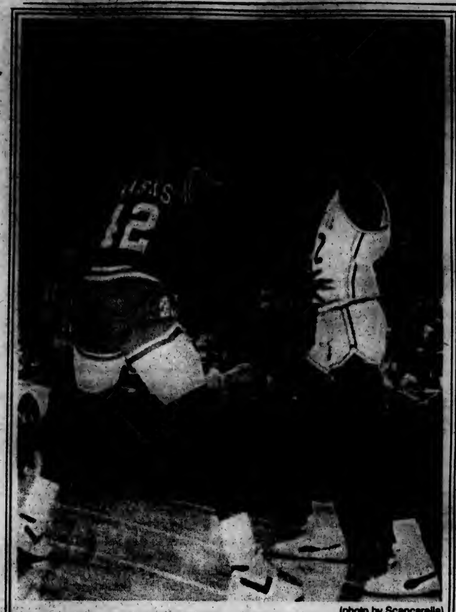
The team's only other performance of the meet came in the 4 x 800 meter relay. In the IC4A's the Cats combined the squad of O'Regan, Jan Friedli, Howard Jackson and Bruce Harris to take second place behind Georgetown.

It's truly gratifying to see a bunch of guys come out and win such a tough relay. It was a perfect relay.

Dr. Charlie Jenkins — Men's Track Head Coach

The two-mile relay team that ran in the IC4A championships performed extremely well, but that performance hardly compares to the victory over the same distance in the NCAA championships a week later.

The race got off to a rough start on March 13 as the runners from Indiana and Georgetown tangled and fell on the first leg of the race. Though greatly benefitting from Georgetown's departure from the race the Cats were affected by the incident.



"The two fellows in front of me were bumping each other, and one of them spiked me, then both went down and I kept running" explained O'Regan, who ran the leadoff leg.

From then on the Cats led the race through excellent legs run by Jackson, Sullivan and Harris. The group combined splits of 1:52.2, 1:51.7, 1:51.1 and 1:50.1 respectively for a combined time of 7:25.23, good enough to hold off second-place Baylor (7:26.37).

"It's truly gratifying to see a bunch of guys come out and win such a tough relay, I'm very happy with the way they ran," commented track coach Dr. Charles Jenkins, "It was a perfect race for us. It was a total team effort." Of the two meets coach Jenkins noted, "I was pleased with the performances of Sullivan, O'Regan and Kelly. They continue to perform well."

the Villanovan

Vol. 63, No. 17 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | March 25, 1988

(photo by Scancarello)

Doug West sizes up the floor during the Arkansas game. West finished [illegible] with a career high 22 points.

Wildcats reach NCAA Sweet 16

By JOHN RICCO
Sports Editor

Following Villanova's 82-74 first round victory over the University of Arkansas on March 18, in which the Wildcats shot 81 percent from the line, Head Coach Roland V. Massimino said, "When you play in an NCAA game you have to shoot fouls, you have to be ready to shoot fouls."

Massimino has been called on to perform many roles during his basketball career coach, teacher and spokesman — from now on he may want to include prophet in that list. Two days later Villanova's next opponent, the University of Illinois, would illustrate to the rest of the nation just what Massimino was talking about.

(Continued on page 31)

Budget proposal: pass or fail?

Students hope to sway vote by protest

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

The University Senate will vote on whether to approve the operating budget for the 1988-89 academic year when it meets today at 4 p.m. in the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Student Government plans to resist the approval of the budget because of an average tuition increase of over 10.5 percent, according to Phil Brach, Student Government president.

The budget recommendation includes tuition increases of 10.5 percent for arts and commerce and finance students, a 10.4 percent increase for science and nursing students, an 11.5 percent increase for engineering students and a 10.5 percent increase for students in the law school, according to Alvin A. Clay, dean of the College of Commerce and Finance.

The budget also includes a 4 percent increase in room and board costs, an 8 percent increment in faculty salaries, a 33 percent increase in athletic scholarships and a 20 percent increase in financial aid, he said.

According to the Senate budget committee report, "The committee ... has ascertained that the allocation of funds is in accord with general University policies and resources. The operating budget indicates revenues and expenditures of $110,020,000."

The budget committee's task is to determine whether the priorities set by the planning and priorities committee have been met.

The members of the committee voted 10-0 that the priority of increasing financial aid to meet rising costs had been met. Aid has been "increased commensurate with increased tuition and student costs," the report said.

The committee also voted unanimously that the priority of improving faculty and staff salaries had been met. The proposed faculty salary raise is 8 percent and the proposed staff salary raise is 6 percent. According to the report, "Studies indicate these increases were competitive. However, it was felt that the faculty increase only minimally met the plan to improve our competitive position."

Tuition cost was not determined to be a priority by the planning and priorities committee.

According to the report, other priorities include the construction

(Continued on page 7)

Allocation of aid investigated

Athletic scholarships total $2 million

By JENNIFER REIDY
Assistant News Editor

Although $2.3 million was allocated to 1,050 students as financial aid over the past academic year, a comparable figure of about $2 million was distributed as athletic scholarships to only 200 students, according to Phil Brach, Student Government president, and Mark Holobetz, secretary of the academic affairs department of Student Government.

A reliable source in the administration confirmed this information.

"One can't help but be astonished when one sees figures like this — there's an obvious discrepancy. The contrast between the two groups of funds allocated is a good example of the obvious financial aid crisis at Villanova," Holobetz commented.

"One would think that they [funds for financial aid] ought to be equal to athletics," said W. Arthur Switzer, associate director of financial aid.

Dr. Theodore A. Aceto, director of Athletics, declined to comment on or affirm the figures. A member of the department said over the telephone that Aceto "is not supposed to" reveal the actual figures.

Holobetz added, "I am sincerely not for cutting the athletic budget, but it is apparent that need should determine priorities. The greatest need should receive first priority."

In the statement of planned revenues contained within the proposed operating budget for the 1988-89 academic year, which the Senate will vote on today,

(Continued on page 6)

Second of two-part series

Greeks confront issues

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

In light of the apparent drinking death of Rutgers University Lambda Chi Alpha associate member James Callahan and current media attention on Greek organizations, several members of the Villanova Greek community have responded to the nature of pledging, the use of alcohol and the occurrence of hazing.

Chris Johnson, fraternity educator for Villanova's chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha, explained that instead of pledging and pledges, his fraternity makes use of the concept of fraternity education and associate members.

Johnson said the focus of the education process is to bring associate members and brothers closer together. Associate members are not separated out and are encouraged to speak out and contribute to the fraternity. He described the process as a mutual exchange with everyone benefiting from the relationship.

According to Johnson, the process includes signature books which are used "only as an ice-breaker." It does not involve tasks or hazing.

As to forced drinking in Lambda Chi Alpha, President Craig Zappetti said, "We never ever make associates drink and never suggest that they drink. Alcohol is not a part of the education process. It is merely a part of the process of socializing and only appears at social functions."

Zappetti said, "Everyone knows underage people drink. In local establishments, underage students use fake I.D. [identification]."

However, Zappetti said that although at least 50 to 60 percent of his fraternity is 21, "carding" for I.D. occurs only at formal functions. At informal functions there is no "carding," and the alcohol is not in a controlled area.

He added, "Not only associates but brothers abuse it [alcohol]. This is something we have to work on."

(Continued on page 4)

INSIDE

EDITORIAL: A plea to stop beating of Palestinians ..... p. 9

FEATURES: Student volunteers during spring break .... p. 11

ENTERTAINMENT:
Robert Plant sings of "Now and Zen" p.21

SPORTS: Basketball team advances to Sweet 16 ..... p. 31

First of a series

University lacks harassment policy

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

After almost two years, University officials have not yet implemented a proposal which would establish an official University policy and procedure for cases of sexual harassment on campus.

The University's law firm, Morgan, Lewis and Bockius, was reportedly still working on the proposal six weeks ago, said the Rev. Robert J. Martin, O.S.A., assistant to the president, March 15.

Raymond Cullen, a member of the law firm, said he expects that the proposal will be sent back to the committee soon.

The proposal on sexual harassment was originally submitted to the administration inMay 1986 by a committee chaired by Dr. John Immerwahr, philosophy professor.

The law firm made some changes in the proposal, and the committee responded to the changes in December 1986, said Immerwahr March 14.

Since that time, the proposal has apparently remained with the law firm. Immerwahr noted that the last word he had heard was in Fall 1987 from the Rev. John Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, who reportedly said that work was being done on the proposal.

When questioned about the length of time taken for the proposal's consideration, Martin responded March 15, "Law firms are very busy. Frankly, I don't know [why it has taken this

(Continued on page 7)

(photo by Baker)

The proposal on sexual harassment was submitted to the administration by a committee chaired by Dr. John Immerwahr, philosophy professor.

F.Y.I.

March 28

Arab and Islamic Club

There will be a meeting at 6 p.m. in Room 15, of St. Mary's Hall. The trip to Washington will be finalized and Balloon Day will be discussed.

Chess Club

The Chess Club will meet in Room 109 of Bartley Hall at 3:30 p.m. All new members are also welcome.

Political Science club

The Political Science Club will be sponsoring the District Attorney from Montgomery County, Michael Marino, at 4:30 p.m. in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall. All are welcome to attend.

New student theatre group

Student-run theatre is an integral and exciting part of many colleges and universities, yet at present Villanova has no such institution. Because of space and time demands, Villanova theatre can generate only a small number of productions each year. Therefore, opportunities to perform, to direct and to have original work produced are limited. There is a definite need for a Villanova Student theatre organization.

Come to our organizational meeting tonight at 8:30 p.m. in the Bryn Mawr Room of Connelly Center. Bring your ideas and a friend — it can not happen without you.

March 29

Poetry festival

Villanova University is joining in the celebration of Poetry Month with a "Poetry Festival at Villanova" to be held on March 29 from 2 to 4 p.m. in the Wayne/St. Davids Room of Connelly Center.

The festival will include musical offerings, poetry readings by faculty and students and dramatizations. Dr. Lucy McDiarmid, associate professor of English, will present a talk entitled "T.S. Eliot & Vivian," and David Sager, adjunct faculty member in English, will read from his book A Spell of Shelters.

Refreshments will be provided. The department of English is sponsoring this free event.

For more information, call Dr. James Murphy, festival moderator, at 645-4647.

PSEA

The Villanova chapter of PSEA (Pennsylvania State Education Association) invites all education majors and minors and interested parties to join them in the Haverford Room in Connelly Center at 6:30 p.m. Plans are going to be made for the student-teacher party.

International Business Society

There will be a meeting at 12:45 p.m. in Room 210 of Bartley Hall. New officers will be elected and candidates do not need to be nominated. If you are interested in running for an office, make sure you are present at the meeting.

April 6

M*A*S*H Fans

Gene Reynolds, producer and creative consultant of M*A*S*H will discuss the role of television comedy as social commentary at 7:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center Cinema. This is the much-awaited final event in the Villanova Honors Junior Week Lecture Series.

April 7

Mock trial of Charles Manson

There will be a special activity co-sponsored by the Sociology Club and the Pre-Law Society at 3 p.m. in the Connelly Cinema. The topic is the insanity defense which will be analyzed through a brief lecture followed by a mock trial of Charles Manson. The participants in the trial are all professionals who have been involved in actual courtroom cases in which the insanity defense was employed. The participants are: Arthur Donato, Esq., criminal defense lawyer; Daniel McDevitt, Esq., assistant Delaware County district attorney; the Hon. Richard Cappelli; Anthony Pisa, Ph.D., clinical psychologist and a professional witness.

April 8

Sunshine Day organizational meeting

All who are interested in spending Sunshine Day, April 23, with underprivileged kids on campus must come to an organizational meeting. It will be repeated twice, in different rooms: the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall from 1 to 1:30 p.m.; and the East Lounge of Dougherty Hall from 4:30 to 5 p.m. This brief meeting is for sign-up and to explain details of the day.

April 9

Museum trip

The German Club is sponsoring a trip to the Philadelphia Art Museum to see an exhibition of the works of Anselm Kiefer. If interested, please leave your name and phone number in the language department office, on the second floor of St. Thomas Hall.

April 13

Economics Society

John Spagnola of the Philadelphia Eagles will speak on the "Economic Issues of the National Football League Player's Strike." Dr. Lucia will chair the discussion, and it will take place in Room 209 in Bartley at 4:45 p.m. All are welcome.

Income tax help

With tax time looming, Villanova University law school students will offer free assistance to the community in the filing of income tax returns. Students will be available in Garey Hall from 2:30 to 5 p.m. every Wednesday and Thursday from March 16 until April 7. From April 11 to 15, they will be available every day during the same hours, also in Garev Hall.

Participants are asked to bring with them a copy of their income tax returns from last year as well as their W-2 forms and all other pertinent tax information. They are required to fill out their own returns in the presence of a VITA student, who will make certain that the information is complete and accurate on the form.

For more information, call Professor Schoenfeld at 645-7437 or 645-7088.

Attention runners

The annual NROTC Road Race will be run on April 9. Entry forms for the 8-kilometer event may be picked up at John Barry Hall, the Student Acitivities office or from your favorite ROTC. Call Pat at 645-7132 or Rai at 527-4568.

Balloon Day

Come to Balloon Day on April 19. It will begin at 11:30 a.m. and will last until 4:30 p.m. All the booths and the excitement will be in Kennedy Mall. Be a part of the fun. If you missed both of the informational meetings and would like to be involved, stop by Campus Ministry sometime soon.

Library hours

The library hours for the Easter Holiday are: March 30, 8 a.m. to 10 p.m.; March 31, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; April 1 through April 3, closed; April 4, 5 p.m. to 12 a.m.

AAP tutors

The Academic Advancement Program is accepting applications for tutors during the 1988-89 academic year. These are paid positions in the following areas: finite math, calculus (all levels), chemistry, physics, anatomy, and languages, including English.

For more information and an application, you are invited to stop by Pat Kobes's office in the lobby of Corr Hall.

May graduates

The tentative list of undergraduate degree recipients for May 1988 is posted outside the Registrar's Office, Room 202 Tolentine Hall and will remain on view until April 1.

College Republicans

The trip originally slated for April 8 has been cancelled due to the inability to arrange a tour of the White House at this time. There will be a meting on April 6 to elect new officers, this meeting is mandatory for all members. Please check the board after Easter for the time and place.

Religious Studies catalogue

During the past several years the religious studies department has been publishing a "sub-catalogue." This catalogue has the purpose of presenting more detailed descriptions of the courses to be offered for the Fall semester, 1988, by the religious studies faculty as well as the requirements for these courses. We thus hope that the students will have more information about the courses and have better opportunity to make a more knowledgable decision in the choice of a religious studies course. Copies of these "sub-catalogues" are available in the deans' offices, Falvey Memorial library and can be obtained at the religious studies department office.

Senior Dinner Dance

The countdown to the Senior Dinner Dance is on! Tickets are now available in the Connelly Center ticket office, but they are going fast! So get your ticket, find your date, and polish your dancing shoes — there are only 29 days left!

Alley Cat tournament

Rosters are available in the Dean of Students Office for the 1988 Alley Cat tournament. The deadline for entry is March 30. First-round games are scheduled for April 6.

Thank you

The Association of Commuting Students (ACS) and WKVU would like to thank all those who turned out for the Dance-A-Thon. It was a terrific success and we raised nearly $500 for the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. We would like to thank especially all of those die-hard dancers who survived the entire 12 hours. You are a terrific group of spirited people.

These die-hards are: Dennis Quinlan, Chrissy Silano, David Nassar, Rick Greene, Tom Klein, Bob Gross, Thalia Polychronakis, Tom Feeney, Monica Byrne, Jody Sherman, Jennifer Janson, Kevin Heil, Mike Guerriero, Sean Curley, Jim Wentzel, Chris Gannon, Trish Whalon, Erin Farley, Rich Miehle, Sheila Bartlett, Kevin McDonnell, Mary Johnson, Dan Dougherty and Edie Pearce.

Cultural Film series

Villanova University's Cultural Film Series will present Agnes Varda's 1965 film "Le Bonheur" as part of its series, "Cinematic Images of Women." It will have four showings: April 9 at 7 p.m.; April 10 at 3:30 and 7 p.m.; and April 11 at 7 p.m. All screenings will be in the Connelly Center Cinema on Villanova's campus. Tickets are $2 for students and senior citizens and $3.50 for the general public.

Student campaign begins

By PAUL FRATAMICO
Staff Reporter

Terise Fusco and Sean Closkey, both members of Student Government, officially declared their candidacies for the office of Student Government president Monday.

Fusco, Closkey and candidates running to represent students in the University Senate met Monday in the Haverford Room of the Connelly Center to submit nomination forms and declare their candidacies.

Currently, there is only one contested election for the Senate. Six candidates are vying to be the three arts student representatives. There are no candidates from the College of Engineering or the College of Nursing.

The official candidates for commerce and finance senators are Claudine Liss, Gregg Bowler and Ken Fahrman. Candidates running for arts senator are Christopher Sperduto, Diane Carman, Richard Johnson, Chris Wnuk, Debbie Gross and Michelle Bogosian. Jonathan Zahm is the lone candidate running for University College senator and Philip Kousoubris is the only candidate running for science senator.

Candidates were informed that they could start their verbal campaigns today, which includes balloons and pins, but no flyers, papers or posters. The full campaign begins April 5 at 8:30 a.m.

Fusco, a junior, has served as sophomore class representative and assistant to the secretary of internal affairs for Student Government. She listed her achievements as starting committees on minority enrollment, Security, vandalism, the Food Services board, coed dormitories and book prices, among others.

In this, her third year, Fusco is vice president of the Student Government under Phil Brach, Student Government president, and she assists him with carrying out his duties as president.

Closkey, a junior, served on the social activities on campus committee [S.A.C.C.] in his first year at Villanova.

The goal of the committee was to find a solution to the lack of social activities on campus. The proposed Spring Festival was an accomplishment of this committee.

Closkey also served as the chairperson of the Student Life committee. In this post, he reviewed student life issues such as coed dormitories.

In addition to these posts, Closkey also served as the assistant to the secretary of internal affairs for Student Government. The internal affairs department deals with issues that affect the University internally. Among other things, these issues include a Food Services board, coed dormitories report, the Spring Festival and new student IDs.

Festival future uncertain

Control, liability cited as concerns

By DIANE A. CILIONE
Staff Reporter

The Spring Festival, scheduled to take place April 30, has not yet been approved by the University administration, according to Phil Brach, president of Student Government.

At a March 21 meeting, the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, discussed the potential Spring Festival with student representatives. Driscoll has reservations about the planned event and withheld his approval, according to Brach.

The Spring Festival was designed by representatives of Student Government, the Student Union, the Resident Student Association, the Association of Commuting Students, the Panhellenic Council and the Interfraternity Council to increase alcohol-related programs on campus. The programs would allow students who are of age to drink if they choose to do so, and at the same time unite the campus by holding events which are also attractive to underage students, according to Brach.

Lucyna J. Gorski, director of Student Activities, said that the Spring Festival was meant to be a "community builder."

"Many people who live off campus are mostly 21 years old and don't feel the need or feel welcome to come back on campus on the weekends," said Gorski. Having a Spring Festival with alcohol would hopefully address the needs of those off-campus students who are 21, she said.

"Father Driscoll is very concerned about this particular event because of the issue of control at the event," said Brach. According to Gorski, control of alcohol and University liability for alcohol consumption are major concerns.

Manpower for the event is also an issue, according to Gorski. "We would need a minimum of 200 people out there to put the whole day forth as volunteers," said Gorski.

Sean Closkey, Spring Festival committee member, said, "We need the students to come out and donate their time to responsible, effective management of the event to make sure it won't be an unacceptable risk to the University."

Funding for the festival is a major concern of the administration. "We can't sell alcohol because we don't have a liquor license," said Gorski. Alternative methods of getting the money for the festival are still being discussed.

The Spring Festival will be held if it is approved by the end of the week, according to Brach. "I'm optimistic. There's still a 50-50 chance," he said.

Off-campus housing wanes

By MAUREEN STAPLETON
Staff Reporter

The options of off-campus housing for undergraduates are becoming increasingly limited, according to the Rev. Frank Farsaci, O.S.A., advisor to off-campus residents.

Farsaci said that certain apartment complexes will not rent to undergraduates. Other apartments which were once available to students are converting into condominiums and are thus too expensive.

For instance, Strafford Station Apartments, an apartment complex that Farsaci suggested to students in the past, will no longer rent to undergraduates. The policy went into effect last August, after tenants for this school year had moved in.

The reason behind the decision was past problems with undergraduates. However, the complex will continue to rent to graduate students.

The decreasing amount of housing offered to students, according to the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, is "unfortunately because the students themselves have failed to act responsibly in the community."

Students should realize that their neighbors "want their investment protected ... they don't want people who don't treat the property with respect," said Stack.

He cited examples of noise in the early morning, cars taking up spots on the street and general lack of consideration on the part of the students.

Zoning laws in the surrounding areas provide additional problems for students. In Radnor Township, no more than two unrelated people may live together. In Lower Merion and Haverford townships, no more than three unrelated

(Continued on page 7)

In the News

Rare Irish book displayed

One of Villanova's prize art treasures, a limited-edition copy of Ireland's Book of Kells, is now on display in the Falvey Memorial Library.

The display is located outside the Rare Book Room and commemorates March as the month of Irish celebration. The original manuscript, produced by eighth century Irish monks, rests in the Trinity College library in Dublin.

Dr. Mary Griffin, director of Falvey Memorial Library, commented, "Many scholars consider the Book of Kells to be the finest manuscript ever produced."

A national treasure of Ireland, the book's leaves are illuminated with color, calligraphy and intricate patterns which have been copied throughout history. Villanova's book-form facsimile was made possible only with the perfection of modern color photography. For more information, call 645-4273.

Annual Easter egg hunt to be held

The annual Villanova Easter Egg Hunt for children ages three to eight will take place March 26 at 1 p.m. on the lawn in front of the St. Thomas of Villanova Chapel.

Over 300 children are expected to participate in the colorful "eggstravaganza," which is sponsored by the University's Panhellenic Council and the Interfraternity Council.

The Easter bunny and Villanova Wildcat will help children hunt for over 150 dozen eggs. Candy and prizes will be awarded to the finders of prize eggs.

Children should bring their own baskets. Coffee and doughnuts will be provided for parents.

Rain date is March 27 at 1 p.m. For more information, call 645-4210.

Security guard commended

Security Officer Thomas Brennan was selected the Security officer of the month for February by Rowan P. Kelly, director of Security, according to a statement by Kelly.

The program, which went into effect Feb. 1, involves having Security supervisors "check the accomplishments of their personnel on their respective shifts," according to the statement.

Each officer of the month will receive a $25 cash award.

Brennan was picked after a student went to Kelly to praise Brennan's friendly disposition while performing his job. Brennan was described by the student "as a person who smiles, waves in a friendly fashion and gives an overall impression of friendliness," according to the statement.

S.A.W.

South campus dorm project begins

(photo by Shafie)

The removal of trees began on south campus to make way for construction of two new dormitories.

Renowned physicist returns to lecture at V.U.

Pictured above are people involved in the upcoming lecture by renowned physicist Dr. Edward Teller. They are (from left to right) Dr. Philip A. Maurone, physics professor; Toni Bauer, John McMahon, Phil DiAntonio, Brian Egras, students; and Anita Webb of the Pennsylvania Electric and Gas Company.

By DANIEL MORIARTY
Staff Reporter

Renowned physicist Dr. Edward Teller will give a lecture titled, "The Energy Evolution" on Monday, April 11 at 7:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center.

The lecture, which is sponsored by the physics department and the Energy Advisory Council of the Philadelphia Electric Company, is the first in a series of at least 10 physics lectures in 1988 commemorating the 50th anniversary of the physics department, according to physics professor Dr. Philip A. Maurone.

"We are honored to have a scientist of Dr. Teller's stature return to Villanova," Maurone said.

Teller spoke at Villanova in 1982 at a lecture titled, "Nuclear Power: Why the Controversy?" and decided to return, foregoing his normal lecture fee because of his positive experience with the University.

Anita Webb, representative for the Energy Education Advisory Council, called Teller's return "unprecedented" and "a distinct honor to Villanova University."

Born in Hungary in 1908, Teller was educated in Germany and became an American citizen in time to work extensively on nuclear development during and after World War II. Teller, who was a member of the famous Manhattan Project, which created the first atomic bomb, has made important contributions in the fields of chemical physics, molecular physics and quantum theory.

Teller is presently senior research fellow at the Hoover Institution on War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University, consultant and associate director emeritus of the Lawrence Livermore Laboratory and professor emeritus of the University of California.

Seniors John McMahon and Philip DiAntonio, junior Brian Egras, and freshman Anthony Bauer, all physics majors, were chosen on the basis of their academic standing by the physics department to help organize the event and join Teller for dinner that evening.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Greek hazing and alcohol policies examined

(Continued from page 1)

Johnson commented, "People drink on their own. Nobody is forced to drink. There are guys in the fraternity who don't drink at all. Peer pressure is not there because people are mature enough to respect the wishes of others."

He explained that Lambda Chi Alpha has a sober committee which acts as a private Saferides.

Zappetti said the fraternity monitors who is driving and checks keys. "We would like to make a list of who has keys and only take keys if they can't drive," he said, after explaining that taking everyone's keys assumes too much liability.

Johnson said in reference to the Rutgers incident involving a fellow chapter of Lambda Chi Alpha, "Even if James Callahan said he wanted to drink all that [alcohol] they [the brothers] are still responsible. They should have stopped him."

He said of his own chapter that there is no night during the week on which associates are required to drink. Instead, they are required to study in order to learn time management.

As to drinking at parties in the form of such games as "chug-offs," Johnson said, "People want to do it. It's a drinking game and is not done for four hours. They [the brothers] get everyone together, but if someone doesn't feel well or has a test [to study for] it's no problem."

Zappetti, too, said of chug-offs "It's one beer, and they're not forced to drink. If it was hazing, we would 'make' the 16 of them [associates] do it, but it is very relaxed in the spirit of things, like a game of quarters. If they had five or six [beers] it would be a different story."

Johnson said the major emphasis during fraternity education is that associates do well in school because "I want them to be better brothers than I am or my brothers are. They are the future.

"If you promote drinking and carelessness, then that is what your fraternity will be like in the future," he said.

"Rutgers, they were the ninth chapter [of Lambda Chi Alpha], added in 1912-13. They're going to be gone. They deserve it for what happened to them. Their future went down the drain," Johnson added.

He said, "We don't want somebody to die first and say, 'now we'll stop'... But the question [of alcohol abuse] is not to get rid of fraternities and sororities, for the way to get rid of any problem is to find out what it is and work to solve it."

Mike Furgiuele, pledge master for Sigma Phi Epsilon, said that in pledging "emphasis is placed on striving for brotherhood."

Each of the pledging activities is supposed to serve a purpose, to reach certain goals and expectations, said Furgiuele. "The purpose wouldn't be to go out and get drunk, it has to make sense as to what the organization is all about," he added.

He explained that his fraternity emphasized maintaining study hours and becoming a part of the group through interviews.

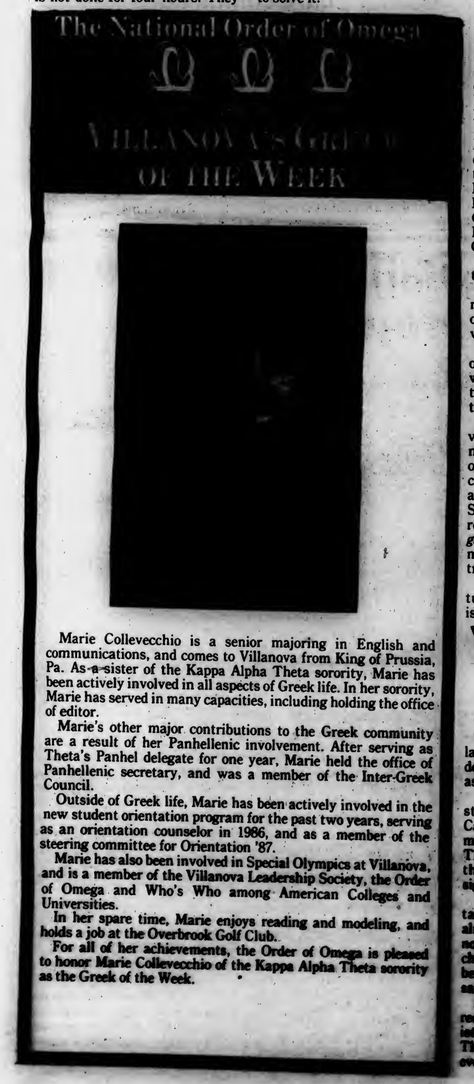
According to Furgiuele, pledges can go to all social activities but are not forced to drink "at all."

"They have the option [to drink] just as any brother has the option. There are two brothers in the fraternity now who went through pledging without touching a drop of alcohol," he commented.

Furgiuele said his fraternity has a liabilities committee at each party which is responsible for staying sober in order to drive and check keys at the door. Sigma Phi Epsilon also adheres to a guest list, as their national chapter does not allow open parties.

He said his fraternity has never had a problem with this system. "I think what we're doing now is effective enough," he added.

He said of the Rutgers incident, "It was clearcut hazing. It's an unfortunate incident. I can't imagine any fraternity doing anything like that. The Greek system here is very responsible."



He further said that he felt there was a degree of peer pressure involved for Callahan "to go and do what he did. He must have really wanted it [brotherhood]. He was trying to impress people and took it too far."

Miche Veix, president of the Panhellenic Council and past president of Delta Delta Delta, said that the guidelines every sorority must follow, according to the National Panhellenic Council groups, prohibit hazing and the use of alcohol in any on-campus sorority-sponsored event.

"We have a strong national guideline base and are not permitted to do certain things ... Panhellenic acts as a watchforce to make sure this base is maintained," she said.

She explained that most national sororities do not condone the use of alcohol. She said, "Panhellenically, we cannot use alcohol in order to avoid liability ... this is a recent decision since the increase of liability suits."

According to Veix, there has been no hazing or alcohol abuse incident at Villanova that was "serious enough to ever suspend a sorority." She contributed this to the fact that national chapters hand down decisions and take action against such incidents.

Marie Collevecchio is a senior majoring in English and communications, and comes to Villanova from King of Prussia, Pa. As a sister of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Marie has been actively involved in all aspects of Greek life. In her sorority, Marie has served in many capacities, including holding the office of editor.

Marie's other major contributions to the Greek community are a result of her Panhellenic involvement. After serving as Theta's Panhel delegate for one year, Marie held the office of Panhellenic secretary, and was a member of the Inter-Greek Council.

Outside of Greek life, Marie has been actively involved in the new student orientation program for the past two years, serving as an orientation counselor in 1986, and as a member of the steering committee for Orientation '87.

Marie has also been involved in Special Olympics at Villanova, and is a member of the Villanova Leadership Society, the Order of Omega and Who's Who among American Colleges and Universities.

In her spare time, Marie enjoys reading and modeling, and holds a job at the Overbrook Golf Club.

For all of her achievements, the Order of Omega is pleased to honor Marie Collevecchio of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority as the Greek of the Week.

Students back from U.S.S.R.

Cultural differences discussed

By SHARON A. WATERS
Assistant News Editor

The Center for Peace and Justice Education sponsored a trip to the Soviet Union during spring break for a group of 39 students, alumni and staff members "for the purpose of understanding some of the differences that separate and divide" the Soviet Union and the United States, according to Dr. Barbara Wall, O.P., of the center.

The group traveled to Moscow, Kiev and Leningrad during the 10-day trip. The tour included seeing the Moscow State Ballet in the Palaces of Congresses in the Kremlin, La Traviata at the Kirov Opera in Leningrad, the Pioneer Palace and the Moscow State Circus.

In addition, the group had time to explore the cities on their own.

It was during this free time that members of the group took the opportunity to meet and speak with the Russian people.

Greg Tucci, a junior who went on the trip, commented that he was allowed to go anywhere in the three cities and did not feel afraid to ask the people any questions.

Wall, who has traveled previously to the Soviet Union, noticed a "greater feeling of openness" in the country, especially at the passport entrances and exits. She attributed it to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's recently-implemented policy of glasnost and the recent INF [intermediate range nuclear forces] treaty.

Tucci spoke of a different attitude among the Russians which is less wasteful than Americans', in that they had a "tremendous pride and respect" for the material objects around them and were more than willing to show the Villanovans their city. He theorized that this pride stemmed from the fact that they have fewer posessions, so they are more willing to keep what they do have in good condition.

Both Tucci and Wall considered it an advantage to have both staff members and alumni accompany the Villanova students. Wall termed the mixed group "more like a human community."

Wall and Tucci also agreed that the group got along well together.

According to Wall, there were optional lectures prior to the trip on such topics as Russian history and art, Soviet life today and philosophy of communism, plus a short course in conversational Russian. Besides teaching the group more about the Soviet Union, the activities, which concluded with a Russian dinner, gave the students, staff and alumni an opportunity to meet one another before the trip.

Wall said there were no problems during the trip and that Noreen Cameron of Campus Ministry, who organized the program with Wall, was also a nurse and was on hand in case any medical problems had arisen.

Wall said about the trip, "It made a difference that we could see it [the Soviet Union] ourselves. Perhaps questions we had previously were answered or new perspectives were afforded us by the experience."

(photo by Monigiovi)

St. Basil's Cathedral in Moscow was one of the landmarks which a group of students, faculty and alumni saw during their trip to the Soviet Union over spring break.

Yearbook color disputed

By STEVE D'ANGELO
Staff Reporter

Progress is continuing on Villanova's yearbook, The Belle Aire, despite controversy, according to assistant editor Tony Medori.

The dispute arose when two students, Joe Zaller and Tim Capone, learned of the decision to make the yearbook's cover green. They began a petition protesting the color and received 365 signatures.

According to Kevin Rose, assistant editor, the covers have already been printed and there is nothing that can be done. A color change at this point in time would be financially devastating, he said.

Rose related that he also received trouble from the administration concerning the color. The administration must approve every aspect of the yearbook's content, but this year several of its members refused to do so, said Rose.

However, the final decision on the matter was left to the editors by the University publication board.

In explanation of this year's "evergreen" color, Rose said that in recent years, the yearbook committee has begun relating the color used for the cover to a central theme running through each edition.

Last year's publication featured a bright red cover and the corresponding theme, "Get A Taste of It."

Rose said that the color was used to get the reader involved, which was the basic idea of the theme. Rose chose not to reveal the theme of the current book, but said that the cover will again be part of the theme.

The move toward using an underlying concept began two years ago, according to Rose, following the attendance of several seminars on the subject, by the yearbook's editorial board.

The 1987 edition was presented with the Gold Crown Award for excellence by the Columbia Scholastic Press Association. According to Rose, only 1 percent of the yearbooks in the country were acknowledged with this honor last year.

In 1988, the yearbook will feature an expanded student life pictorial section of over 100 pages. The entire work is expected to be over 320 pages in length and cost $60. It will be available on schedule the first week in May.

Lindback nominations near

University Press Release

Seniors, juniors and sophomores in all undergraduate day colleges, as well as full-time faculty members of those colleges will nominate candidates for the 28th annual Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation awards for distinguished teaching.

Student voting for these nominations will be held on Tues., April 12 and Wed., April 13, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day.

Commerce and finance students are asked to vote in the Bartley Hall cafeteria while engineering students will vote in their dean's office. Arts and sciences students and nursing students will vote in the main lobby of Connelly Center.

Any student unable to vote from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on one of these two days may vote in Connelly Center on Tues., April 12, from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. Faculty will vote by mail.

Voters will be invited to choose any three full-time faculty members who are not previous winners. The five candidates receiving the highest number of votes will be the official nominees for the Lindback awards.

The Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, will select two names from the list of five, designate them as winners of the awards and present them with checks of $1,000 each at commencement exercises in May.

About 15 other faculty members receiving the highest number of votes will be given honorable mention, and their names will appear in a subsequent issue of the Villanovan.

The Lindback Foundation annually makes grants available to colleges in the Delaware Valley to encourage effective teaching in the undergraduate level. Previous winners of the award, not eligible for re-election by terms of the foundation's regulations, are as follows:

Patrick J. Dougherty, finance, and John J. Gallen, civil engineering, 1961; William C.A. Henry, business law, and Henry L. Rofinot, history, 1962; William G. Driscoll, physics, and James J. Mitchell, English, 1963; Emil Amelotti, mathematics, and Joseph J. Hicks, electrical engineering, 1964; Thomas C. Linahan, mathematics, and Dr. Benedict A. Paparella, philosophy, 1965; Dr. Jose R. De La Vega, chemistry, and Dr. Joseph George Jr., history, 1966.

They include William O'Neill, business administration, and Dr. Robert E. Wilkinson, English, 1967; Joseph W. Ratigan, English, and Robert B. Whiting, mathematics, 1968; Dr. Frank H. Eby Jr., business administration, and Ralph Koliner, civil engineering, 1969; Alvin A. Clay, accounting, and the Rev. Lawrence C. Gallen, biology, 1970; Daniel T. Regan, philosophy, and John J. Tonkinson, business administration, 1971.

Other winners are the Rev. Joseph J. Burns, education, and Dr. Robert W. Langran, political science, 1972; Aslam Abbasi, electrical engineering, and Gerald A. Dougherty, accounting, 1973; John A. McClain, biology, and William J. McNichol, civil engineering, 1974; Dr. Robert D. Lynch, civil engineering, and Dr. Edward V. McAssey, Jr., mechanical engineering, 1975; Dr. Lewis J. Mathers, civil engineering, and John A. Okolowski, physics, 1976; Dr. Robert P. Derstine, accounting and Dr. Edward J. Mathis, economics, 1977.

Past winners also include Dr. Angelo Armenti, Jr., physics, and Dr. Charles E. Zech, economics, 1978; Dr. Brian J. Jones, sociology, and Sebastian M. Rainone, business law, 1979; Dr. Nicholas M. Rongione, business law, and Robert E. White, chemical engineering, 1980; Dr. James J. Clarke, economics, and Dr. Rita M. Ehrmann, mathematics, 1981; Dr. Fritz Nova, political science, and Bernard P. Prusak, religious studies, 1982; Jean M. Maurer, nursing, and Dr. Thomas F. Monahan, accounting, 1983; Dr. John A. Doody, philosophy, and Dr. John F. Stehle, economics, 1984; Wesley E. Schwarz, management, and Dr. Barry S. Young, sociology, 1985; Dr. Rodger Van Allen, religious studies, and Dr. Anthony Zygmont, electrical engineering, 1986; Dr. Andreas Athinaios, economics, and Dr. James J. Schuster, civil engineering, 1987.

PEC report near completion

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

The final report of the Program Evaluation Committee [PEC] will be delivered to University President the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., by the beginning of April, said PEC Chairperson Dr. Angelo Armenti Wednesday.

The approximately 300-page report will contain at least 250 recommendations concerning the University's academic and non-academic programs, said Armenti. The recommendations could affect the funding of a number of academic departments.

The completion of the report will mark the end of the PEC's two-year study and analysis of the University. It has run a wide-ranging series of studies, which have included both internal and external evaluations.

After Driscoll receives the report, it will be distributed to various parts of the University community, said Armenti. A period of study and comment will follow.

The University Senate will vote this semester to accept or reject the report in its entirety, according to Dr. Philip Maurone, Senate chairperson. In addition, the Senate will also make its own recommendations for the report, said Maurone in January.

Finally, Driscoll and the Board of Trustees will make the final decision in July on what changes will be made at the University, based on the PEC recommendations, said Armenti. Although this decision will be made while Driscoll is still in office, the implementation of changes will be made by the new president, he said.

Armenti said he expects that the Board's decision on the PEC recommendations' implementation will be followed, no matter who the president is. He also said that the "first impact" of the recommendations' implementation will not occur until the 1989-90 academic year at the earliest.

More planning to follow

Although the PEC's work will conclude when it finishes its final report, the University's process of self-evaluation will not end. Driscoll announced in November the "implementation of an integrated planning process for the University," according to the December 1987 edition of the Program Evaluation newsletter.

"The University's planning process will incorporate generally accepted elements of strategic planning, especially as they relate to program evaluation ..." according to the newsletter.

National News Notes

Compiled partially from the College Press Service

Racial tensions flare again

Tensions between white and minority students continued to worsen on a number of campuses the first week of March.

At Rutgers State College in Claremont, Okla., white high school students injured about 20 Middle Eastern college students in a series of attacks and fights March 3.

A hit-and-run accident, pellet guns, rocks and eggs were used in the rioting, which reportedly began with an argument between one of the collegians and a group of the high schoolers. Police arrested a 17-year-old for attacking a foreign student with a baseball bat.

At Ramapo College in Mahwah, N.J., housing chief Ronald L. Bollheimer reported on the same day that as many as 20 dormitory residents failed to sign a card saying racism was unacceptable at Ramapo.

Bollheimer was not sure if the "15 to 20" students who did not sign the cards, distributed as part of a school-wide anti-racism program in the wake of a December fight between black and white students, were actively resisting the program.

Students who refused to sign the card could be kicked out of their dorms, he added.

Special Olympics cited

Villanova University's Special Olympics program is preparing a grant proposal for the Kennedy Foundation in order to be underwritten, according to Terise Fusco of the Special Olympics management team.

The proposal is a descriptive presentation of all aspects of the event and will allow the Eastern State Soccer Tournament, which has been held at Villanova for the past 10 years, to be completely underwritten by the foundation.

The Villanova tournament has a volunteer staff of approximately 400 members.

Upon being underwritten, Villanova's program could expand to be used as a model for Special Olympics competitions internationally.

Paper shufflers prosper

It pays to be good at shuffling paper, at least if you are enrolled at a big campus.

The faster and more accurately students at large schools can complete paperwork tasks, the better grades they get, a new study by a Dallas market research firm has found.

At least those are the conclusions of Dallas-based Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service [AIMS], which tracked the academic performance of 115 students attending universities with 20,000 or more undergraduates from 1981 until last year. The participants took a series of aptitude tests that gauged their clerical skills.

First of two-part series

Fraternity investigation underway

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

No final decision has been made regarding sanctions in response to the Nov. 12 accident involving then Pi Kappa Phi pledge Douglas Kelleher, according to the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students.

"It came to our attention pretty quickly that he had been at an off-campus location where 11 out of 14 members of the pledge class were with him. It was clear that he had gone out into Lancaster Avenue against the light and was intoxicated," Stack said.

Terence Dalton, president of Pi Kappa Phi since mid-January, said it was the fraternity which contacted Stack and Gary Bonas, assistant director of Student Activities, about the incident. "From my understanding, that's part of our procedure," he added.

Stack continued, "The unanswered questions are ... because 11 out of 14 people are there doesn't necessarily mean it was a pledge event or that he was necessarily forced to drink anything in any kind of hazing incident, but in light of how serious it was, they did not expect him to live the night."

Stack said he did not get Kelleher's blood count, but he was informed Kelleher was intoxicated by someone who knew the actual count.

He explained that he talked to the whole fraternity, expressed some of his concerns and told them to be aware there might be some sanctions.

Stack said it is possible that the Kelleher case might not have involved a fraternity-sponsored event.

Dalton said that Kelleher had not attended an official fraternity event. "It was not sanctioned by the fraternity ... no one really knows who was there," he said.

Possible cover-up

However, Stack said, "But the appearances the fraternity gave were this: they had a meeting the following day [after the accident]. The meeting was quite secretive, it was all fraternity and the appearance was that the meeting was for the purpose of members getting their story straight so when they would be quizzed by members of the administration, for example, they would all be singing the same tune."

Dalton responded that the meeting was a response to an emergency situation.

"In cases of emergency, you come together as one," he said.

He explained that the primary function of the meeting was to set up times to visit Kelleher, especially when his mother was not there, and to have someone available to keep the fraternity informed of Kelleher's condition. Also, the fraternity had decided to inform the brothers of the incident instead of allowing them to hear rumors about it on campus.

(File photo)

The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, said there might be sanctions against the fraternity Pi Kappa Phi.

Stack continued, "There were a lot of members of the fraternity down at the hospital that night. They were certainly very concerned about Doug, but they were also concerned about the fraternity. There was no doubt they were very worried about him and that was primary ... but there was also a fear 'will the administration feel we're responsible?'

"You sort of pick this up when you're there [at the hospital] and seeing people and half of them are in the bag. That night they were drunk as it was, and their reaction was interesting to watch," he said.

Dalton said that brothers did go to the hospital that night, but he did not think their condition was a state of drunkenness.

"I personally was there, and I don't think my state was drunkenness. It was that of being shook up and concerned ... we were waiting in anticipation," he explained.

Stack said it was the meeting which followed, along with subsequent meetings with members that produced almost identical stories, that gave the appearance that the fraternity was protecting itself.

According to Stack, the fraternity was told they could have their initiation on its scheduled date unless they heard from him, but they could not have it before this time.

"They went ahead and had it before that date. I'm not completely sure why that was, but the impression I have is [that] they had it because they were afraid I was going to take some action in which they wouldn't be able to initiate those members," he said.

According to Dalton, there was confusion over initiation. "Father Stack said that [information about the date of initiation] to two different people. He said one thing to one, and something else to the other," he said.

He continued, "We had the initiation to bring everyone together ... we did not want to alienate anyone. I did not make that decision, but I feel it was in our best interest."

Dalton said Kelleher was initiated at another time.

"Maybe that's not the whole story ... They were giving the impression of a cover-up, and it's quite possible that they had no need to cover anything up, that it was an unfortunate occurrence where students were together watching a hockey game, had too much to drink, and somebody went out in the street and got run over," Stack said.

Kelleher, who has since returned to school, said he has brought no charges against the fraternity. "It was mostly my fault. I went over to watch T.V. with a brother who was my friend. We were watching T.V. and drinking ... I don't remember being that drunk, but I guess I was. That whole week is fuzzy to me," he said.

Kelleher said of the Rutgers incident, "It was irresponsible. With pledging here, there is total control of what's going on. I guess the brothers there got caught up in what's going on and didn't realize when it should stop.

"It's a shame that one bad incident [causes] other fraternities to have to pay for it every day. There's a whole negative attitude towards fraternities," Kelleher said.

Financial aid figures for University disclosed revenues for athletics have decreased by $88,000. However, in the statement of planned expenditures, funding to athletics has increased by $733,000. This amounts to a difference of $645,000 in spending for athletic programs which may be taken from other parts of University funding.

(Continued from page 1)

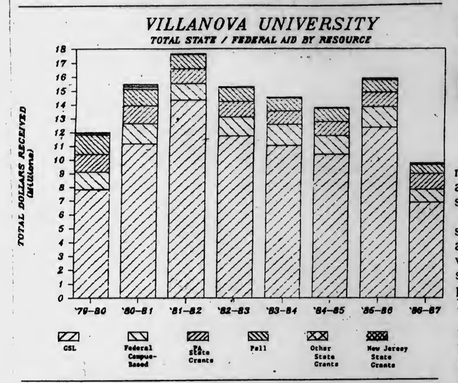
Financial aid criticized



In a memorandum dated June 15, 1987 to the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, attached to a report on financial aid by the Council of Deans, the Rev. Lawrence C. Gallen, O.S.A., vice president for Academic Affairs, wrote, "We are finding that with the decreasing amount of available aid money we are failing to enroll students from low and middle-income families, and we are sometimes enrolling less able students who nonetheless do not require large aid packages.

"As a result, we risk becoming an academic haven for the wealthy and losing the academic and social advantages to be gained from a diverse student body," Gallen concluded.

As part of the report, James E. Nelson, vice president for the regional offices of the College Board, concluded that "from the dramatic drop in numbers of students eligible for federal Pell Grants over the past three years, from 900 extremely needy students to 650, it is clear that the University is enrolling more affluent students each year."

When asked if he felt the present funds allocated for financial aid purposes are sufficient, Switzer responded, "No, and we've been trying to convey that message to the people upstairs for years now."

As emphasized in an article in the March 18 issue of the Villanovan, the issue of increasing the endowment of the University is a problem, according to many administrators and faculty members. This directly affects the financial aid situation in that the funds for these programs are taken from the endowment.

The currently proposed operating budget for the 1988-89 academic year includes a measure to increase student tuition an average of 10.5 percent as well as a recommendation to increase by 20 percent the amount of funds designated for financial aid. Switzer called this proposal "self-defeating" and a "vicious circle," in that some students may eventually pay a higher tuition so that others can receive more financial assistance from the University.

Student need

He revealed that the University was unable to meet a $12 million net need for financial aid of all students for the 1987-88 academic year. "I don't know where this extra money is coming from or how students are paying for it. I do know that it is not unusual for some families to take out a second mortgage on their home these days — and that's above and beyond the call of duty," Switzer explained.

Nelson noted in his evaluation that "many more students borrow — at least three times as many — as at comparable institutions. Most Villanova students borrow the current maximum for undergraduates of $2,500 each year, and it is possible to leave the University with undergraduate and Law School indebtedness of as much as $50,000."

Switzer expressed concerns that the lack of financial aid may have future effects on enrollment and on Villanova's competition with comparable institutions, such as Georgetown University, Catholic University, Boston College and Fairfield University. "The time will come when we may see more and more students choosing to go to other schools because they cannot afford to pay our tuition," Switzer noted.

Other sources of aid

In regards to academic scholarships, he cited the 20 Presidential scholarships offered each year as the only form offered by Villanova. "We have to resolve the financial aid issue before we can establish any more academic scholarships," Switzer added.

Switzer recognized the Guaranteed Student Loan [GSL] as the largest form of federal financial aid available to students. Although these loans now provide $10 to $12 million in aid to Villanova students, new qualifying restrictions established by the federal government may make it more difficult for students to obtain these loans.

The federal government also donates $650,000 in Pell Grants, $555,000 in Perkins loans, $450,000 in work-study programs and $459,000 in Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grants to the University, according to Switzer.

A recent College Press Service article reports that President Ronald Reagan proposes to increase spending for the U.S. Department of Education by 4 percent as well as increase federal financial aid programs by 9 percent. These measures will go into effect if Congress approves his proposed budget for the 1989 fiscal year.

College tuitions increase

By the College Press Service

Tuition rates are going up again next fall, but not quite as steeply as they rose last year, observers say.

Regents and trustees typically set tuitions during their January and February board meetings, where initial reports suggest most students will pay from 6 to 10 pecent more to go to college in 1988-89.

"The rate of increase has been moderating over the last few years," said Meredith Ludwig of the American Association of State Colleges and Universities [AASCU], a Washington, D.C., coalition of public campus leaders.

"For the 1988-89 academic year, we're predicting tuition will go up 6 percent at public schools and 7 percent at private schools," explained Pat Smith of the American Council on Education [ACE]. "But we're currently revising our predictions, and, if nothing changes dramatically, the rate of increase for public college tuition might even be lower than 6 percent."

Tuition costs skyrocketed between the 1976-77 and 1986-87 academic years, noted Norman Brandt of the U.S. Department of Education. During that period, public school tuition increased 130 percent. Private college tuition rose 153 percent.

But Brandt added tuition has been rising more slowly the last two years.

Still, national averages are little consolation to students at schools that will be increasing their tuition by hefty percentages next fall.

Critics like U.S. Secretary of Education William Bennett, of course, have been blasting campuses for pushing tuition up faster than the inflation rate, while educators reply Bennett is ignoring how expensive it is to run a college.

"Costs are high, but colleges aren't ripping us off either," said Brandt.

The costs of goods and services colleges buy, said Julianne Still Thrift of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities [NAICU], have increased faster than consumer goods the government monitors when determining inflation rates.

Utility rates, maintenance and construction costs have risen dramatically in recent years, she said, and colleges have no other choice but to pass those costs on to students as state and federal governments contribute less money than in the past.

"State legislatures were willing to let tuition rise to improve or protect the quality of their institutions. But they don't want to raise taxes [to raise more money to help colleges pay for the improvements]," ACE's Smith observed.

But states facing economic problems in recent years have "been doing better," said Ludwig, and as state funding increases, tuition hikes decrease.

Colleges also used the early '80s — a period of low inflation — to increase faculty and staff salaries. Between 1973 and 1981, faculty members had lost 28 percent of their actual spending power, said Thrift, and even after the recent increases, few have regained past spending power.

Most schools, said Ludwig, feel the salary increases and capital improvement projects of recent years will be enough to tide them over for awhile, and, combined with higher rate funding, tuition will stablilize.

Campuses also need to raise tuition to get money to provide financial aid to their poorer students, he said.

"Institutions now have to offer aid from their own sources" because the federal government no longer supplies enough money to get students through college, Brandt contended.

527-4330

FAST FREE DELIVERY!!
WITH $6.00 MINIMUM ORDER

LA NOVA PIZZA COMPANY
789 Lancaster Ave. • Villanova, PA
Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 11 a.m.-1 a.m. • Fri. & Sat. 11 a.m.-3 a.m.
Owned and operated by Vincent Amendola, former owner of Vincent's Pizza in Overbrook
Considered the best Pizzeria in West Philadelphia

NOW HIRING

PIZZA	Large	Medium	Small
Cheese	6.15	4.75	3.75
Pepperoni	7.45	5.75	4.55
Mushrooms	7.45	5.75	4.55
Sausage	7.45	5.75	4.55
Ground Beef	7.45	5.75	4.55
Green Peppers	7.45	5.75	4.55
Onions	7.45	5.75	4.55
Anchovies	7.45	5.75	4.55
2nd topping	1.10	.80	.65
3rd topping	.90	.60	.50
Special	10.50	8.50	7.30
White Pizza w/ch.	6.15	4.75	3.75
Broccoli Cheese	7.45	5.75	4.55

Stromboli	Lg.	Sm.
Italian	8.85	5.75
Pepperoni	7.50	5.00

Sicilian
(one size only)
$10.50

Steaks Available Soon!!

HOAGIES

ITALIAN SPECIAL 3.30
(imported ham, genoa salami, capicolla, provolone cheese and prosciutto, topped with pure olive oil and spices)
ITALIAN HOAGIE 2.95
HAM & CHEESE 2.80
PROVOLONE & SALAMI 2.80
TUNA 3.10
TURKEY 3.30
ROAST BEEF 3.60
CHEESE 2.60

(All our meats are delicatessen quality!)
Sandwiches also available HOT!!

Tax is not included

MONDAY & WEDNESDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 pizza any size
Get 2 toppings for the price of 1!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

TUESDAY & THURSDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 large pizza
get two 16oz. sodas FREE!!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

WITH THIS COUPON
$1.50 OFF
SICILIAN PIZZA!

FRIDAY, SATURDAY & SUNDAY
Buy a large pizza
with one topping
Get one FREE liter of soda
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

Senate to vote on budget

(Continued from page 1)

of academic office facilities, the upgrading of classrooms and offices, the construction of a health care facility and the expansion and relocation of parking areas.

In the statement of planned revenues, tuition and fees has been increased by $6,167,000. Athletics revenue has decreased by $88,000. However, in the statement of planned expenditures, funding to athletics has increased by $733,000.

The committee recommended that the Senate approve the budget as prepared by the administration by a vote of 7-2, with one abstention.

Student protest

In the March 18 edition of the Villanovan, Brach said that Student Government's protest against the budget was centered around the financial aid issue and the budget process.

"Everyone is willing to admit we're in a financial aid crisis, and everyone knows the solution is endowment, and that you can't raise the endowment through tuition money," he explained.

Brach also said that the central flaw of the budget process is a lack of effective priority establishment.

According to Terise Fusco, Student Government vice president, Student Government plans to have at least 100 students protest at the Senate meeting to show their support for defeating the budget.

She said that she has spoken to the Panhellenic Council, the Interfraternity Council, the Association of Commuting Students and the Villanova Student Union in order to gather student support at the meeting.

"We're especially trying to get students there so the faculty feels like [it] should defeat the budget for the sake of the students that they educate," she said.

Fusco said that Brach and John B. Lewis, student senator, have been lobbying for support of their cause and encouraging other student senators to also lobby.

She noted that Student Government has the support of all 13 student senators in defeating the budget. Student Government must obtain more than 50 percent of the Senate vote, or the support of at least 20 senators, in order to defeat the budget.

She said that Brach and Lewis plan to propose "some sort of restructuring of the [budget] process. That proposal is going to sions. She said that when sufficient data was presented to the administrators, appropriate action was taken by them.

(photo by Martinez)

Alvin A. Clay, Senate budget committee chairperson and dean of the College of Commerce and Finance.

Fusco added that she hopes the other faculty and administrative senators will help to reject the proposal.

Faculty reaction to budget

"At the moment, my sense is that the faculty is not inclined to vote it [the budget proposal] down," said Dr. John A. Doody, philosophy chairperson and chairperson of the faculty council.

He also said he did not feel the faculty senators would be willing to vote down the budget solely because of the tuition increase, if the faculty increment was assured. However, he said he agreed with Student Government that the University needs to increase its financial aid.

According to Doody, the University has to determine whether a tuition increase would give it comparable status with other competitive schools. He added that Villanova does not want to exclude people from attending because of lack of funds.

He then suggested that the University "create enormous pools of financial scholarship funds for those people who don't have the family resources to come here."

He also said that the 8 percent increase in faculty salary is a small step in helping the University reach comparability with other competitive institutions. "The faculty needs to continue to come closer to approximating the salary of those schools [with] which we have found ourselves to be comparable," he explained.

No harassment policy

(Continued from page 1)

length of time]." Martin said he will be following up on the law firm's progress with the proposal. He could not be reached for further comment Tuesday.

A principal factor for the two-year length of time is because the law firm was waiting for pending decisions in cases on the state and federal levels and for impending changes in state statutes and regulations on sexual harassment, said Cullen.

Both Immerwahr and committee member Dr. Mary Desmond, biology professor, expressed disappointment that progress on the procedure has come so slowly.

Martin noted that there is a general University procedure for grievances which can be applied in cases of sexual harassment.

Immerwahr acknowledged this procedure, saying that it is a way of dealing with harassment problems and that a specific policy on harassment is "not absolutely essential" to deal with such charges.

Benefits of policy and procedure

He added, however, that a specific policy and procedure to deal with cases of sexual harassment would "emphasize the University's commitment to creating an environment where men and women could work and study in a professional way."

Martin echoed Immerwahr's comment, saying that a specific University policy would be a statement by the employer that the proscribed behavior is not tolerated.

Immerwahr added that a policy and procedure would also "make it easier for problems [of sexual harassment] to be detected and dealt with in a confidential way, before it gets out of hand."

The policy and procedure are important because people who may have grievances would "have well-defined procedures to follow through on their perceived grievances," said Martin.

Finally, Immerwahr said that the policy and procedure would "protect the rights of the alleged victims and alleged perpetrators of sexual harassment."

"A good and fair policy and procedure protects the institution as well as all the individuals in the institution," said Dr. Barbara Wall, O.P., philosophy professor and committee member.

How the committee started

Immerwahr said he became concerned with the issue of sexual harassment after hearing a number of accounts of harassment from part-time faculty members, who were being made uncomfortable "in an unprofessional way."

In fall 1985, Immerwahr, Desmond and Wall spoke to the Rev. Lawrence C. Gallen, O.S.A., vice president for Academic Affairs, about the issue. Immerwahr said Gallen was "sensitized and energized" to the issue at that time by an incident involving a person of "high-level responsibility" at the University.

"I felt that the administrators involved were most supportive of the policy and in dealing with the issue," said Wall.

Desmond also commended Driscoll and Gallen "for taking action on examples of outrageous harassment" on specific occasions. She said that when sufficient data was presented to the administrators, appropriate action was taken by them.

Neither Gallen nor Driscoll was available for comment Tuesday.

After the meeting with Gallen, a committee was formed in 1986.

Off-campus housing

(Continued from page 3)

people may live together. Tredyffrin allows up to four unrelated people to live together.

Stack said that the inconsideration of the students "will prompt neighbors to call the zoning officer. If they were more considerate, the zoning officer would appear less frequently."

When students are choosing a place to live, Faraci said they "can't be too choosy because there aren't that many places open to them."

Faraci's office is in 207 Dougherty Hall.

Educational Opportunities

Air Force

The Air Force is looking for qualified nurses in the fields of medical/surgical, obstetrics, pediatrics, mental health and anesthetics.

Being a nurse in the Air Force offers one the chance to work in challenging positions with leadership and responsibility, according to a press release.

Nurses also receive benefits, including medical and dental care, 30 days of paid vacation per year, retirement plans and the chance to travel around the world.

To learn more about nursing opportunities in the Air Force, contact Major Kathryn L. Sherman at 2201 Route 38, Suite 414 (Executive Building), McGuire AFB, N.J. 08641 or call collect (609) 667-1860.

* * *

Lecture

Dr. Robert J. Kriegel will present methods for college students to handle stress at the University of Pennsylvania April 5 at 7 p.m.

The lecture, which is free for college students, will assist students in analyzing stressful situations and recommend ways to deal with them.

Kriegel has devoted the past 16 years to studying the best techniques for coping with stress and is presently in the middle of a national tour.

* * *

Summer study

The University of San Francisco is offering its fourth annual summer study program in China. The program, which runs from June 23 to Aug. 10, will offer Introductory Mandarin and Introduction to Contemporary Chinese Culture and Economics.

The program also includes a 10-day tour of northern and western China, including Beijing and the Great Wall.

The program will cost $1,830, which includes tuition, room, board and the 10-day trip. In addition, round-trip airfare from San Francisco will be approximately $900.

For more information, contact the Office of Special Programs at the University of San Francisco, Ignatian Heights, San Francisco, Calif., 94117-1080, or call (415) 666-6848 by March 30.

* * *

Scholarship

The Paralyzed Veterans of America [PVA]/Youth for Vietnam Veterans is accepting applications for its $1,500 scholarship grants. Applicants' academic record, extracurricular and community activities and financial need will be considered.

Applications and eligibility requirements can be obtained by contacting the Scholarship Committee c/o Paralyzed Veterans of America, 801 18th St., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006 or your nearest PVA chapter.

The deadline for applications is May 31.

* * *

Blue Key elects officers

By LAURA STEVENS
Staff Reporter

The Blue Key Society recently completed the annual change of its officers and members.

On Monday night, the society met to elect its new officers for the 1988-1989 year. They include President Ed Walter, Internal Vice President Carol Brennan, External Vice President Jean-Marie Corbett, Secretary Sherry Van Ginhoven and Treasurer Staci Golub.

The election occurred after the change in Blue Key members, which was announced some weeks ago. Twenty-seven new members were chosen from some 270 applicants, Walter reported.

The society also made some changes in the process of screening and choosing applicants.

Walter explained that while the group did not completely overhaul the old system, it "studied the feedback from past years and reacted to the feedback with minor changes. Basically, the system is the same as always, but we improved on what we did last year."

The selection process followed the traditional route of a written application and interview and a selection of some applicants for a second round of interviews. Applicants were notified of their acceptance or rejection by letter.

Walter pinpointed most of the changes as being in the preparation of the interviewing committees. "We tried to give the recruitment committees more preparation," he explained. He was satisfied with the results of this year's process, but predicted that "more changes will probably be needed next year, as they always are."

The main activities of the Blue Key Society are service-oriented to the Villanova community.

AFRICAN SUMMER SAFARI

TARANGIRE NATIONAL PARK • GREAT RIFT VALLEY • SERENGETI PLAINS • NGORONGORO VOLCANO CRATER • LAKE MANYARA • MOUNT KILIMANJARO • ARUSHA PARK • MASAI TRIBESMEN • RARE BIRDS AND WILDLIFE AND MORE.

PRIVATE CAMP WITH THATCHED ROOF TENTS • SWIMMING POOL • ALL AMENITIES AND MEALS • PRIVATE LAND ROVERS WITH OVERHEAD HATCHES • GUIDES AND DRIVERS • GROUPS OR INDIVIDUALS • JULY AND AUGUST 1988

for more information call or write to:

MUTTONTOWN TRAVEL CORP.
Vicki Lazarus 516-921-8040
6800 JERICHO TURNPIKE • SYOSSET, NY 11791

the Villanovan

201 Dougherty Hall
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa. 19085

Johanne C. Sharp
Editor in Chief

Janet Diefenbach
Managing Editor

Natalie McKenna
Associate Editor

Page 8 March 25, 1988

Act today; reject V.U. budget

What are the real priorities of the Villanova administration? Do their primary concerns include the best interests of the student body, as well as the promotion of a high education that is available to all talented and deserving students, regardless of race or financial status? The answer, upon examination of the proposed budget for the 1988-89 academic year, is no.

The budget calls for an average increase in student tuition of 10.5 percent and sorely lacks necessary improvements in an admittedly dismal financial aid situation.

In a memo to the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, the Rev. Lawrence C. Gallen, O.S.A., vice president for Academic Affairs, observes that "we are failing to enroll students from low and middle-income families" because of the serious depletion of financial aid.

He continues that "we risk becoming an academic haven for the wealthy and losing the academic and social advantages to be gained from a diverse student body."

We must not allow this to happen. If the administration continues to raise tuition without providind with additional funds for financial aid, we risk becoming elitist and homogenized.

It was also recently released that equal amounts of money are allocated to financial aid programs and athletic scholarships, although the former includes over 1,000 students and the latter only 200 students. This example clearly illustrates the dire need for additional financial aid funds, as well as indicates the priorities of the University. The athletic programs are undoubtedly necessary and do many positive things for the school, but is the administration more concerned with the image of the nebulous term "Villanova," or the individuals involved in its process?

The refusal by the athletic department, specifically Dr. Theodore Aceto, director of Athletics, to comment on these figures is disturbing. This sort of information should not be hidden from the student body, for it is their tuition money that pays for athletic scholarships.

This is also alarming in that such serious matters of the University are manipulated and controlled behind closed doors, out of the reach of the students.

The true nature of a university is to educate its student body without such superficial and misguided worries about prestige, a nice-looking pavilion or high-profile athletic programs which attract national attention and dollars from alumni and heads of large corporations. These concerns are important, but secondary.

Villanova University is an institution of academic excellence, not a big business. For a very long time now, the administration has been calling the shots, but the truth is that Villanova is the students' university. The administration has been neglecting our needs, and the time for silence is over.

Apathy mars race

Once again, apathy reigns at Villanova. The spirit of competition has dimmed as we see only two real campaign races in the upcoming student elections.

There are no students running for the senatorial positions in nursing, engineering or the law school. Students vying for the three commerce and finance and one science senatorial positions are running unopposed. There are only two Student Government presidential candidates. The only race that will show much competition will be the race for arts senator.

Maybe this is a sign of the lack of respect the students have for the Senate. Maybe students feel that their voices do not count.

Unfortunately, students are bypassing important opportunities to make a difference in the University Senate.

Letters to the Editor
Anti-Apartheid stance backed

To the Editor:

It was refreshing to read Kim Howze's op-ed piece on Apartheid in last week's Villanovan. As she says, we are all "members of an international community" and, as such, we all bear responsibility "to voice our protest."

But what can the Villanova community do to end Apartheid in South Africa? We must make our voices heard. We must continue to protest and we must demand that economic sanctions be applied by our government.

Protest is effective; it does work. It is our moral responsibility to make it work now. Economic sanctions also work. It took just two weeks of sanctions to topple Panama's regime.

Now is the time to end Apartheid in South Africa and now is the time to apply swift and effective means to achieve that end.

Robert L. Pigeon department of history

Letters policy

The Villanovan will print "Letters to the Editor" received at its offices in 201 Dougherty prior to the weekly deadline, Tuesday at 2 p.m. All letters must be typed and double spaced. The editors will withhold a name upon request, but all letters must be signed and should include the writer's telephone number. Because of limited space, not all letters can be printed. Others may be edited. Letters may be sent by mail to: the Villanovan, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. 19085.

EDITORS
News: Noel E. Falco, Dante J. Scala
Features: R. Michael Bullotta, Susan E. Corcoran
Entertainment: Kathryn Quigley
Sports: John Ricco, Doug Scancarella

ASSISTANT EDITORS
News: Kevin C. Heil, Jennifer Reidy, Sharon A. Waters
Features: Jacqueline Gentile
Entertainment: Allen Ambrosino, Jeff Gillies
Sports: Jim Bowman, John F. Swift
Managing Editor: Andrea LoCascio

Layout Director: Eileen McGinley
Art Editor: Andrew Bullion
Interns: Cynthia B. Bosnian, Kathleen Reichner
Photography: Dana Shafie
Greek Page: Jill DeForte, Steve DelDuco
Advertising Director: Jim Duffy
Subscriptions/Billing: Pam Salter
F.Y.I. Coordinator: Colette Mitchell
Personals/Classified: Paul Iacovoni
Advisor: June W. Lytel-Murphy

Staff: Richard Abraham, Michael Aimetta, Lucinda Alfieri, John Baker, Karla Beckner, Tom Brugger, Monica Byrne, Diane P. Carman, Bill Carr, Russ Ceccola, Mary E. Charest, John Chepega, Diane A. Cilione, Andrew Cinelli, Joanne L. Conrad, Wayne Creekill, Jim Crossan, Steve D'Angelo, Tim Daniele, Joe DeFulvio, Michael Denison, G.J. Donnelly, Diane Dragonette, Bob Duggan, Chris Elgen, Kristen Fallan, Paul Fraiamico, Debbie Gross, Kevin A. Hecht, Karen Iovino, Luci Jankowski, Michael Jones, Theresa Jones, Bridget Kellecher, Terry Kelly, Barbara Kresch, Irene V. Langran, Jackie Lanza, Andrew Mathis, Dave Maylish, Elliott McEldowney, Joe McGowan, Carolyn Mirabile, Steve Montresor, Coleen Moore, Dan Moriarty, Sharon Neubauer, Mary O'Neill, Christopher Pepe, Stephen Powers, Dana Rao, Siobhan Roder, Kristine Ryan, Stephen J. Schlager, Michelle Shanahan, Steve Shifaldi, Tara Siligato, Amy Spencer, Maureen Stapleton, Laura Stevens, Elana Rose Starr, Amgad Subourgi, T. Patton Trimble, Christine A. Wnuk, MaryJo Yannacone.

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the administration, faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors.

The Villanovan is published Fridays, 10 issues a semester. Circulation: 8,500. Subscriptions are available at $17.50 per year. For advertising information contact the office 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, 215-645-7207.

The Villanovan reserves the right to refuse any ad inserttions due to questionable content and space limitations. The deadline to place advertising is 12 p.m. the Tuesday prior to publication.

The Villanovan is the newspaper of the University of Villanova.

Stop injustices of Israeli soldiers

By JOSEPH BETZ

Eighteen-year old Israeli soldiers use two by fours to break the arms and crush the bones in the hands of Palestinian youths. The Palestinians had created road-blocks in their own neighborhoods to stop the patrolling Israeli jeeps and had thrown stones as the soldiers approached. The beatings are methodical. The Palestinians are caught then spread eagled, or tied, or taken into the privacy of nearby buildings to be beaten there in secret and at the soldiers' leisure.

But wait — these cruel and unusual thrashings are causing concern in the rear. The Israeli government is sending immediate help. Psychologists have been sent to the scene to provide emotional first-aid lest the strain on the young soldiers prove disabling! Yes, it is true, Israeli soldiers, some of whom are issued axe-handles as standard equipment, have been beating Palestinians' bodies into pulp, several times beating their victims to death, and the Israeli government responds by sending psychologists to rescue the soldiers from their guilt!

But then, this is a rightist, hard-line Likud government policy, and Likud Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir vows that the Palestinians will achieve nothing by violence, and this even as he tries to cow them into docility by violence. And what had the Palestinians sought to achieve? Autonomy, political self-determination, a natural right due all peoples and a right specifically granted in the Camp David accords of 1978 to the one and one half million Arabs in the occupied territories.

The Israelis had taken Jerusalem, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in the 1967 Six Day War. As Israel and Egypt made peace in 1979, there was provision for autonomy for these Palestinians within five years, and for Palestinian statehood eventually. No autonomy has been granted and nine years have now passed.

Late last year an Arab summit conference gave all its attention to settling the Iran-Iraq war. This left the Palestinians feeling ignored and neglected. Demonstrations which turned to riots as Israelis approached, began Dec. 9 and are now in their third month and getting stronger. The people want their own government and their own political life in their own land. Israel refuses.

When asked by newsmen why he had not publicly condemned the beatings, President Reagan replied that "there is evidence that these riots are not spontaneous and home grown." But the Israelis know better than to use the naive tactic of blaming outside agitators. Defense Minister Rabin grants that these demonstrations were spontaneous. Rabin says, (N.Y. Times, 1/9/88), "the difference from experiences in the past is that, whoever started it, it started without any instructions from outside. It took the P.L.O. leadership two to four days to catch up."

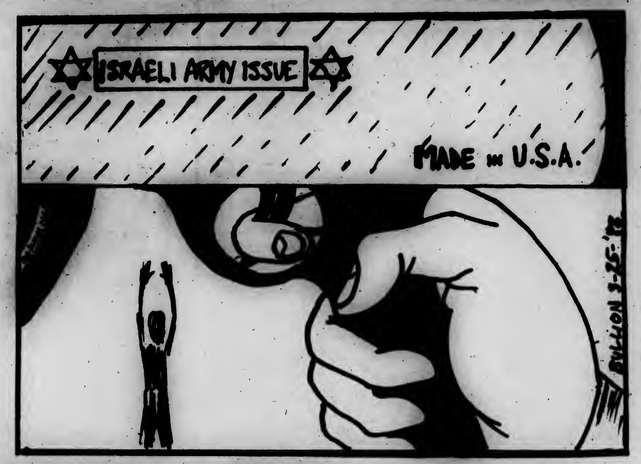
When young and untrained soldiers do the job of riot control which experienced, specialized police should be doing, force is used stupidly, excessively and needlessly. Rabin testified to the U.S. public that the first shot-injured stone-throwers were young and he first experimented with the use of rubber bullets before he chose beatings, clubbing and kicking, as his new policy. But his January directive to his soldiers to quell the demonstrations with "force, might, beatings" has unleashed savagery on the Palestinians.

In the first three days after the order, more than 200 Palestinians were treated in hospitals for broken bones or other serious beating injuries. A Feb. 12 Philadelphia Inquirer article about the visit of four American doctors to tour 12 Palestinian hospitals reported that "one doctor said she had found evidence of at least 3,500 injuries from beatings." This savagery has not ended. As late as Feb. 25, Rabin defended the beatings. "This policy is going to continue," he defiantly told reporters.

Decent people everywhere are angry and there is both strong Israeli and strong American Jewish criticism of the beatings. The Labor opposition to Likud would negotiate with the Palestinians. Senior statesman Abba Eban opposes the beatings policy.

Even more critical are the Israeli pacifistic movements, "Peace Now," and "There is a Limit" (Yesh Gvul). Yesh Gvul announces, "We can no longer bear the burden of shared responsibility for this moral and political depravation." The Israeli Attorney General, Yosef Harish, has called the directives to give such beatings "clearly ... illegal orders," and has told the soldiers to disobey them. But the embarrassment to the nation continues. International Red Cross officials on the scene say they have proof that three Arabs have been beaten to death and demand that the beatings stop.

Many American Jews have protested. The president of the American Jewish Congress, Theodore Mann of Philadelphia, told reporters in Tel Aviv that, "the current policy of force and beatings ... is regarded by us as inhumane and simply unacceptable."



Two hundred and fifty members of the Philadelphia Jewish community denounced the beatings in a paid ad in the Jewish Exponent in mid-February. Twelve American Congressmen met with the Israeli ambassador in Washington to voice their concerns. Rabbi Alexander M. Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations, calls the beatings "an offense to the Jewish spirit."

Israel is the largest recipient of American foreign aid, over $3 billion a year, and the weapons used to kill the more than 70 Palestinians are often made in the United States. Palestinians hate us for first preaching democracy and decency and then supporting governments which deny them. You and I hold the basic political office in our republic, citizen, and with our power and the rights of freedom goes the responsibility to act and speak to stop American support of repression.

A letter to the Israeli Ambassador might be a good beginning to this first day of the rest of our political lives. Please, for decency's sake, pick up your pen and write:

Ambassador Moshe Arad
The Israeli Embassy
3514 International Drive N.W.
Washington, D.C. 20008

Joseph Betz is a professor in the department of philosophy.

Dukakis' credibility questioned

By DANIEL KELLIHER

It really sends a chill up my spine to think of Michael Dukakis sitting in the Oval Office (in any chair save that reserved for visitors). It is really incredible to see the Governor from Massachusetts passed off as a legitimate presidential candidate. Hearty congratulations should be given to his public relations people, who along with members of the highly biased mass media (ie. Dan Rather) have painted a rather neat picture of the ultra-liberal.

MICHAEL DUKAKIS Washom

For the most part Dukakis's claim to fame, the only thing that gives him presidential standing, is the economic recovery of Massachusetts. It is not coincidental that this recovery took place during the Dukakis administration. Anyone who followed Republican Ed King would have reaped the same rewards because it is King that deserves true congratulations.

You may be asking yourself who this King person is, and if you are familiar with Massachusetts voting tendencies, you would be astonished by the fact that he is a Republican (in the 1972 presidential elections Nixon carried every state but one ... Massachusetts).

The reason Bay Staters revolted and elected a Republican was because the state's economy was in such bad shape. The governor during this term, as you may have guessed was Michael Dukakis.

The story continues with King passing a major tax-cut measure known as Proposition 2½ in 1980. This initiative, which is credited as being a major contributor to the state's economic boom, was opposed by none other than Dukakis.

Another major contributor to the economy of Massachusetts was the Reagan defense build up so heavily criticized by Dukakis. While ranking 12th in population, Massachusetts receives the fourth largest share of the Pentegon budget. In this instance Dukakis can have his cake and eat it too, because he can rant against defense spending to better his image with the voters, while the state's treasury remains full.

It may seem hard to believe that if King was such a good governor and Dukakis was so bad, then how could Dukakis have been elected to a second term. The answer is simple. The election of King was an aberration brought on by hard times economically. When things brightened, the voters in Massachusetts returned to their normal voting habits and elected a Democrat.

It is unfortunate that he was re-elected not only for Massachusetts, but for the rest of the nation. This may seem a little melodramatic, but Dukakis as governor instituted a policy whereby hardened criminals, even convicted murderers, are released from prison on weekend furlough.

One prisoner who decided to take an extended vacation from the corrections system was William H. Horton Jr. He ended up in a Maryland prison serving two life terms after raping a pregnant woman and stabbing her boyfriend. With governors like this, who needs enemies?

It is unfortunate that facts like these are not brought to light by the mass media, so as to prevent shams like Dukakis from ever getting as far in the national political arena as he has.

Daniel Kelliher is a senior accounting major and a member of the College Republicans.

Phil Brach endorses a candidate

By PHILIP BRACH

My year as president has been a very productive one, with making strides on all issues addressed.

These challenges were difficult to tackle — had I working knowledge of how to run the government before taking the lead role we would be an even stronger force. The most qualified president understands the system and the role of the leader of this system.

After serving with Terise Fusco in the cabinet of Joe Allman's administration, I asked her to act as my vice president. Fusco is devoted and effective within the system. Not only has Fusco spent one year working on the issues, but she has also spent his past year leading others' work on the issues. Fusco understands the challenges that the presidency entails and in this sense would make an even better president than I have been.

Philip Brach is a junior marketing major and Student Government president.

Villanovan column criticized

To the Editor:

As a Villanova student, I have become very exasperated with our beloved school newspaper. Due to the biased and often insensitive writing of the Villanovan, I had not read anything from our newspaper for quite some time now.

This past week, I decided to give the Villanovan another chance. I did not get very far before I was forced to put it down again. While reading the new feature entitled "Advice from Butch Baxter," I became rather inflamed with one of the articles which described a "Rambo-like" clergymember who was behaving irregularly in the Church.

After I read the advice column, I did not enjoy it at all — rather, I was quite disturbed by what I read. Humor is one thing, but when it is carelessly directed towards a holy institution such as the Church, there can be no humor in it.

Villanova is a Catholic university and as a student, I believe that our school newspaper should present an appropriate attitude in its style of writing.

In my opinion, Butch Baxter does not come close to fulfilling the needed requirements to be humorous. It lacks the very essentials of good taste, good sense and good ideas. I see no value for this kind of humor, and I see no need for Butch Baxter.

Richard A. Baird
Class of 1990

Reader disagrees

To the Editor:

Last week in your "For what it's worth ... Commentary," you wrote of the recent break up of The Cars. You state that it is unimportant since the band has not had recorded any good material for quite some time. Furthermore you say they have not recorded a good album since their first one.

As a Cars fan, I take exception to this unfounded remark. What evidence do you use to support this statement?

Admittedly, Panorama in 1980 was a poor album, but what of Shake It Up and Heartbeat City, not to mention Candy O and The Cars Greatest Hits. Do you have any taste in music? As I remember it, most music critics gave those albums high marks. Certainly they were successful.

Do you base your commentary on The Cars most recent album? Although Door to Door did not produce any real chart busting hits, it was a well crafted album. Each song led into the next as is true of every Cars album.

Richard Ball
Class of 1990

Quote of Note

You never know what is enough until you know what is more than enough.

William Blake poet

On Campus

By Dana Spatle

This week's Villanovan asks, "What April Fool's Day prank would you like to pull on your favorite teacher or University staff member?

"Put EX-LAX into the security guards' coffee."

Bob Held electrical engineering
senior

"Reverse the treadles in the parking lots."

Chris Toto mechanical engineering
senior

"Hide Fr. Hagen's glasses so he will miss a day of class."

George Troilo
English
junior

"Give him [Father Hagen] an official memo inviting him to lunch with Father Driscoll during our class time."

Dave Collins accounting
sophomore

"Peel the letters off of the V.U. security vans, which will completely confuse the guards."

Andrew Blankenstine electrical engineering
senior

Features

Spring break: lessons from the street

By
ANNE MARIE LOMBARDI
Staff Reporter

"Imagine the worst neighborhood you have ever seen. Picture burned-out remains of buildings, abandoned cars in garbage-filled lots, steel bars and iron gates covering the doors and windows of the buildings left standing. The elevated train line roars overhead, and even on the sunniest day, the streets seem dismal."

This was the first thing I was told about Kensington, Philadelphia, where I spent six days during spring break. With such a picturesque image in my head, I could not wait to send picture postcards home to my friends. I could almost hear myself saying, "Yes, this is the place where I got to preserve my chalk-white complexion." I began to wonder why I was not confirming hotel reservations in Cancun.

You may have seen signs posted all over campus advertising for volunteers to work in the inner city. Sponsored by the Center for Peace and Justice, volunteers lived at a shelter or soup kitchen, working daily with the other volunteers to help relieve some of the distress of urban poverty.

Twenty Villanova volunteers were divided into two groups who went to the St. Francis Inn and the Catholic Worker House, both located in Kensington, a neighborhood in the north-east corner of Philadelphia.

I was put into a group of 11 volunteers that reported to the St. Francis Inn. Before we left, I had no idea where we would actually be living for the week. All I could imagine was a huge, gloomy shelter like the ones in movies. I was more than a little surprised to find that we were staying in a comfortable, warm house owned along with the inn by the Franciscans.

The inn, which has been in existence for seven years, is run by a Franciscan order of priests and nuns. The inn is funded strictly by donations from area supermarkets, churches and charitable organizations and receives no aid from the government. It started as merely a soup kitchen, established to provide food for the hungry. Since 1981, the organization has expanded to include a womens' and mens' shelter and a thrift shop.

We were assigned, along with one of the Franciscan brothers or sisters, to specific committees each day. The chores of the day included preparing and serving the morning meal, picking up donations of food and clothing from various locations in the city, working in the thrift shop and preparing the evening meal. All the committees gathered at 4:30 p.m. to serve the evening meal to the crowd of 200-300 people that came every night.

Serving the evening meal allowed the volunteers to get to know the people that frequented the St. Francis. The crowd was comprised mostly of men, although there was a good number of single women and women with children.

The ages ranged from infancy to those in their sixties. Many of the people suffered from mental illness, and alcohol and drug addiction problems. Some simply could not make ends meet on their wages or welfare checks.

After a few days, I became used to the environment. One of the Franciscan brothers told our group that you "become desensitized to the environment after awhile. When fights break out in the streets, you don't run to the window to see what's going on. When you hear something like a gun shot, there's a good chance that it will be a gun shot." It was not altogether wise to walk the streets alone, even in the broad daylight.

(Continued on page 12)

Campus Clip

(Staff Photo)

Bronzed V.U. students were here celebrating in Mickey's Bar in Montego Bay, Jamaica after the Cats beat Pittsburgh.

Days party!

By CYNTHIA B. BOSNIAN
Staff Reporter

On March 19, the Blue Key Society sponsored the second Days party, held at Popcorn's nightclub in King of Prussia. Over 530 seniors celebrated the 64 days until graduation. The third and final Days party will be held during Senior Week.

According to the Director of Student Activities Lucyna J. Gorski, Popcorn's has proven to be an ideal spot because of its convenient location and cooperation in working with the University.

Many seniors have wondered why more Days parties have not been scheduled, to which Gorski has replied that the most any class has had is four. Furthermore, because scheduling is much more difficult in the spring, the decision was reached to have only two this semester.

The party officially kicked off at 5 p.m., but the place did not start hopping until about 7 p.m. Although the bars remained the attraction for some, the dance floor drew the largest crowd. There was hardly any room to move, let alone dance to the thunder of the "pumped up" volume.

Several seniors agreed that it was truly amazing to see so many fellow classmates whem they had never seen even after four years. Even so, I am sure I am not alone when I say that a feeling of togetherness filled the air. How many other times do you really get to party with just your fellow seniors?

Quad erupts with Wildcat spirit

By WENDY HERMACH
Staff Reporter

I was alone in my room watching the tournament game Sunday night and trying fruitlessly to get a paper done. But the game just got too exciting. Soon I was cheering by myself. The Cats won.

Actually, the roar was almost dull at first, then louder and louder. Bedlam. Mayhem. The quad was alive. I threw on my shoes and flew outside. Proximity to hysteria is just one of the benefits of living in the quad.

Once outside I was bombarded from all sides by toilet paper rolls. I had not known there was that much toilet paper on the whole campus, not to mention Sheehan and Sullivan alone. After all, living in Sheehan, I can remember more than one Sunday morning awakening to the rude truth of a real shortage. Maybe some of those south campers brought some up with them for the festivities. But, that is beside the point when firecrackers are flashing and bottle rockets are lighting up the sky and the stairways of Sullivan.

We chanted every cheer we could think of and made up new things to yell about the upcoming game against Kentucky, while forgetting how cold it was. Some people brought refreshments to take away the chill. Eventually the crowd broke up, only temporarily of course, until the team arrived.

By 1 a.m. the word spread all over campus, and even more people were at the duPont Pavilion to welcome back the team. Unfortunately, the team did not arrive until two. Again, total bedlam prevailed.

Climbing on the building and the trees seemed to be the thing to do to keep your mind off the temperature, which must have dropped about two million degrees. When the buses pulled up, I pushed my way to the front and cheered until I had absolutely no voice left.

Too soon the fun was over, and regardless of my chants of "No Classes! No Classes!" the alarm ruddily awakened me in time for class. Unsure that campus was actually that alive last night, I looked out the window, and only reams of toilet paper remained. And there was even some left in the bathroom. Boy, quad life is great!

Student's homework pays off

By KRIS RYAN
Staff Reporter

Mark Hirsch is one who takes his classroom assignments very seriously. A senior entrepreneurial management and finance major at Wharton Business School, Hirsch followed through on his management class assignment and not only completed the required "mock" business plan for a particular industry, but tested its validity by actually using it to open up his own store. As a result, Hirsch now is the owner of Mount Olympus fraternity and sorority sporting goods store at 3616 Lancaster Ave. in Philadelphia.

Hirsch chose a Greek sporting goods store because he noticed a gap for such an industry in the Philadelphia area. As a fraternity brother, Hirsch observed that the usual suppliers for Greek organizations, independent salesmen, took from four weeks to two months for the deliverence of their stock items.

"The nearest store where one could buy Greek novelties was in the University of Maryland." In this type of setting, delivery for an order was only three or four days. In addition to this benefit, Hirsch said, the independent store allows ordering on a group or individual basis, no matter how large or small, something not readily available otherwise.

Hirsch became involved in opening up a store in the sporting goods industry by talking with a storeowner at the University of Maryland. His friend arranged for him to talk with other suppliers, and eventually with the executive of University Spirit Cooperative of America, the cop-op that supervises 34 sorority and fraternity supply stores nationwide.

Although the U.S.C. oversees the stores, each is a separate independent business. "Twice a year the cooperative meets at conventions to discuss issues applicable to the stores, such as problems that exist in some areas, and organizes a trade show to display the new item ideas," Hirsch explained. In addition, Hirsch attends "Greek fairs," and a vender trade show, to learn the latest novelties in the Greek market.

Hirsch received no administrative assistance from U.S.C. in organizing and opening Mount Olympus. He completed his business plan assignment last spring when the idea of actually opening a store surfaced. "I joined U.S.C. in June and attended a convention to help me in my decision as whether to open the store and to see what opportunities were available," Hirsch said.

Hirsch was impressed with the co-op and, following the convention, went on to find a location for his store in the Drexel-Penn area. His class assignment had already organized his business plan, so the next step was to raise money.

Hirsch explained, "I sent letters to investors, mainly family and friends, asking whether they would be interested in buying stock in the business." Mount Olympus was born and opened in January.

Owning his own business was one of Hirsch's future expectations when he applied to Wharton. He plans to continue working in the store following graduation and a two-month sabbatical; however, he does not expect to remain solely in the sporting goods industry, but plans to expand to other businesses also.

Hirsch related his other ambitions as well. "I hope to go to New York and become involved in the cooperate world, perhaps adventure capital.

The difference between that and entrepreneurial management is that you work, not for yourself, but help others establish themselves." In that type of career, says Hirsch, one learns more faster, while continually exploring new territory.

Although Mount Olympus does not turn a large profit because of its recent opening, it does hold its own. Hirsch said business is very cyclical, waxing and waning with the initiation of the fraternities and sororities in the area schools. Because of the size and connections within the U.S.C., goods for all fraternities and sororities, national or independent, can be ordered or custom made.

When asked how much of his education at Wharton was applied in his entrepreneurial adventure, Hirsch replied that it was not much. "The business plan forced me to concentrate on aspects of business that proved advantageous in opening the store, but there was not much I learned in the

(Continued on page 19)

Volunteers

(Continued from page 11)

One of the questions I was most frequently asked when I got back was, "Weren't you afraid of the people you met down there?"

The truth is that before I went I was a little bit nervous about the people I would encounter. In the beginning, all the volunteers were a little uneasy about what to talk about with the people who came.

Many who had mental problems were difficult to converse with, but for the most part the people talked easily about themselves and their lives. Some of them were great entertainers, like Tommy who told us jokes all day long, or George who performed post-dinner serenades to anyone who would listen.

On the more serious side, I think everyone in our group met someone during the week who really had an effect on us. In my own case, it was a four-year old boy name Danny. He came in with his neighbor who had taken him into her own home.

By talking with her, I learned that his mother was a drug addict who neglected her children except to beat them savagely from time to time.

When I think about Danny's affectionate personality, I wondered whether such a bright and happy child may be destroyed before he reaches adolescence. I can only hope that he can survive to escape the environment in which he lives. Perhaps the harshest reality is that there are so many kids growing up the same way as Danny.

Each and every day, Kensington poses new threats to her residents. One of the major problems is the heavy drug trade. Dealers sell drugs on streets as if they "are licensed to do so." It has been said that drugs are cheaper than a meal.

Theft is necessary in order to acquire money to purchase the drugs that leave the users strung out, disoriented and permanently damaged.

Prostitution is another way for addicts to make the money to pay for their habits. We were sometimes awakened at 5 a.m. by the fights between the prostitutes and pimps on the street outside our door.

In addition to the Franciscans who have devoted their lives to service for the poor, the inn greatly depends on the volunteers from the neighborhood and local churches and schools. Many are retired people who devote their days to the work at the inn. George, the cook, and his wife, Dorothy, live across the street from the inn and work there seven days a week. George has spent his entire life in the neighborhood.

He said Kensington was not always the neighborhood it is today. When he grew up, the neighborhood was safe and primarily family-dominated. He said, despite what Kensington has become, he "does not feel threatened here," and has no desire to leave the area. When asked why he devotes so much time to the Inn, he said, "When you see so many of the adults and children who come here helpless and looking for food, or just in need of a smile or some hope, how can you not help them?"

A lot of people were surprised that students were willing to give up their spring break to volunteer in the inner city. Although I must admit, my complexion was green with envy when I saw my friends' bronze tans at the end of the week. I do not believe that many of the volunteers felt it was that much of a sacrifice; we all felt we got even more out of the experience than we gave.

It was more than just helping others. We received an education about life that we could never have learned in a classroom.

For your health. . .
Laugh into good health

By TARA BURKE
Staff Reporter

Take two laughs . . . some doctors are writing it out like a regular medication order. There is a room at Dekalb Hospital in Decatur, Ga. that allows patients to refresh themselves. It is a humor room. The room is an oasis that helps patients who seem to have lost interest in life.

The laugh room at Harbor UCLA Medical Center in Torrance, Calif. is filled with cartoon characters, stuffed animals and brightly colored walls. The program emphasizes play therapy. Now some children — in traction and confined to bed — are giggling as they recover.

Research showed that four-year-old children laugh about 500 times a day where as adults laughed approximately 15 times. We are told to stop acting silly when we grow up.

Researchers have been interested in the power of laughter since Norman Cousin's writing of "Anatomy of an Illness" in which he felt he recovered from a disease by laughing at Marx Brothers movies.

You may need more laughter in your life. Here are some great reasons why:

Laughing increases our heart rate, circulation and respirations. Blood pressure rises and drops, similar to exercise. A few seconds of laughter is just like the cardiovascular benefits of a few minutes of aerobics. In addition, it might decrease pain.

The most acceptable way of releasing pent-up emotions is laughter rather than rage. Laughing at a tough situation may give emotional distance needed to solve a problem. By laughing at a difficult problem, a person shows that he is no longer overwhelmed by stress.

Socially, laughing with someone, not about someone, can bring people closer together.

Humor tends to make people feel good about themselves. Laughter reaffirms people. This happiness increases creativity.

Laughing is a great medicine. Laughing may not cure midterms, but students can laugh them off and work harder on the finals!

"Do you need more laughter in your life?" Glamour. Boulder, Colo. January 1988 p. 33.

who knows, who cares

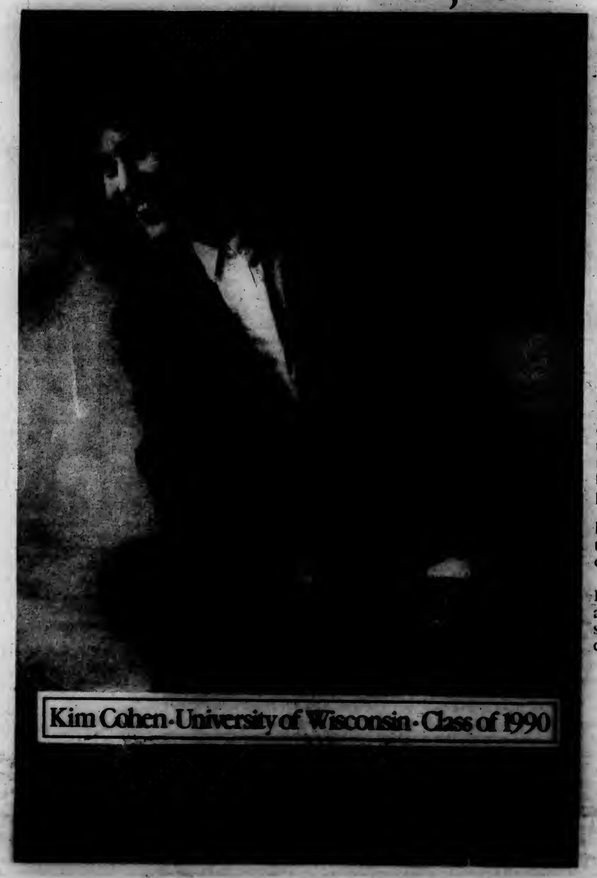
Have you all recovered from your near heart attacks during the Nova-Illinois game? . . . heart . . . we agree with most V.U. women that Mark Plansky could free-throw his way into our hearts anytime . . . we hope we won Thursday night, but we can't tell you . . . our deadline is Wednesday, since we don't have computers . . . it's not in our budget . . . budget . . . tuition increases are in the budget, though . . . dough . . . but have we paid off the Pavilion yet? . . . see a connection? . . . take it to the Senate . . . Senate elections are coming up . . . but no one is running for engineering and nursing senator . . . guess they all said, "Who knows, who cares . . ."

Edited by the Villanovan Editorial Board.

Word of the Week

BONIFACE

a) A limited-production Italian sports car built by Ferrari.



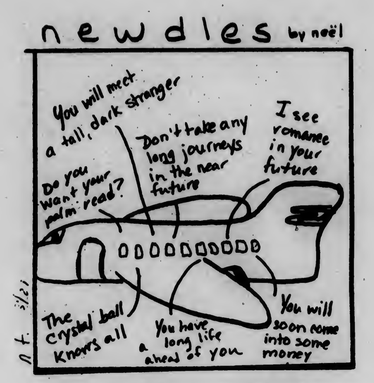
b) A Tenesian monk who lives in solitude on a mountain top.

c) One whose facial structure is gaunt in appearance.

d) A manager of a bar or tavern.

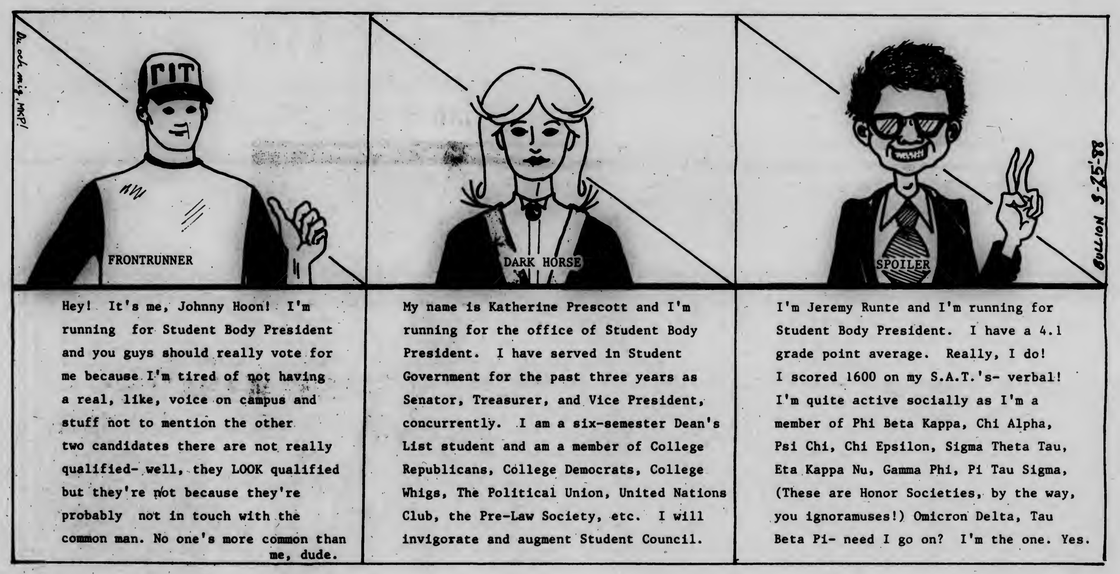
Solution page 20

"No matter how bad they are, Grandma loves to hear the latest jokes."

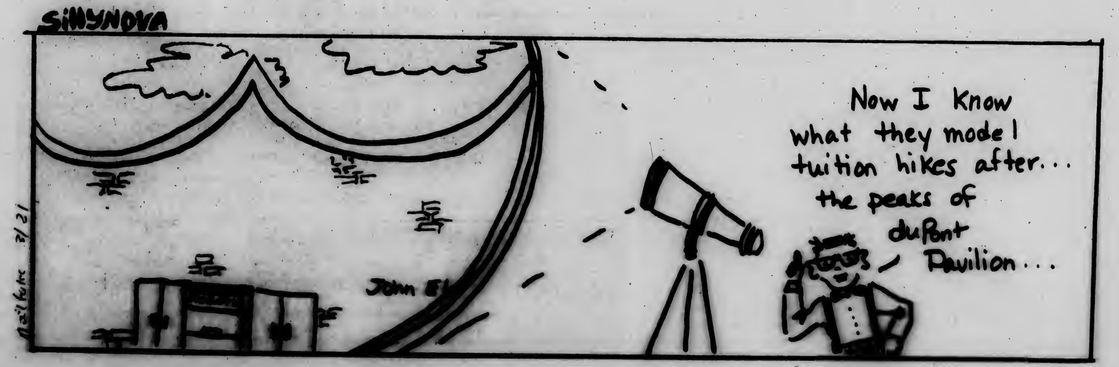


You miss her sparkling sense of humor. She misses you and your jokes. Even the bad ones. That's one good reason to call long distance. AT&T Long Distance Service is another good reason. Because it costs less than you think to hear your grandmother start to giggle before you even get to the punch line.

So whenever you miss her laughter, bring a smile to her face with AT&T. Reach out and touch someone®



If you'd like to know more about AT&T products and services, like the AT&T Card, call us at 1 800 222-0300.



AT&T
The right choice.

THE ART BIN

A psychic plane

Advice from BUTCH BAXTER

Dear Butch,

I am a transfer student from the midwest, and I was wondering if you could help me out. I am having a small communication problem here at V.U., and there are some popular words that I just do not understand. Could you please explain the following terms: scope, beat, rosemonster and hook-up?

Signed,
A Perplexed Pal from Peoria

Hey Pal,

Although I may not be the hippest person around, I still feel that I have a grip on the latest lingo, so I will give it a shot. I hope you appreciate the fact that many hours of my valuable time were unselfishly sacrificed for this cause.

We will start with the word "scope." Webster defines scope as a "range of activity or application."

However, this definition does not do the word justice. In actual student usage, the word "scope" can be used as either a noun or a verb. As a noun, it means the person who is the object of someone's intense affection. For example, "The fresh little cupcake over there is my scope." When used as a verb, one usually adds "ing" to the end. Thus, the word "scoping" is formed. Scoping means that one is acting in such a manner as to procure the affections of another. In context, one could say, "Hey Rex, are you scoping Lolita?" Synonyms include "hit on," "dealin' on" and "making the moves."

The term "beat" is defined by Webster as "to strike or hit repeatedly." However, this time Webster is also a bit confused.

In reality, "beat" is almost always used as an adjective. It can be defined as that which is unpleasant or lacking in some required characteristic. For example, "Dude, that Pia Zadora television special was beat." Synonyms of "beat" include "lame," "weak" and "bouge."

The word "rosemonster" cannot be found in the dictionary. It is obvious that Webster did not go to Villanova. There is a certain group of people that are often found crashing Villanova functions who are affectionately referred to as rosemonsters.

The rosemonster is a unique species of college student who, while some appear normal on the outside, is plagued by the stigma and influence of their school.

To avoid hurting anyone's feelings, as well as to practice three of our new vocabulary words, let's just say that when it comes to scoping, the rosemonster is a beat alternative. There is no synonym for rosemonster.

The final word for today is "hook-up." Webster defines it as "the interconnection of broadcasting stations for relaying programs." This time ol' Web is closer, but still, no cigar. If he had done his homework he would have realized that to hook-up means for two people to get together in a physical sense. In practical terms, this can range from two Greeks smooching at a fraternity party, to a couple of lovesick puppies breaking visitation.

Boys and girls, can you think of a sentence using all four of your new words? I think you can. If you thought to yourself, "Dude, this party's beat, why don't you ditch that rosemonster and go hook-up with your scope," then you probably have mastered today's lesson.

Dear Butch,

The other day my V.C.R. died and I have not been able to tape General Hospital. Since I have a class at 3 p.m., I have lost track of the latest haps. Would you please clue me in?

Signed,
Generally Lost

Hey Lost,

Here is the scoop on G.H. Colton and Felicia met Tony and Lucy at their house for dinner. Lucy was stressed that Colton was putting the moves on Felicia, which he was. Colton went back to Felicia's apartment after dinner, but Felicia killed his buzz by boring him to tears with old wedding pictures of herself and Frisco. I guess Jack Wagner is still on the road gigging with the band.

It is still up in the air on who will get the assistant chief of staff job at the hospital. Alan was worried that Monica would beat him to the punch, so he tried to convince her to pull out of the running using unconventional tactics. After a much-overdue consummation of their marriage, Monica slammed Alan when she says, "Sorry dear, that was fun, but now I have to get some rest for the big interview tomorrow."

"What interview?" asks Alan.

"The one for the assistant chief of staff job. You know Alan, you were good, but not that good." Ouch!

The big news of the day involved Duke and the happenings in New York. Julian was shot and killed trying to save Duke from an ambush from a rival mob. On his deathbed, Julian made Duke promise he would help his father make the mob ligitimate — a tall order for the Scotsman with a cowlick. Duke then called Anna (often pronounced "Anner" in G.H. land) and told her he had been helping a friend with his restaurant business. She bought the fib hook, line and sinker. Pretty gullable of our heroine, considering her vast experience with the W.S.B. (World Security Bureau, for those virgin G.H. watchers.)

The saga ended with Jerome saying, "Duke, Julian's dying wish is that you join the family. You're one of us now." Perhaps this means Anna and Robert can rekindle the old flame and Duke will be left out in the cold with the mob, his GQ duds and a 10-gallon tube of styling gel.

Advice from Butch Baxter is a new weekly addition to the Features section of the Villanovan. It is intended for entertainment purposes only. The characters and letters are purely fictitious, and any resemblance to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Saint Louis University's Academic Year in Madrid

COMPLETE CURRICULUM: English, Spanish, Liberal Arts, Business & Administration, TESOL, Sciences, Hispanic Studies

SLU in Madrid is a member of AA/EOE

Graduate Courses offered during Summer Session in July

Apply NOW for Summer and Fall 1988

More than 900 students in the Program

Contact:

Raymond L. Sullivant, S.J.
Saint Louis University in Madrid
Calle de la Vina, 3
Madrid 28003 SPAIN
Tel: 233-2032/233-2812

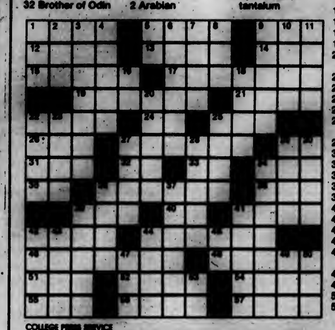
Saint Louis University
Study Abroad Coordinator
Admissions Office
221 North Grand Blvd
St. Louis, MO 63103
Toll-free tel: 1-800-325-6666

The most successful test preparation group ever can now prepare you for

LSAT / GMAT.*

Princeton Review 215/923-2077
It's easy when you know how.

*Unsure whether or not to prep? Take a recently-administered exam and receive a detailed computerized breakdown of your performance. It's your career; make the best decision you can.



Attend Senate Meeting

FIGHT TUITION INCREASE

The Villanovan Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Bark cloth
5 Former Russian ruler
9 Caveat
12 Son of Adam
13 Land measure
14 Swiss canton
16 Rebels
17 Extreme
19 Congealed with cold
21 Flavoring herb
25 Barricade
34 Faeroe Islands whirlwind
35 Ardent
36 Mooncalf
37 Salad ingredient
39 Printer's measure
41 Emmet
42 Brother of Odin
43 Concerning
44 Prefix: before
45 Symbol for tellurium
50 Annoy
53 Quarrel
56 Ceiling device
58 Nameless: abbr.
61 Nuisance
62 Observes
64 Places for combat
66 Introduce
68 Expels
71 Fruit of 72 Wheel tooth
74 Fasten
75 Affirmative
76 Possesses
77 Discover

DOWN
1 Flap
2 Arabian garment
3 Ideal
4 Widewake
5 Symbol for tantalum
6 Distribe
7 Island off Ireland
8 Crimson
9 Clear
10 Sea in Asia
11 Poles
18 Therefore 19 Unemployed
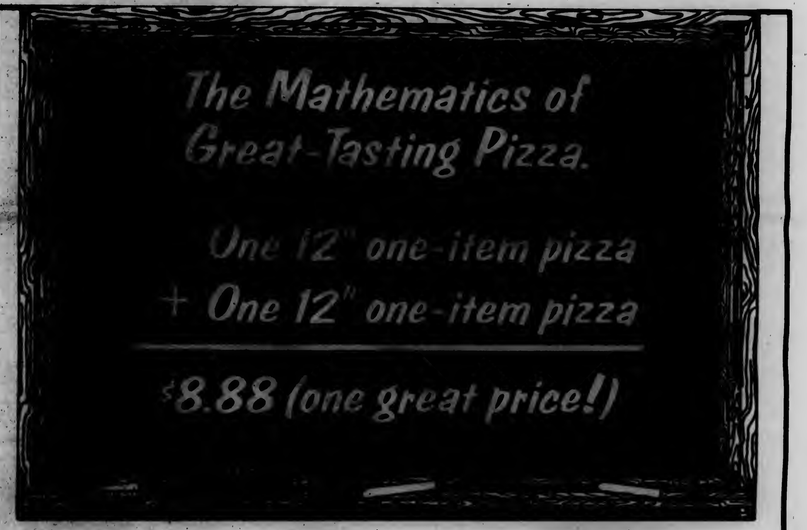
20 Encircling bands
22 Quarrel
23 Sheet of glass
25 Above
27 Smooth
28 Goddess of peace
29 God of love
30 Elf
34 Irons
36 Free ticket
37 Plaid cloth
39 Gives food to
41 Temporary rest
42 Agile
43 Great Lake
44 Again
45 Japanese drama
47 The self
48 Hit lightly
50 Crafty
53 Rupees: abbr.

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

Solution page 20

Rubes® By Leigh Rubin



Happy 22nd Birthday Kimmer Zarkesh

Happy 20th Birthday Chris Klimowicz

DAEDALUS EDUCATION SERVICES LSAT Now At Villanova!

Nothing adds up like the great taste of Domino's Pizza®. In fact, we guarantee it. If you're not happy with your pizza for any reason, we'll bring you another pizza or a full refund.* We also guarantee to deliver your hot, delicious pizza in 30 minutes or less. If we're late, you get $3.00 off your order.

So what are you waiting for? Call Domino's Pizza today!

*Check your local store for guarantee details.

Call us.
Wayne
293-0980
128 W. Lancaster

Open for lunch
11 AM-1 AM Sun.-Thurs.
11 AM-2 AM Fri. & Sat.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
© 1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE.

Double deal
Present this coupon to receive two 12" regular one-item pizzas for just $8.88.
One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable. Expires: 4/7/88
Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

Dinner for four
Present this coupon to receive a 16" large two-item pizza and four 16 oz. bottles of Coke® for only $9.90.
One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable. Expires: 4/7/88
Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

$2.00 off
Present this coupon to receive $2.00 off any 16" large two-item pizza.
One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable. Expires: 4/7/88
Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

Student Government presidential candidates

The progress of the Student Government over the past three years is staggering. Students overthrew an ineffective government, reformed it, and are now allowing it to work steadily. Villanova is entering into a new phase: a new University president, the development of the whole west campus area, numerous new board members and a major fundraising campaign.

To lead the students out of the 80s and into this new phase strongly and progressively, the government needs a president who has a clear vision of the direction of the University.

Terise Fusco offers the office of president experience of this transition from ineffectiveness and is a leader of the government of today. She is presently the Student Government vice president, internal affairs founding leader and a former class representative.

People tend to support only what they help create! The president must create support-dynamically involving students and training them to produce results on issues helpful to them. It is not enough to just register students to vote — let's elect people who will be helpful to Villanova!

It is not enough to say we will provide housing for students in three years — let's give them an off-campus housing guide now.

Students can get involved in the changes at Villanova-leaving the '80s stronger, with more vital issues and professional involvement in the process of governance, but they must have the right type of person representing them. Fusco is the stronger candidate, with more experience, a clearer vision and more able leadership.

Terise Fusco

Sean Closkey

Please let Sean Closkey continue to work for you. He has been dedicated to improving Villanova since his freshman year, when he founded Social Activities on Campus Committee (SACC).

In his sophomore year as president of SACC he developed and initiated the Spring Festival proposal. This year, as assistant secretary of internal affairs of the Student Government, he worked toward the approval and realization of Spring Festival.

Closkey's most publicized accomplishments are in the area of social life. However, he is also actively involved in several other issues. Working with internal affairs he participated in the creation of the new food services board; a committee which currently addresses student concern with on campus dining.

Acting as the chairman of the University Senate's student life committee Closkey was involved in the successful completion of the coed dorms report.

This spring the issues he is addressing are used book sale, new student I.D. and additional social activities on campus.

Closkey's active participation shows his dedication to Villanova. The successful completion of the above projects is an example of his effective leadership.

Next year's relevant issues are: visitation, student honor code, academic scholarships for upperclassmen, guaranteed student basketball tickets and student voting in Radnor Township.

The Student Government president at Villanova must insure that the concerns of the students are aggressively pursued and changes result. Closkey has shown the ability to do this. Therefore, he deserves your vote of confidence. Elect Closkey to Student Government president.

Commerce and Finance senator candidates

What does the Villanova community need from Student Government? They need senators who are experienced in student affairs, creative and willing to introduce new ideas, and dedicated to making Villanova utilize its resources and options in order to be the best it can be.

I am running for re-election because I believe that I possess these necessary characteristics and if elected we can continue the excellent work done in the past two years.

Through the course of the past year the foundations of change have been laid down by Student Government, but the work started this year must be extended if the changes are to be implemented. The potential changes that I am speaking of can become realities if the right people are elected.

I believe that my exposure to the issues that we students face makes me a qualified and logical candidate. So, on April 12 please elect me, Ken Fahrman, as senator for the College of Commerce and Finance.

My name is Claudine Liss and I am currently a sophomore accounting major from Little Falls, N.J.

I am asking for your vote so that Imay represent you as a commerce and finance senator. A senator's role is to represent your ideas. If I am elected you can be assured that I will welcome your opinions and suggestions concerning issues here at Villanova.

I have set many goals for the student senate and, with your support I will be able to implement them. One idea I hope to see is Villanova's acceptance on a seminar dedicaterd to helping students decide on a major especially in the commerce and finance school.

I also would like to formally draw an agreement that guarantees students two reading days per semester and a Fall Break every year.

In conclusion, I would like to say that I am very enthusiastic about this position, understand the responsibilities and am prepared to make the commitment.

The office of student senator holds unlimited potential that enables one to help make valuable changes. I feel that you need someone who is willing to work hard and stand up for what the students believe in.

I, as a student senator, can address many issues including: coed housing, changes in the meal plan, phones in all dormitories and additional parking.

I have lived in Sullivan Hall the past two years so I know what some of the problems are. I will do my best to change these things so future Villanovans have more choices.

Past attempts to get things changed have fallen on deaf ears by the administration. Hopefully, we the students can establish a good working relationship with the new president.

If not, we have to show the school we are serious by actively protesting. I feel I would be a strong leader and excellent senator for the College of Commerce and Finance.

Claudine Liss

Greg Dunlop

Ken Fahrman

Arts senator candidates

One year ago I asked you, the Villanova community, to support me in my quest for arts senator. I am very grateful that you elected me and allowed me the opportunity to serve you in that capacity this past year.

During that time I have been an active member of the University Senate and have served as secretary of the ad-hoc committee on security and parking procedures.

I have kept the promises I made to you one year ago. I believe I have proved to be a dedicated senator.

I am now asking for your support once again; for re-election. I am now comfortable in my position and the workings of the Senate. I have great plans for the future, if you will allow me the chance to serve you as senator again.

If you truly care about what happens at Villanova, elect someone who will work for your needs. Come to Connelly Center on April 12 and cast your vote for the worthy encumbant, Diane Carman.

Diane Carman

Christopher Sperduto

Hello, my name is Christopher Sperduto and I am a sophomore in the College of Arts. I am a transfer student from Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Virginia and I live in Baldwin, Long Island. This is my second semester at Villanova and I have a 3.1 G.P.A. and rising.

Being a transfer student has encouraged my participation in the Senate in many ways. First of all, I was a senator for the College of Arts and Sciences in the Student Senate at ODU. This gave me a year's experience working in a senate very much like ours here at 'Nova.

I learned how to conduct myself at Senate meetings, how to work effectively in committees and most importantly, to listen. After spending a year at a different school, I can see the strengths and weaknesses of Villanova.

This insight, coupled with a lot of enthusiasm, will help me begin to correct some of the weaknesses that our University has such as campus parking, tuition increases, single-sex dorms and student involvement in campus life.

Chris Wnuk

The Senate, as the University's "legislative organ," is only one vehicle for student representation to the administration and Board of Trustees. It is, however, a body that must be fully utilized in order to yield progressive, substantive change at Villanova.

It is in this spirit, that I offer myself as a candidate for the University Senate. As an active member of the Villanova Union, Student Government, the Greek community and an honors and political science major, I wish to represent a variety of interests and to help increase intra-University political interest.

There is no reason why the entire campus should not be outraged by a 10.5 perecent increase in tuition or be perplexed that many major Catholic universities, including the Catholic University of America, offer coed dorms and we do not.

Yes, the University Senate is a vehicle for change at Villanova, but it is a vehicle that is only fueled by involvement

My name is Chris Wnuk and I am a junior honors major with a math minor, interested in representing the College of Arts in the University Senate.

During the past year, I have served as assistant secretary of public relations in Student Government. One of my major accomplishments in this office has been the organization and distribution of the Villanova University directory.

As editor, I played a major role in increasing the number of student listings from 2,280 in 1986-87 to 3,495 in 1987-88. This is also the first year since its inception that the directory has been widely distributed before Christmas break and has cleared over $1,000 profit from advertisements.

Having had the opportunity to learn the workings of the government this year, I now feel prepared to channel my energies into the policy-making arena and make a significant contribution to the Senate.

Richard W. Johnson

Michelle L. Bogosian

Debbie Gross

My name is Michelle Bogosian. I am running for Senate in the arts college. To give you some background about myself, I am a freshman liberal arts student with a business minor. I am a commuter living in Villanova and have been involved with Student Government external affairs since September.

Up to now, freshmen and sophomores go unrepresented within the university. With your help I hope to change this. From living in Villanova and attending the university I understand both sides of the student and community housing problems, the student and community public relations, as well as Radnor Township's government.

The question that must be addressed is which candidate has experience gained from actual time spent working in Student Government. I have worked on voter registration surveys, attended township meetings and written pamphlets to create better understandings for both the town and students.

I ask for your support so that I may be elected and properly represent the voice of the students.

Why don't we have an option for coed dorms? Why is our tuition raised what seems like each year? Why can't we have more academic buildings and improved parking facilities?

If you have asked yourself these and other questions time and time again, you are not alone. These are the questions that prompted me, Debbie Gross, to run for the position of arts senator so that changes will be made.

I am currently a junior English major. Through my involvement in various campus organizations, I have learned much about the problems that we as Villanova students face. I understand the administrative procedures and as arts senator, would like to create a greater amount of communication between the students and the administration itself.

I am willing to dedicate much time and effort to make the changes all of us seem to want. So, when you vote on April 12, vote for a person that will work for you. Vote Debbie Gross for arts senator.

University College senator candidate

I am a candidate for University Senate representing University College because I want to actively and honestly forward the interests of Villanova students in general, and UC students in particular.

Issues important to UC that I will fight for include more management and marketing courses and Saturday or weeknight hours for the bookstore and Bursar's office.

Other issues, both vital to the entire student body, which I propose to resist, are the 10.5 percent tuition increase and the implementation of the "minus" grading system.

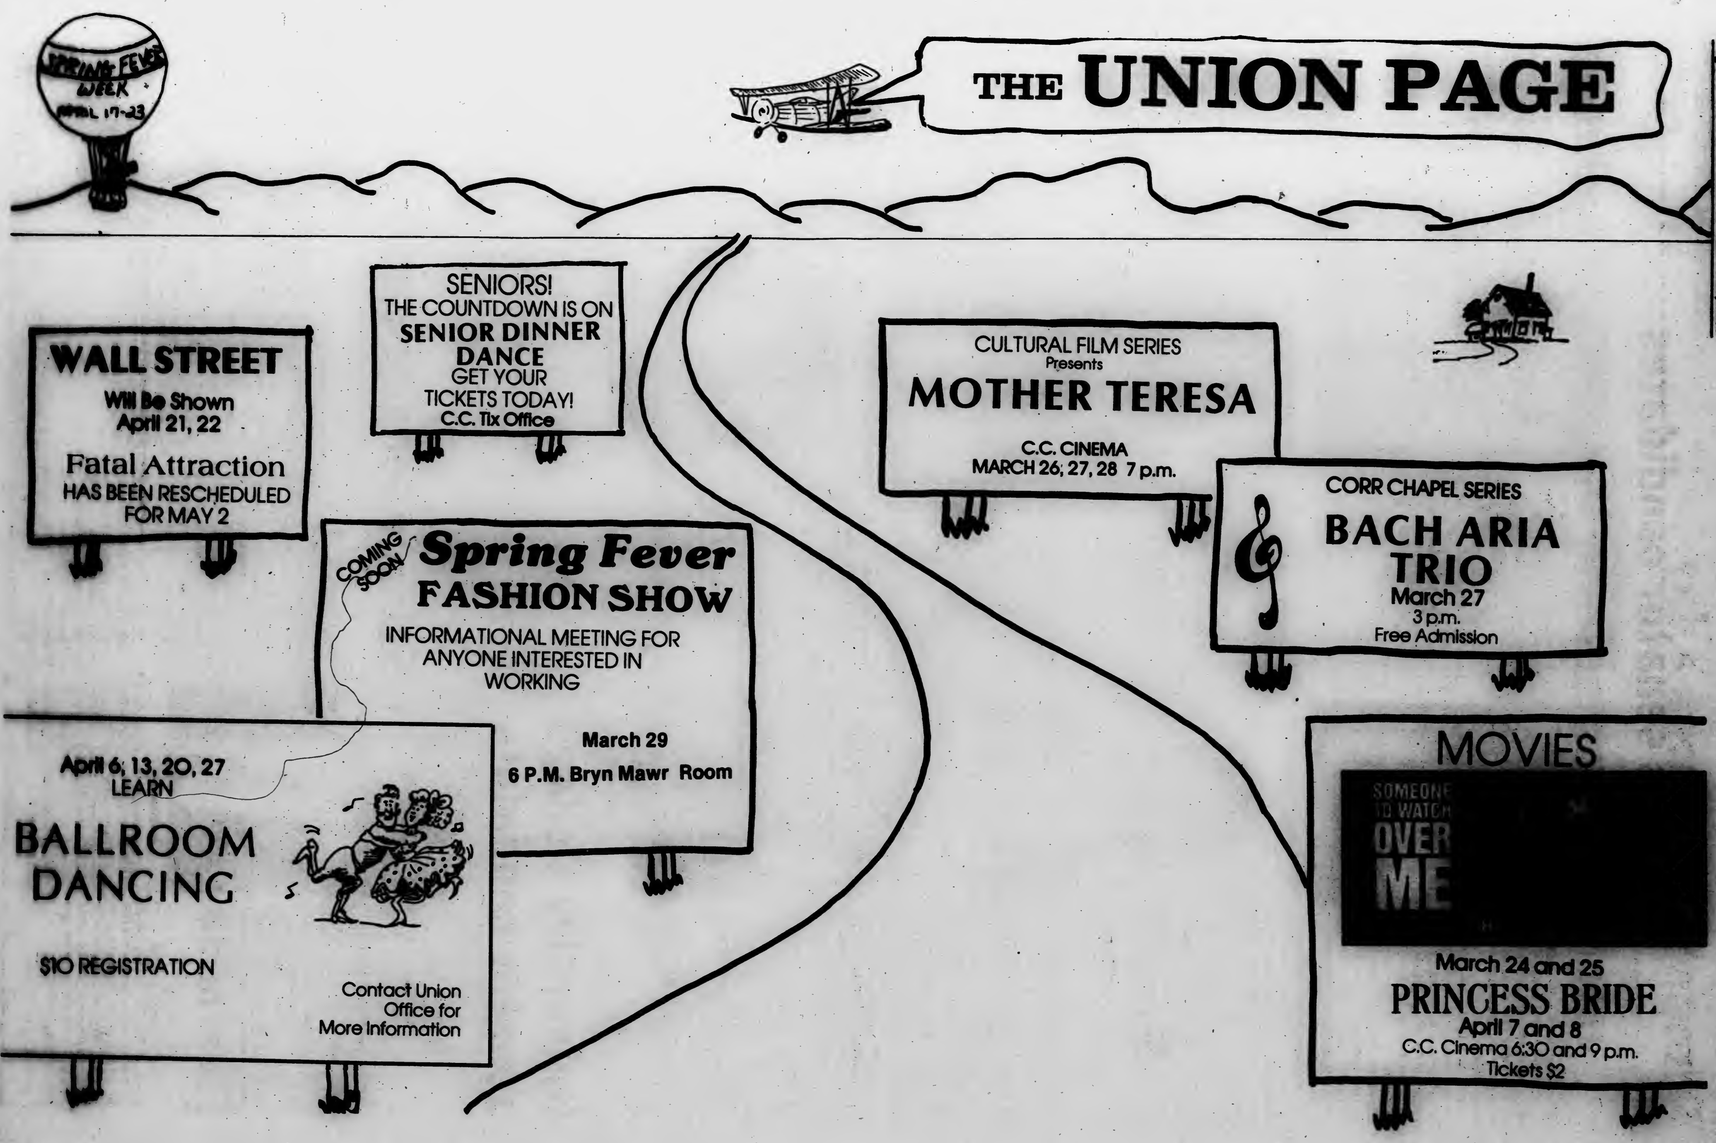
My overriding concern is to bring the UC, the largest college on campus, into a more active role in SGA and the Villanova community. We are a potentially influential block, if we unite through voter participation and monthly issue meetings.

Jonathan Zahm

I, a sophomore transfer student taking four classes nightly, understand what one expects, and receives back, from UC. Vote for Jonathan Zahm, so we can work together to forward our interests and, simultaneously, improve our fine university.

Science senator candidate

The image and role of the science senator is one of student and organizer whose knowledge of science complements a healthy political awareness. As a biology major who has put two years time into the Villanovan's cartoons as art editor, I can offer insight and perspective to campus politics, academic projects and other student affairs simply by being aware of the issues as an artist.



Issues of coed dormitories, west campus expansion, grading policies and especially (for the sciences) the expansion and renovation of Mendel Hall will become more prominent in the upcoming semesters.

With a sense and enthusiasm for politics on the national and local level, my association with Villanova's Student Government leaders, through discussion and Senate meetings, has kept me in touch with most of Student Government's programs.

Instead of creating promises, which are usually foot-in-mouth for political candidates, I would rather say that as science senator I will invest time and background into all Senate activities.

Philip Konnenbein

Europe for 84 cents a day

By SHARON HART
Staff Reporter

On March 21, Villanova had the pleasure of welcoming back one of its authorities on low-budget traveling, Gil White. It was his second visit to Villanova in five years, and he presented an interesting and informative lecture entitled, "Europe on 84¢ a Day."

At the age of 16, White, a native Canadian, traveled to Australia in pursuit of a tennis career. It was there as a young student that he developed a deep appreciation for travel, he believes "traveling is an education," and that "you can learn more about the government, history, and traditions of a foreign country, through the wonderful people that you meet, than through any other medium."

While in Australia, White also learned to be frugal. "It is easy to survive on a budget when you have a sincere interest in meeting people." This "frugality" that he speaks about required the individual to travel by non-conventional means, either by hitchhiking or cycling.

He make it clear that safety is very important and emphasized using common sense, but his personal experiences allow him to encourage students to be adventurous and to take risks. "Every day will not run perfectly, but I've found that those days can turn out to be the highlights of your trip."

In addition to transportation, traveling expense, accommodations, it is particularly advantageous for young people to travel because there are a lot of budget lodgings and other various discounts available to students. Even so, White encourages the traveler to be innovative by offering 16 ways, some rather outrageous, of obtaining free accommodations. He told students not to hesitate reaching out to people for help.

From his experience, "People are generally very receptive and hospitable." In that same notion, White warned students not to abuse hospitality and to try to make themselves useful, perhaps by offering to do a chore. Having traveled extensively (over 50 countries), White was able to share many fascinating stories about people and places all over the world. More importantly, he holds these experiences in his memory, and through his lectures is able to enrich the lives of others and to create an incentive for them to travel.

White spoke about another major point, a philosophy as well. In today's society, this philosophy may be idealistic. Crime is more prevalent in the world, and terrorism has discouraged many from traveling abroad. The type of college education received by many students seems to be gearing them to learn some type of marketable skill, and therefore, most students are thrust into the job market immediately after graduation.

From the rich knowledge he has gathered from around the world, and from the retelling of his personal experiences, White instilled in many a spirit of adventure and a taste of the tremendous education one can receive through travel.

"That evening White presented not just a mere budget plan for traveling, but a philosophy of life. He made it clear that safety is very important and emphasized using common sense, but his personal experiences allow him to encourage students to be adventurous and to take risks. "Every day will not run perfectly, but I've found that those days can turn out to be the highlights of your trip."

In addition to transportation, traveling expense, accommodations, it is particularly advantageous for young people to travel because there are a lot of budget lodgings and other various discounts available to students. Even so, White encourages the traveler to be innovative by offering 16 ways, some rather outrageous, of obtaining free accommodations. He told students not to hesitate reaching out to people for help.

From his experience, "People are generally very receptive and hospitable." In that same notion, White warned students not to abuse hospitality and to try to make themselves useful, perhaps by offering to do a chore. Having traveled extensively (over 50 countries), White was able to share many fascinating stories about people and places all over the world. More importantly, he holds these experiences in his memory, and through his lectures is able to enrich the lives of others and to create an incentive for them to travel.

"That evening White presented not just a mere budget plan for traveling, but a philosophy as well. In today's society, this philosophy may be idealistic. Crime is more prevalent in the world, and terrorism has discouraged many from traveling abroad. The type of college education received by many students seems to be gearing them to learn some type of marketable skill, and therefore, most students are thrust into the job market immediately after graduation.

From the rich knowledge he has gathered from around the world, and from the retelling of his personal experiences, White instilled in many a spirit of adventure and a taste of the tremendous education one can receive through travel.

Q and A for good health

By MARCIA COSTELLO, M.S.R.D.
Nursing Department
and
CINDY LAUER, R.D.
Food Service

Q. Does eating foods high in starch contribute to weight gain?

A. Anything eaten in excess from complex carbohydrates should be 58 percent of your total caloric intake. Many people have the misconception that breads, potatoes, and pasta should be avoided because they are "starchy." These items are great sources of complex carbohydrates, fiber and B-vitamins.

It is the simple carbohydrates, not "starchy" carbohydrates, that usually cause the weight gain. Simple carbohydrates are candy, cake, pie, cookies and table sugar.

People should consume at least six to seven servings of complex carbohydrates per day, depending on individual caloric needs. For example, a male that is 62 tall would require much more than this.

Q. I am on a sports team. When and what should be eaten before a competition?

A. Foods eaten on the day of an athletic event can help optimize performance if the event is an endurance one. Otherwise, this food probably has little practical effect on the outcome of the competition. The following are suggestions to eliminate potential hindrances to performance in an endurance event.

— Eat about three hours before the event to give the stomach time to empty.

— Eat foods high in complex carbohydrates to provide a steady supply of energy.

— Avoid a high sugar intake which can cause water to be drawn into the abdomen, leading to dehydration.

— Avoid high fat food: they are digested too slowly.

— Keep protein intake to a minimum as these foods often contain fat and also increase the need to urinate.

— Avoid bulky foods that might stimulate a bowel movement (raw fruits with skin or seeds, raw vegetables, dried beans, seeds, nuts and popcorn).

Student opens sporting goods store

(Continued from page 11)

classroom that I could apply."

He added that what he found most helpful and practical in his education was insight in dealing with inter-personal relations, rather than what he learned in a book.

Mount Olympus fraternity and sorority sporting goods store is open from one to five every day. Selling clothing, mugs, glasses, stuffed animals and other novelty items bearing Greek and university emblems, Hirsch expects to expand to other campuses and become even more extensive in the future. Hirsch is just one example that demonstrates how doing your homework can earn you more than a spot on the dean's list.

MALE STAFF NEEDED
Work with Learning Disabled and Mentally Retarded Children
Seven Week Residential Summer
Camplgn
IN POCONOS
ALL SPORTS, SWIMMING, CRAFTS, ETC. GOOD PAY
For More Info Call Lisa 526-9177

Richard & Company
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
773 E. Lancaster Ave., Villanova
527-2060
Villanova Student Discounts
(On tanning, perming, coloring & more!)
Open Mon. thru Sat. (Wed. & Thurs. Evenings) Appointments Recommended

Campus Ministry:

As Lent comes to an end, we remember our love for Jesus

By THE REV. RAY JACKSON, O.S.A.

Prayer and fasting are the dominant themes for Lent. Large crowds of people flocked to church on Ash Wednesday and were challenged to "repent and believe the Good News."

Repentance often took the form of giving up smoking or alcoholic drink — or in a more positive vein, the involvement of reaching out to others in need.

The daily campus masses tripled their usual numbers of people in attendance, indicating a desire for a more intense prayer life. In general, most Christian Catholics realized that Lent is a special time of the year, a time to think about their relationship with God, a time to dwell on the mystery of life and death.

Suddenly, Palm Sunday is here. As Lent rushes to its conclusion, we are reminded again of the adulation and praise heaped upon Jesus of Nazareth as He entered the city of Jerusalem almost 2000 years ago. He was praised for His great insights about life, the parables about generosity and forgiveness and the sermons on peacemaking and justice seeking.

He was honored for the miracles of healing the blind, curing the crippled and restoring health to the lepers. Jesus, the crowd praised You for Your message of God's goodness and Your own gentleness towards the sinful and the needy.

But, evil is not far away. Palms quickly turn to whips. Jesus is arrested, betrayed by one of his followers and deserted by the rest of them. The adoring crowd now shouts, "Crucify him." To enter into the memory of the passion and death of Jesus Christ is to enter into the mystery of evil in our own world.

Our greediness for possessions, our anger and jealousy towards others, our indifference and neglect of the aged and the children of poverty all contribute to the suffering of Christ. He died at the hands of the rich and powerful in order that women and men of all ages might learn the lessons of faith and compassion.

Easter is the triumph of our life. We have walked the journey of self-denial and prayer with Jesus during Lent. We have at times betrayed Him, yet we turn again in sorrow and ask forgiveness for our selfishness, the burden which He bore on the cross. His resurrection from the dead is a promise of new life for us now and for eternity. As we enter into Holy Week, let us pray for a renewed sense of the memory of Jesus in our life and a willingness to follow Him as the way of truth and light.

Shape up or ship out: aerobics are awesome

By JACQUELINE GENTILE
Assistant Features Editor

Do you roll out of bed in the morning to run a few miles or swim laps? Or do you peel yourself away from the afternoon soaps to go to aerobics class? If you engage in any of these activities, consider yourself part of the American craze to become aerobically fit. Yet, it is estimated that only 20 percent of Americans exercise at the recommended level for cardiovascular fitness.

A statistic such as this calls for some facts on fitness. According to Dr. Deborah Kendzierski, a psychology professor at Villanova, aerobic exercise is defined as continuous rhythmic movement of large muscle masses. It is termed aerobic because oxygen is required in the chemical process involved in producing energy needed for exercising.

Aerobic activities include continuous brisk walking, running, hiking, cycling, cross country skiing, swimming and rowing. But Kendzierski stated some stipulations in order for these exercises to produce cardiovascular benefits.

To obtain the aerobic benefits of an exercise, a person must work out at least three times a week for 20 to 30 minutes straight, at what Kendzierski calls aerobic intensity. And she added that it takes time at the beginning of each exercise session to work up to aerobic intensity.

The appropriate intensity level of a workout is different for each individual. Ideally, a person should exercise at 60 to 85 percent of his or her maximum heart rate. One's maximum heart rate can be found by subtracting one's age from 220.

Working out at aerobic intensity may seem like more of a chore than anything else, but the results are nothing to sweat about.

Aerobic exercise increases a person's stamina and decreases risk of cardio-vascular disease, such as heart attacks and strokes. Kendzierski added that while there is not enough data to be certain, aerobic exercise may help to prevent or control hypertension, osteoporosis and a type of diabetes called diabetes mellitus.

Finally, and probably the most important for those who are watching their waistline, aerobic exercise helps in weight control by burning calories and reducing the percentage of body fat. Kendzierski emphasized that a person's percentage of body fat, rather than weight, is the key factor in weight control, since weight alone does not account for how fat or slender a person appears.

Kendzierski also emphasized that it is important to realize the physical benefits of exercise can take six to eight weeks to become evident. It is easy to understand this if we realise that running a mile burns about 100 calories, and to lose a pound a person needs to burn 3,500 calories. She stated that often people expect results very soon, and the time factor may be one reason behind the 50 percent dropout rate of Americans who start exercise programs.

On a more positive note, however, if a person exercises rigorously, he or she will burn more calories than usual for two to three hours after the workout.

Aerobic exercise affects, not only our bodies, but also our minds. Kendzierski stated that "exercise is positively associated with mental health and well being." Exercise is associated with the reduction of tension and stress, an improved self concept, and a decrease in mild to moderate depression and anxiety.

It is unclear though, as to exactly how or why exercise can affect mental health. Kendzierski stated that stress can also be reduced from a hot shower or sauna, and she explained that it is not known what is unique about exercising that reduces stress.

Some experts say that aerobic exercise gives people a "high" by causing endorphins, chemicals produced by the body, to be released into the bloodstream. These endorphins are responsible for a decrease in feelings of pain. However, Kendzierski stated that these findings are not conclusive. "There is no good evidence that the mood affects associated with exercise are due to endorphins."

However, it is still undisputable that there are many benefits to aerobic exercise. But Kendzierski warns against overdoing it. Exercising more than three or four times a week will not contribute significantly to greater aerobic benefits. In fact, it may increase your risk of injury. For example, one study showed that out of a group of people who ran for 30 minutes, 22 percent were injured, while out of a group of people who ran for 45 minutes, 53 percent sustained injuries.

Kendzierski stated that if you cannot carry on a conversation while you are exercising, you may be overdoing it. Also, overexercising in hot weather can result in heatstroke.

Diet is another factor to consider if you are on an exercise program. Although many people combine a diet and exercise program, it is important to get enough calories. Kendzierski explained that if you do not consume enough calories, your body will eventually start using muscle tissue for energy.

Even after hearing about the benefits of aerobic exercise, if you still find it difficult to get yourself in the exercise mode, try to give yourself that extra push, because if you exercise now, your mind and body will thank you later.

MONTANA'S
Presents
Len Barry
BACK BEHIND
THE BAR
8.
GIANT T.V. —
POOL TABLES —
DANCIN'

Word of the Week Solution

BONIFACE d) A manager of a bar or tavern.

T	A	P	A		T	S	A	R		L	A	P
A	B	E	L		A	C	R	E		U	R	I
B	A	R	E	S		R	A	D	I	C	A	L
		F	R	O	Z	E	N		D	I	L	L
S	P	E	T		O	E		O	L	D
P	A	C		E	N	D	I	V	E		E	N
A	N	T		V	E		R	E		P	R	E
T	E		P	E	S	T	E	R		R	O	W
		F	A	N		A	N		P	E	S	T
S	E	E	S		A	R	E	N	A	S
P	R	E	S	E	N	T		O	U	S	T	S
R	I	D		G	E	A	R		S	E	A	L
Y	E	S		O	W	N	S		E	S	P	Y

Earn a master's in technical and science communication.

Whether your undergraduate background is in the liberal arts or sciences, you can prepare for a career in corporate communications, technical or science writing, public relations, advertising, media production, and related professions through Drexel University's M.S. program in technical and science communication.

Drexel offers a full- or part-time program individually designed through close student advising; options for paid, career-related employment through Drexel's cooperative education program; and excellent placement services in this high-demand career field. Fellowships and stipends are available for full-time students.

For more information, return the coupon or call: Director, Graduate Program, Technical and Science Communication, Drexel University, Philadelphia, PA 19104. 215-895-2442

Name
Address
City State Zip

MANUFACTURING MANAGEMENT TRAINING PROGRAM

R.R. Donnelley & Sons Company, a Fortune 500 communications company, has unique opportunities for high potential college graduates who have the desire to develop their managerial style by participation in a Management Training Program leading to initial placement as a first-line Manufacturing Supervisor.

This program consists of assignments/projects in Production and Administrative Departments, a direct working relationship with people and is designed to provide a broad base of experience to enable the candidate to grow in higher levels of line management. Candidates must be willing to work shift rotation and overtime.

This opportunity is designed for achievement-oriented individuals who can demonstrate analytical/independent problem-solving skills, a leadership ability, sensitivity to people, mechanical comprehension, and adaptability. Candidates must have a BS Degree in a technical discipline. Preferred consideration will be given to Engineering Majors.

We offer excellent career growth opportunities in a stable and growing industry. We are the undisputed leader in our field and have unparalleled growth opportunity for those with a sincere interest in working in a "hands-on" manufacturing environment in a dynamic, high technology industry.

Qualified applicants should send their resume to:

R.R. DONNELLEY & SONS COMPANY
Personnel Department
201 Steel Way
P.O. Box 2763
Lancaster, PA 17604

An Equal Opportunity Employer M/F/H/V

Entertainment

Now and Zen lives up to expectations

By TIM DANIELS
Staff Reporter

Now and Zen
Robert Plant
Atlantic/Es Paranza Records
★★★★

Do not be fooled into thinking that Robert Plant has warped back into the '70s, Now and Zen is as contemporary an album as any other during his solo career, but Plant has returned to his trademarked themes of lust and mythology. Additionally, his lyrics are more introspective than ever as he finally escapes his musical personality conflict. Displaying a special fondness for these new lyrics, Plant has printed them on the album sleeve for the first time since Houses of the Holy. Reopening his bag of vocal tricks, Plant employs his old screams and chorus hooks that he had until recently considered to be unfaithful to the music.

Plant's previous guitarist Robbie Blunt left the band after the Shaken 'n' Stirred tour, complaining that there was just no role for the guitarist in his latest songs. But once again, the seering guitar riff has found a place beside Robert's powerful vocals. And, as you could probably guess, the original innovator, Jimmy Page, has returned to help Plant back on this track, playing on two of the songs.

Plant's new band, made up of a group of enthusiastic young unknowns raised on Led Zeppelin, revealed to him that his future could be unraveled from within the past, awakening a desire to sing what he always did best: his magnificently forceful blues.

While recruiting a new band, Plant was immediately hooked by a demo tape of "Heaven Knows" by The Rest Is History — consisting of keyboardist Phil Johnson, guitarist Doug Boyle, bassist Phil Scragg and drummer Chris Blackwell. Johnson brought in his production crew led by Dave Barrett of The Acts of God to complete the team.

Now and Zen opens with "Heaven Knows." If it is faintly reminiscent of "Kashmir," that is because it contains 16 bars of the Physical Graffiti anthem — though Pagey's chugging rhythm line is replaced by Johnson's lively keyboards. Page fans need not despair, however, he provides the best solo on the album to the track. The backup vocals and keyboards also help to make this a truly excellent tune.

"Dance On My Own" proves that Plant still knows how to 'make you jump and shout,' (this "The Crunge" lyric appears later in "White, Clean, And Neat") as it is the fastest tune on the album. The ascending lead guitar follows Plant's vocals quite well. A source of disappointment throughout the album is the electronic-sounding drums — with his great love of the irreplaceable Bonzo Bonham he should recognize the importance of powerful, back-to-basics drumming.

"Tall Cool One" keeps the pace moving furiously with the aid of James Patrick Page. He supplies another fine solo, which is indicated on the album, appropriately enough, by his 'ZOSO' secret symbol. Plant and Page stick it back very well at the Beastie Boys with the insertion of a montage of sampled Zeppelin riffs, including "Whole Lotta Love," "Dazed and Confused," "Black Dog," "Custard Pie," "The Ocean" and "In The Light."

Plant displays his recapturing of the great times past with "The Way I Feel:" 'I must have heard it somewhere/I can't quite remember/I must have passed it somewhere/I can't quite remember/But here it comes again.'

Using a lead guitar extremely suggestive of "Rock and Roll," "Helen of Troy" is another rocking tune. Phil Scragg's bass line is the

(Continued on page 22)

Kingdom Come displays talents in debut

By DAVE MAYLISH
Staff Reporter

Kingdom Come
Kingdom Come
★★★¾

Branded as "Kingdom Clone" by Robert Plant (who seems to hold a grudge against most every hard rock band today), Kingdom Come is a virtual Led Zeppelin prototype. It seems an outrage that any band would try to fit the Zeppelin mold, but this band has done so, and rather successfully, too. Their debut album, Kingdom Come, has already proved itself a hit in record stores as entire shipments are being literally eaten up across the country. Their talent has already gotten them an invitation to the Monsters of Rock Tour by Van Halen, which will feature the likes of Dokken, Metallica, the Scorpions and Van Halen themselves, this summer.

This album can basically be divided into two types of musical sound and quality, their own original sound and their Led Zeppelin type tunes.

A good example of their Zeppelin style is in the first song, "Living Out of Touch." It opens with the classic drumming of the late John Bonham by James Kottack and the somewhat cursed voice of lead singer, Lenny Wolf. Lead guitarist, Danny Stag, even has a Jimmy Page sound about his leads. The song, though plagued by the sounds of the great rock originals themselves, is very good.

The following song, on the contrary, is a genuine example of their capability to write and play hot and heavy tunes of their own. "Pushin' Hard," with a fast tempo and a good solid melody, proves this, as well as does "The Shuffle," "Hideaway" and "Shout It Out."

"Get It On" is the song being given the most airplay from the album. This deeply meaningful song, as well as the others like it, also features the Bonham type drums, particularly during the closing strains where it is almost scary. The song is reminiscent of Kashmir and even has some AC/DC quality to it, but though it is a good heavy song with excellent guitar riffs, it still has that Zeppelin sound.

"Loving You" and "What Love Can Be" are two excellent ballads and though both are seemingly mixtures of the "Rain Song," "Babe I'm Gonna Leave You"' and "Going to California," they are still great songs in themselves.

In all, the album is a great accomplishment accentuated by the skilled playing of bassist Johnny B. Frank (who plays incredibly in "Now and Forever," another original) and the rhythm guitar of Rick Steier. Most of the songs have a love/sex type of meaning to them, such as "17" and "The Shuffle," and have the fading screams and moans characteristic to Robert Plant. Whether Kingdom Come fashioned some of their songs after Led Zeppelin in order to help them get to the top or whether they just like the sound is anybody's guess. But the fact is that this is a great band with great musicians and material. Though they heavily reflect the band which laid the foundations for themselves and all others, they surely are not a born-again Led Zeppelin.

Warlock screams their way to U.S. success

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

Triumph and Agony
Warlock
Polygram Records
★★★★

Warlock has gained a considerable following in Europe over the past four years, but only now are they breaking the American market with their newest release, Triumph and Agony. Burning the Witches (1984) and Hellbound (1985) gave the five-member metal band led by singer Doro Pesch the chance to tour Europe and appear at big shows like the Castle Donington festival. True As Steel (1986) was the first Warlock album released in America and it set the stage for the current LP. After playing a small tour of shows in America, Warlock is now touring with Megadeath because of the phenomenal success of Triumph and Agony, pushing them over the top.

Side One opens with "All We Are," the album's first video, which you may have already seen on MTV's Headbanger's Ball on Saturday nights.

Warlock is: Pesch (vocals), Niko Arvanitis (guitars), Michael Eurich (drums), Tommy Henriksen (bass) and Tommy Bolan (guitars). Eurich and Pesch are the only two remaining members of the original lineup. Arvanitis has lasted since 1985 and Henriksen and Bolan were added to the lineup when Pesch wanted to move the band's base of operations to New York and the current bassist and guitarist did not want to come along from Germany. Triumph and Agony is Warlock's finest album to date, its success lying in the fact that it is musically strong and stylistically diverse.

Side One opens with "All We Are," the album's first video, which you may have already seen on MTV's Headbanger's Ball on Saturday nights. Anthemic in style, the song showcases all of the band members' talents, the most noticeable of which is Pesch's strong vocal abilities.

Pesch is one of the few female singers in the metal/hard rock world and the beautiful tones of her voice are shown more in the slower Warlock songs. "Three Minute Warning," "I Rule the Ruins," "Kiss of Death," and "Make Time for Love" complete Side One.

"Three Minute Warning" is distinctly the fastest number on Triumph and Agony. Arvanitis and Bolan rip through the chords as Henriksen and Eurich keep the background heavy and fast. "Three Minute Warning" more closely follows the style set forth by the earlier Warlock albums. "Kiss of Death" starts out slow and then assaults you with the chorus and middle parts, whereas "I Rule the Ruins" does the exact opposite. Pesch keeps the chorus of this song melodic while the rest of the number is dominated by a heavy drum beat. "Make Time for Love" is a beautiful ballad that finishes off Side One. Pesch puts a lot of feeling and authenticity into her vocals on this one, giving a message to lovers everywhere.

"East Meet West" on Side Two tells what would happen in a battle between the USA and

(Continued on page 24)

Heavy metal rock group, Warlock. (Photo courtesy of PolyGram Records)

AC/DC abandons their past style

By JEFF GILLIES
Assistant Entertainment Editor

Blow Up Your Video
AC/DC
Atlantic Records
½

The high-voltage power is still in the music, but AC/DC seems to have lost their touch when it comes to writing songs. Not that the band ever wrote anything meaningful, but at least the songs used to be singable and showed a sense of humor.

Blow Up Your Video, the band's latest album, is just not the same AC/DC that wrote such classic tunes as "You Shook Me All Night Long." After hearing that song once, it took hold in the mind. When people went to a party, they found themselves in a group of friends, screaming the entire song as loud as their lungs could carry the words. That was the magic and appeal of AC/DC, and that is what made Back in Black perhaps the greatest heavy metal album ever.

When AC/DC reaches back to their old writing style, Blow Up Your Video is good. Unfortunately, this does not happen often. Most of the album, or the entire first side for that matter, fails miserably short of the expectations of an AC/DC album.

The first single released from the album, "Heatseeker," has the authoritative drumming, the rhythm and the rough-edge guitar base that is definitive AC/DC, but the lyrics are not in AC/DC style. In the past, with both the late Bon Scott and current singer Brian Johnson, the listener was hit with a barrage of rapid, short phrases that were always about sex, alcohol or rock and roll.

On Blow Up Your Video, the tempo is slowed down, the lines and the songs are much longer (the shortest song is almost four minutes long and most are close to five) and the magic is missing.

AC/DC is the name on the album cover, and that means loud, powerful rock and roll.

However, AC/DC is the name on the album cover, and that still means loud, powerful rock and roll. Although the band rarely puts it all together on Blow Up Your Video, guitarist Angus Young makes sure he is heard in every song. The scratchy voice of Johnson is unmistakable, and sometimes it appears the old AC/DC sound is bound to come through.

Side Two saves the album, as three songs found here are the only instances where the band does get it together.

"Nick of Time," "Some Sin For Nuthin' " and "Two's Up" bring back memories of the Back in Black album. Young shows that he is still an incredible guitar player and leaves no doubt that this band can still rock. Young is electrifying on the entire album, but is unable to carry it alone.

The problem here is not so much the music and the writing because, in all honesty, every song is good. The problem here lies in the reputation that preceeds them. AC/DC is regarded as one of the kings of heavy metal and Blow Up Your Video does not live up to the standards of greatness that they have exhibited in the past.

The songs grow on the listener, and the energy is surely there, but Blow Up Your Video does not leave any memorable lines or guitar riffs with you, even after listening to the album a few times.

Die-hard fans are sure to enjoy some of the album, but the casual music fan taken in by songs like "You Shook Me All Night Long" are not likely to be impressed. Neither are those of us who think of "For Those About to Rock," "It's a Long Way to the Top" and "Have a Drink On Me" when we think of AC/DC.

Andre and Hulk to meet in Wrestlemania

By ROBERT DUGGAN
Staff Reporter

Do you enjoy the sound of grunting and groaning? Do you gain pleasure from the sight of human flesh being thrown from pillar to post? Look no further, Wrestlemania IV is here.

Wrestlemaniacs will be flocking to Trump Plaza in Atlantic City, N.J. March 27, where the World Wrestling Federation will be staging their fourth annual spectacular.

The main event will be a tournament to determine the new W.W.F. Heavyweight Champion. The title has been vacant since the controversial Andre the Giant-Hulk Hogan title match on national television on Feb. 5.

The match, which was the first televised nationally in prime time in over 30 years, was first decided in Andre's favor, but when it was discovered that a look-alike imposter had tied up the scheduled referee and took his place, W.W.F. officials decided to set up a championship tournament.

Hulk Hogan will be trying to regain his championship in the tournament. "The Hulkster, six-foot-eight-inches and 302 pounds, had been champion for three years before the Feb. 5 fiasco. Non-wrestslemaniacs would know Hogan best for his role as Thunderlips, the ultimate male, in "Rocky III."

Andre the Giant will be trying to regain the title he feels he rightly deserves. Andre, the biggest of the W.W.F. villians, is listed as seven-foot-four-inches tall and a whopping 497 pounds. He also has had film experience, appearing as the dim-witted giant in Rob Reiner's "The Princess Bride."

Andre's financial backer and manager, the dastardly Ted DiBiase, will also be competing for the championship. DiBiase, "The Million Dollar Man," is suspected to be behind the Feb. 5 referee switch.

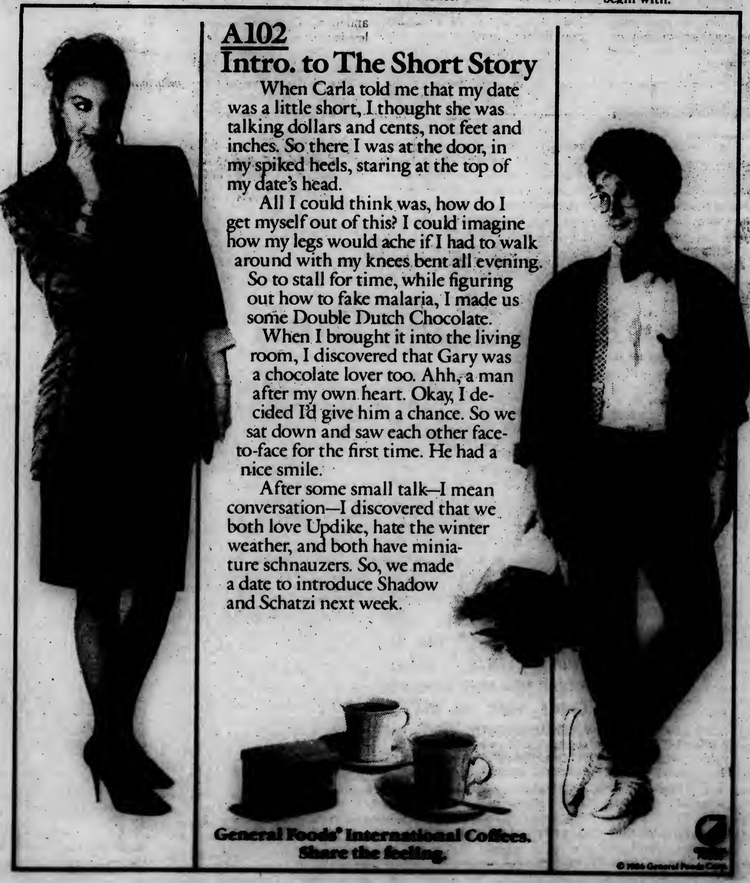
Another competitor is Randy "The Macho Man" Savage. Savage adds a classical touch to the affair as he enters the ring to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance." His manager, the lovely Elizabeth, will be at ringside.

Among other challengers: Jake "The Snake" Roberts, who brings his pet snake Damien to ringside; The One Man Gang, appropriately named at 468 pounds; Bam Bam Bigelow, who features a fireball tatoo on his scalp; and "Hacksaw" Jim Duggan (no relation to this writer, thankfully), who has the annoying habit of breaking two by fours over his opponents' heads.

The winner will be presented with the title by Robin "I'm screaming and I don't know why" Leach of "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" fame.

Other celebrities involved in Wrestlemania IV will be "Mr. Baseball" Bob Uecker and letter- and head-turner Vanna White. Uecker will be in the front row, serving as ring announcer. White will be the official time keeper for the matches, showing that not only does she know the alphabet, but that she can also tell time.

Filling out the card will be an Intercontinental Championship bout pitting The Honky Tonk Man against Brutus "The Barber" Beefcake. The Honky Tonk Man is an Elvis impersonator gone bad, who has the nasty habit of bashing people over the head with his guitar. Beefcake's annoying trait is shaving the head of his opponent after a victory.



There will also be a 20-man over-the-top-rope-elimination battle royal. Among those participating will be George "The Animal" Steele, who has been known to eat certain parts of the ring during his matches.

The Trump Plaza is sold out, but those wishing to see the card can view it on closed-circuit, giant-screen TV at The Spectrum. Pay Per View Cable will also be offering the show for $19.95. The proceedings will begin at 4 p.m.

Call it sport or call it schlock, it can not be denied that wrestling has become a major entertainment phenomenon of the 1980s. It may be a lot of things, but it certainly is not dull. If you do plan to go, however, please have all head-bashing materials at the door. There will be enough inside to begin with.

Happy Birthday

Jeff Gillies

Friendly Floppies . . . .

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

JINXTER  RAINBIRD C64/128, AMIGA, AP, ST, IBM, MAC

This text-and-graphics adventure is the newest from the designers of the award-winning The Pawn and The Guild of Thieves. Once again, they have designed an entirely original premise for an adventure game. The land of Aquitania is protected from ill-fortune by a magical bracelet of Tulani that contains seven charms. The bracelet protects the citizens from the nasty Green Witches. The witches paid some citizens to remove the charges from the bracelet, thus removing its power. It is up to you, the jinxter, to find the charms, reassemble the bracelet and defeat the witches before all luck leaves Aquitania.

Jinxter is well-presented and the documentation and inclusions in the package are excellent. Hints are included in a booklet and the game takes up two disks. The graphics use the full potential of the computer and the game offers many options to change your playing environment.

UNINVITED  MINDSCAPE C64/128, AMIGA, MAC, IBM, ST

Uninvited is a mystery adventure game that takes place inside a haunted house. The graphics are very good and the interface used to play the game is very easy to become accustomed to in a short amount of time. The game uses the system first introduced in Deja Vu that is comprised of menus, icons and a pointer to execute your commands in the gaming world. Objects can be selected by clicking the pointer on them in the graphics window or by using one of the eight icon commands to refer to them. In either case, game play flows smoothly.

In Uninvited, you find yourself in a car crash. The last thing you remember is your brother's scream before the accident. Now he is gone and you need help. A nearby house awaits your visit and search for your brother. The unspeakable things inside add horror overtones to this great game.

MARAUDER II  DISCOVERY SOFTWARE INTERNATIONAL AMIGA

Marauder II is simply the best copy/back up program that you can get for the Amiga. It is simple to use and relatively quick, considering the amount of data that a disk can hold. The program supports three external disk drives and allows simultaneous coping of disks to these drives, making Marauder II an effective software reproduction program. There are a few options that you can play around with, as well as a listiong of the programs that Marauder II can back up (which is just about all that are out for the Amiga as of now.)

In addition to the Marauder II program, the disk contains four useful utility programs. Reflector3 backs up Mirror Copy. The Decoder produces decrypted versions of some popular programs. DiskErr checks a disk for errors and DiskWipe erases a disk rather quickly. All utilities are simple to use and a great addition.

CITY DEFENCE ½ CONSTELLATION SOFTWARE AMIGA

For you Amiga owners who happened to like the Atari arcade game Missile Command, here is a game that is about as close as you can get to the original. City Defence is an intense battle in which you must destroy missiles heading from outer space, as well as planes and space ships. They head for the ground, upon which are six cities and two ammunition supply mounds that contain your only weapon — rockets. Each mound has 15 rockets and you must aim the rockets at the most strategically sound places in order to clear a round of enemies before running out of ammunition.

The graphics are great in City Defence and the action never stops, except between rounds. However, the real strength of City Defence is its stereo sound effects and music. The sounds give the game an extra something that makes it worth buying.

GAUNTLET: THE DEEPER DUNGEONS  MINDSCAPE C64/128, AT

The arcade conversion of Gauntlet was released by Mindscape for home computers only in the past few months. For those who have conquered all of the dungeons of the original game, Gauntlet: The Deeper Dungeons should keep you satisfied for quite a while. Containing 500 new levels to explore, you can think of this game as a "scenery disk" for Gauntlet (the original disk is required).

The goal of Gauntlet is for one or two players to guide a character through a dungeon level to reach the exit. Many obstacles are in the way, including monsters (ghosts, demons and monster generators, teleporters, traps and destructible walls as wellas treasure, potions and food. The deeper Dungeons has levels that require more thinking than fighting and they are more cleverly designed. This disk is a must for those owners of the home computer version bored with the original dungeons already.

WKVU TOP 35

TOP 35 - WEEK 3/21

3/14	3/21
3.	1.	Sinead O'Connor "Mandinka" (Chrysalis)
1.	2.	Midnight Oil "Beds Are Burning" (Columbia)
5.	3.	Public Image Limited "Seattle" (Virgin)
4.	4.	Godfathers "Birth, School, Work, Death" (Epic)
6.	5.	Church "Under the Milky Way" (Arista)
10.	6.	Woodentops "Maybe It Won't Last" (Columbia)
7.	7.	Sonic Youth "Beat On the Brat" (SST)
14.	8.	INXS "Devil Inside" (Atlantic)
2.	9.	Firehose "Sometimes" (SST)
9.	10.	Flesh for Lulu "Hammer of Love" (Capitol)
11.	11.	Robyn Hitchcock and the Egyptians "Balloon Man" (A & M)
16.	12.	T-Bone Burnett "Killer Moon" (Columbia)
18.	13.	Bryan Ferry "Kiss and Tell" (Reprise)
19.	14.	Big Dipper "All Going Out Together" (Homestead)
22.	15.	So "Are You Sure" (EMI - Manhattan)
20.	16.	New Order "Touched By the Hand of God" (Factory U.K.)
17.	17.	David Sylvian "Orpheus" (Virgin)
24.	18.	Cure "Hot, Hot, Hot" (Elektra)
--	19.	Crazy House "Burning Rain" (Chrysalis)
12.	20.	R.E.M. "It's the End of the World as We Know It (And I Feel Fine)" (I.R.S.)
27.	21.	Pato Banton "Don't Sniff Coke" (Primitive Man)
21.	22.	Pogues "If I Should Fall From Grace with God" (Island)
15.	23.	They Might Be Giants "Don't Let's Start" (Bar/None)
23.	24.	Fetchin' Bones "Stray" (Capitol)
25.	25.	Sinead O'Connor "Troy" (Chrysalis)
28.	26.	Red Hot Chili Peppers "Behind the Sun" (Capitol)
29.	27.	Eurythmics "You Have Placed a Chill in My Heart" (RCA)
--	28.	Morrissey "Suede Head" (Sire)
13.	29.	Jerry Harrison:Casual Gods "Rev It Up" (Sire-WB)
26.	30.	Terence Trent D'Arby "Wishing Well" (Columbia)
--	31.	Talking Heads "(Nothing But) Flowers" (Sire)
--	32.	Durutti Column "Bordeaux Sequence" (Virgin)
30.	33.	Snatches of Pink "Cry Wolf" (Dog-Gone)
--	34.	SPK "Breathless" (Nettwerk/Canada)
8.	35.	Echo and the Bunnymen "Bedbugs and Ballyhoo" (Sire-WB)
		FRESH ADDS
	--	Mighty Lemon Drops "Inside Out" (Sire-Reprise)
	--	Splatcats "Even Steven" (Moving Target/CelluOid)
	--	Jet Black Factory "3 Poisons" (391 Records)

Entertainment Calendar

Art

Cultural Film Series
Connelly Center Cinema
Villanova University
215-645-4000
March 26-28 — Mother Teresa

Philadelphia Museum of Art
Parkway at 26th Street
Philadelphia, Pa. 19101
215-763-8100
March 26 — 60th Anniversary Celebration

Philadelphia Art Alliance
251 South 18th St.
Philadelphia, Pa. 19103
215-545-4302
March 29 — "For Love of the Double Bass"

Music

23 E. Cabaret
23 E. Lancaster Ave.
Ardmore, Pa.
215-896-6420
March 25 — Pay Attention/Scram
March 26 — Johnny O and the Classic Dogs of Love
March 29 — WKVU College Night
March 30 — the Snap
March 31 — Beru Revue

Valley Forge Music Fair
Route 202
Devon, Pa. 19333
215-667-6290
March 25 — Vic Damone and Diahann Carroll
March 26, 27 — Smokey Robinson and Natalie Cole

Ambler Cabaret
43 E. Butler Pike
Ambler, Pa.
215-646-8117
March 25 — Dynagroove/No Alibi Blues
March 29 — Secret Cities
March 30 — the Chasers
March 31 — Flamin' Caucasians/the Bullets

Theater

Theater of Living Arts
334 South St.
Philadelphia, Pa. 19147
215-569-9416
April 1, 2 — "Sister Mary Ignatius Explains It All For You"

On The Scene. . .Entertainment Tidbits

By STEPHEN POWERS
Staff Reporter

Oh, no — both Baby M and Vanna White will be gracing television screens soon with their own TV movies. Also making headlines this week are Lisa Bonet, who is creating controversy on "A Different World," and Ed Flanders, who is causing trouble on "St. Elsewhere."

Oh, no — both Baby M and Vanna White will be gracing television screens soon with their own TV movies.

But first, the "Baby M" custody suit, between William and Elizabeth Stern and surrogate mother Mary Beth Whitehead Gould is barely out of the courtroom and ABC is already planning a "docudrama" on the case. Jobeth Williams will play Gould, and former "Hill Street Blues" co-star Bruce Weitz will play her ex-husband Richard in the four-hour miniseries, which will air this spring.

John Shea ("Witness") will be biological father William Stern, with Robin Strasser ("One Life to Live") as his wife. Dabney Coleman ("'Slap' Maxwell") will portray the Sterns' attorney.

The drama will include an update on the case at its conclusion. In real-life, Gould and the Sterns are currently working out a visitation schedule for Gould.

On a lighter note, "Wheel of Fortune" hostess Vanna White is getting a TV movie of her own. In "The Goddess of Love" (appropriately titled), White plays a statue of comedic misadventures. The movie is described by White as a cross between "Splash" and "I Dream of Jeannie."

"Goddess" is White's first major acting role since she took over the "Wheel" job in 1982. Since then, she has appeared on several prime-time series, such as "Simon and Simon" and "It's Garry Shandling's Show," but always as herself. Her new movie begins filming in June, and will air on NBC next season.

Meanwhile, over at NBC's "A Different World," the behind-the-scenes happenings are turning out to be much more interesting than the show itself. The latest plot twist: the departure of co-executive producer Anne Beatts, who is not exactly one of series-star Lisa Bonet's best friends.

Beatts, a former writer for "Saturday Night Live," was hired in the 11th hour last summer to fix Bonet's "Cosby Show" spinoff. The early episodes drew poor reviews from both Bill Cosby and NBC entertainment chief Brandon Tartikoff, and were never aired. At the last minute, Beatts added several new characters to spice up the show: Maggie (Marisa Tomei), Whitley (Jasmine Guy) and Lettie (Mary Alice).

Meanwhile, over at NBC's "A Different World," the behind-the-scenes happenings are turning out to be much more interesting than the show itself.

But the changes did not sit well with Bonet, who reportedly threw tantrums and screamed at Beatts: "Get out of my face or else I'm going to slap you." Rumors circulated that Cosby, who has control over "World," threatened to fire Bonet for feuding with Beatts.

Beatts is currently on vacation and had no comment on her departure, but an NBC spokesman said that her parting was "amicable." Her replacement on "World" has not yet been named.

There was also some backstage tension at "St. Elsewhere" last week, during the filming of the show's final episode. Ed Flanders, who plays former St. Eligius chief-of-staff Donald Westphall, ruffled some feathers when he refused to say his lines as written.

The writers, producers and actors were upset when Flanders turned a speech, which was supposed to be a touching statement about beginnings and endings, into a depressing monologue about death. The producers may re-shoot the scene, with Dr. Mark Craig (William Daniels) giving the speech.

Flanders, who is known to be temperamental, left "Elsewhere" last year, but returned for one last appearance in the final episode. Although the program is currently on hiatus, it will return next month for six new episodes, ending with the series finale, entitled "The Last One," on May 28.

SHORT TAKES: Like its four predecessors, "Police Academy V: Assignment Miami Beach" managed to capture the #1 spot at the box office on its first weekend out last week. "Good Morning, Vietnam" was pushed down to second place for the first time in months, and the Dennis Quaid-Meg Ryan thriller "D.O.A." placed third . . .

CBS' new "Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour" is a go after all. I reported last week that CBS had delayed the show's premiere due to the ongoing writers' strike. But CBS said this week that there is enough material for several episodes, so the program will make its debut next Wednesday, as scheduled . . .

And finally, ABC suddenly put "The 'Slap' Maxwell Story" on hiatus after last week's episode. The series, which stars Dabney Coleman as a despicable sportswriter, has been turning off viewers in droves all season.

Sources: USA Today, The Philadelphia Inquirer

Warlock

(Continued from page 21)

Russia ("When East meets West/ there's gonna be one hell of a mess") and resumes the hard edge missing in "Make Time for Love." "Touch of Evil" and "Cold, Cold World" move along at the same pace, but differ in emphasis. "Touch of Evil" has Pesch making teeth-shattering screams.

"Cold, Cold World" is the opener for the Warlock show on tour and relies heavily on the guitar work of Bolan and Arvanitis. "Metal Tango" opens with what sounds like the crowd on the WWF's wrestling album and television show and is instantly recognizable by the chorus: "Dance demons/ lose control/ this is a metal — a metal tango."

'Triumph and Agony' should appeal to music fans of all types because of the diversity of the music.

Finally, "Fur Immer" finishes off the album and Side Two as Side One ended, with another ballad. However, this song is unique in that, except for two lines in the chorus, the song is sung entirely in German. Warlock play this song live and Pesch explains that "fur immer" means "for always." In any case, "Fur Immer" is a reflective piece — good to put on before going to bed — and reveals Pesch singing in her native tongue.

Triumph and Agony should appeal to music fans of all types because of the diversity of the music. The album is stronger musically than lyrically and the band is very tight. Seeing Warlock live is the only way to catch them at their best. Pesch innocently encourages the crowd in her strong German accent, then belts out the tunes while the rest of the band gives it their all. Pesch is a singer who can totally captivate your attention — but maybe that is because she is a beautiful blond as well as an excellent singer with a strong personality.

In any case, if you can catch the band live with Megadeath — do so. If not, run out and get Triumph and Agony, for there is sure to be something that you will like on the record.

RSA

CAMPUS HOTLINE

RSA

MR. VILLANOVA 1988
APRIL 22

Applications for both contestants and female emcees available in the RSA Office 215 Dougherty – due March 25

GO-PHER IT!!

EXECUTIVE BOARD SELECTIONS

Applications Available in the RSA Office
DUE MARCH 28

RESIDENT STUDENT ASSOC.
215 Dougherty Hall
645-7210

RSA

Housekeeping creates a humorous world

By RICHARD ABRAHAM
Staff Reporter

"Housekeeping"
directed by Bill Forsyth
Columbia Pictures
★★★½

Bill Forsyth, writer and director, has once again created a genuinely inspired and humorous world in his new film "Housekeeping." To accompany this simple humor, Forsyth has also given the story characters that develop and can be cared for in lives that seem quite real, if slightly askew.

The setting is 1950s Fingerbone, a small, pleasant, but cold town. In one house, Lucille (Andrea Burchill) and Ruth (Sara Walker) are being raised by a succession of older relatives. Until Aunt Sylvie (Christine Lahti) arrives, the girl's existence in Fingerbone is somewhat dreary, considering that their acquaintances are devoid of anybody under 60. Sylvie appears as the most recent of the elder relatives, Aunt Lily and Aunt Nona, two over-protective and nervous senior citizens, grow tired of the cold in Fingerbone and of raising the two girls. With Sylvie's presence, Lucille and Ruth show certain relief and hope for the joy of their future life, welcoming Sylvie's oddities with excitement and curiosity.

The true story of "Housekeeping" begins, however, when Ruth and Lucille start to separate in their reactions to their newfound relative's unusual lifestyle. Lucille begins to feel ashamed of Sylvie's habits, such as collecting newspapers (many newspapers), sleeping on park benches, slumming at train stations and wading in flood water.

Meanwhile, Ruth wants to emulate her Aunt Sylvie. Ruth wants to accompany her on journeys in the woods and to lead an eccentric life without direction. From this point on, "Housekeeping" focuses upon the societal beliefs that can divide a family and how this division occurs. The tension of this idea is offset by the severe calm with which Forsyth approaches every scene, a calm pervading upon the film's entire atmosphere. Forsyth has seen success with this formula of relaxed tension in films such as "Gregory's Girl," "Local Hero" and "Comfort and Joy."

In "Housekeeping" he is also helped by the performances, including Burchill and Walker's as Lucille and Ruth, but particularly Lahti's Aunt Sylvie, whose simplicity epitomizes Forsyth's film. Aunt Sylvie is one person that is simply different from others in society. She sees nothing wrong with how she lives, although she does know it is unusual and does not mind if others, such as Lucille and Ruth, separate from or conform to the world, as long as they want what they have as a result. Lahti's performance as Aunt Sylvie is no matter-of-fact that no matter how unusual or bizarre her life may seem, one knows that all she does has common sense in her world.

Basically, she plays the role as an intelligent, active and real person, instead of an exaggerated eccentric and as a result, the Aunt Sylvie character is not an object of pity, but is relatively easy to identify with. This technique works well for most of "Housekeeping" but the film's main problem manages to rise in spite of this.

The problem is that the identification one feels with Sylvie is lost. Her activities and speech, although played as reality, seem to evade any real world, except for her own. Aunt Sylvie is romanticized by Forsyth as a figure of individual freedom, but with that loss of identification, both her stance and societies can be questioned in their conflict. This dual questioning eventually lessens the effectiveness of the film's conclusion.

But, this film should be judged solely on the effectiveness of its conclusion, for "Housekeeping" is a worthwhile film to see, as it is certainly unique and truly enjoyable with all of its blemishes.

(Photo courtesy of Pay Attention)

Modern rock-n-roll band, Pay Attention, will appear at the 23 East Cabaret in Ardmore tonight. Former Villanova liturgical music director, Dan Mason (second from left), is a member of the band.

FREE SCHOLARSHIP INFORMATION FOR STUDENTS WHO NEED MONEY FOR COLLEGE

Every Student Is Eligible for Some Type of Financial Aid Regardless of Grades or Parental Income.

- We have a data bank of over 200,000 listings of scholarships, fellowships, grants, and loans, representing over $10 billion in private sector funding.
- Many scholarships are given to students based on their academic interests, career plans, family heritage and place of residence.
- There's money available for students who have been newspaper carriers, grocery clerks, cheerleaders, non-smokers . . . etc.
- Results GUARANTEED.

CALL ANYTIME — For A Free Brochure 1-800-638-3845

SNOW MAY BE WHITE - BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE

GOLDEN IMAGE TANNING CENTERS

566 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA
Located Next to Al E Gators
CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
525-7125

- Safe UVA Tanning
- Open 7 Days
- Complete Privacy
- Relaxing Atmosphere
- Trained Technicians
- Wolff Coppertone Products

ONE FREE TANNING SESSION! New Customers Only Limit One Per Person With Coupon Only Expires 3/31/88

SAVE $9.00 7 VISITS ONLY $35.00 New Customers Only Limit One Per Person With Coupon Only Expires 3/31/88

We feature:
Nevalarium Lamps exclusively from patented SCA Wolff System
"The World's #1 Choice in Indoor Tanning"

COLLEGE DISCOUNT — 20% OFF ANY PACKAGE
Villanova Student I.D. Required
American Express Cards Accepted
Have FUN in the SUN Longer this Spring Break!

Classified and Personal Advertising

CLASSIFIEDS

Counselors Wanted — Trim down physical fitness easily NYS overnight camp. Sports, WSI's, computers, weight training, kitchen. Camp Shane, Peru, Canada, N.Y. 12734. Telephone (914) 288-4948.

Condo for sale. Radnor House, fifth floor, panelled, two bedrooms plus den and one and one-half baths. Below market value. $67,000. Call 525-5218.

Wanted: Male Student — spring and summer outdoor helper, casual gardening & yard work. Very flexible, in St. David's. Call 688-9113.

Wanted: girl to help with light housekeeping. Now through last term. Can talk with present employer who graduated. Present condition, very clean. Call 688-9113.

Leading toy products with degree in engineering, manufacturer in the Valley Forge business center in Norristown now seeking graduates for marketing research, product engineering and domestic sales. Also seeking engineering students to work in the quality control areas for summer employment. Please send resume to Box 1, Villanovan, Villanova, PA 19085.

Kennel staff needed for veterinary hospital in King of Prussia. Full or part-time considered. Call Anne at 265-6044.

Professional Resume Preparation — write, edit, update, print, copy, type. Same-day service. U.S. Typewriter and Resume Center, King of Prussia Plaza, King of Prussia. 265-7669. Hours: Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-9:30 p.m., Sunday 12-5 p.m. It is never too early!

Housepainters wanted! Top paid College Industries, 121 24th Ave., N.W. Suite 222, Norman, Oklahoma 73069.

Projectionist wanted for film classes. No experience necessary, will train. $4.10 an hour. Freshmen preferred. C.A. department, 645-4790.

Hiring — Government jobs — your area. Many immediate openings without waiting list or test. $15,000-$68,000. Call (602) 838-8885, Ext. 8897.

Where will you live next year? WEICHERT REALTORS has the answer. Three affordable condominium units ranging from $75,000 to $95,000 now available. Convenience, character, pool and security. Call Maureen or Suzanne today. 640-0838.

Wanted: Women, 18-35, to model for photographic classes. No experience necessary. Call 527-1990 after 5 p.m. Ask for Dave.

Personal Secretarial Services, Inc. (U. Penn/Wharton) Professional & low-cost typing. Resumes. No charge for full cost justification. 1419-A Lombard St., Phila., PA 19146. 546-5775.

Typing — Fast, accurate, reasonable. Call 527-1997. Ask for Pam.

The Resident Advisor, Assist/train mentally retarded residents in apartment CLA in northeast Philadelphia. Excellent benefits. Full-time/part-time positions. Blue Cross, Blue Shield, HMO, paid leave time. Salary $4.80-$5 per hour. Minimum requirements: two years of college or high school plus two years experience in human services. Call Pat at 631-2868.

Budget typist, dependable, accurate, affordable. Call 828-6693 between 5:30 and 9 p.m. Quick service.

National Camp Association. Summer camp job clearinghouse. Highest salaries paid — Quick and efficient job placement — a free service. Call us for an interview at 1-800-752-CAMP.

Lifeguard Positions Summer 1988. Many Philadelphia area locations. Must be certified. Call Arrow Pool Co. at 834-0841.

Summer opportunities. College students: Great summer job opportunity one hour from New York City. Girls' residence camp seeks program, nature and arts and crafts specialists, counselors, waterfront staff, cooks, nurse, and maintenance personnel. Competitive salary, benefits, plus room and board. Contact: Camp Director, RD #3 Box 80, Samus Point, NY 14712 or call (716) 366-0455.

The United States Marine Corp. Judge Advocate Officer is looking for a few adventurous, gung-ho young men and women to participate in our commissioning program leading to a commission as an Officer of Marines. Good pay, travel, promotion and a lot more opportunities to come. Call Lt. Isbell, our recruiter, and find out if you have what it takes. Call collect (215) 596-0442 and ask for Captain Farr.

United States Marine Corps Undergraduate Officer Programs Freshmen — The Marines are looking for a few highly qualified men who want to lead. This summer, at no obligation, you can find out if you have what it takes. We offer good pay, tuition assistance, loan deferments, aviation guarantees, and the most challenging and rewarding experience available to young men of adventure. To learn more, call 386-5558 and ask for Captain Farr.

Dodge Charger 2.2, 1983. Three door hatch; concealed trunk; Red with sport striping/lettering. Clean red cloth interior. Detailed and rust proofed. Five speed. Feat. 25 to 30 miles per gallon. Front wheel drive, sunroof, air, cruise, stereo-tape. New 1988 inspection. Single owner; 60,000 miles. $3,200. Leave message anytime or call after 8 p.m.: 687-4043.

Babysitter needed. Two to three days per week beginning May 15. Within walking distance of the University. Salary negotiable. Call 525-2013 after 6 p.m.

Walk to School from 2 bedroom fully furnished Radnor House Condo, air conditioned, balcony, completely renovated, one and one half yrs. old, available for sale July 1, 1988. Inquirers call 201-462-7956.

PERSONALS

Leak: Women's antique pin lost March 18, between Bartley Hall and Chamberlain. Sentimental value. If found please call 642-3640. Reward!

B.P. — It's been good so far, let's take one day at a time. XO Ba.

Secretary thanks the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, for blessing and good wishes received on her birthday . . . a much-surprised secretary received best wishes and a blessing from Driscoll during her lunch hour at Dougherty Hall. Father and secretary made a pact to meet once again at Dougherty, 50 years from now for her 100th birthday. Thank you Father. Joyce Vlassopoulos, internship program.

Hey Guys! I need you tonight to come with me and mediate with INXS! Love you all, S.

St. Mary's Third Floor: Thanks for the match. Good luck next time. Rematch Saturday, 3:00, 3rd floor Alumni. P.S., Thanks for the bevs.

3RD FLOOR ALUMNI, Even though you beat us, your room smells like red herring. Love, Jay, Joe, Chris & Ted.

Jim S. — I think we've finally got our act together! (Hopefully). You definitely are "the key to my peace of mind." I hope this wonderful feeling never ends. Love, Babe.

Terri — Happy B-Day to my buddy, the social phenomenon. Let's hit the opera again, but this time I'll bring a pillow. By the way, when are we eloping? — Kevin.

Mike — Happy Birthday to a good friend and an incredible stud (at least that's what Mary says). Let's have a blast tonight in Valley Forge. It's the end of the world as we know it. — Kevin.

Angie — Happy Anniversary!! Love, Sean.

For What It's Worth . . .Commentary

By MICHAEL AIMETTE AND BILL CARR
Staff Reporters

After a mediocre album and some inter-personal conflicts caused by David Byrne-Mania, Talking Heads has managed to stay together a little longer, rearrange their musical direction a bit, and record a pretty solid album in Naked.

Always interested in exploring new musical territories, Talking Heads decided it was time to get out of America — so after improvising for awhile in New York, they shipped out to Paris, joined by several other musicians including guitarist Johnny Marr. Here the band recorded the music, minus the words. Byrne concentrated on the melody lines in Paris, and only later back in New York did he write the lyrics.

Enough history. The first thing one wonders when picking up the new Talking Heads' album must be, "Why is there a monkey on the cover?" And why the title Naked for that matter? David Byrne has always been a bit on the eccentric side, but the answer to these questions becomes quite apparent after one listening.

On Naked, Byrne is probably as direct as he has ever been lyrically. Byrne is fed up with modern civilization, and he hopes to return to the pre-evolutionary time of innocence. He bemoans the foils of modern society on the opening track "Blind," "Now tell me what the hell have we become? . . . No sense of harmony, No sense of time." The song recalls the African influence of Remain In Light with horns and congas, and is easily the most interesting song on the album.

The Latin-flavored "Mr. Jones" is a comic potrait of a man who has sold his soul for success: "He's everybody's friend." "The Democratic Circus" continues the "Mr. Jones" theme; the title explains all.

"Totally Nude" and "(Nothing But) Flowers" best express Byrne's evolutionary theme. "(Nothing But) Flowers," the irresistible first single, has Byrne moaning, "Don't leave me stranded here/ I can't get used to this lifestyle." In the Little Creatures-ish "Totally Nude," Byrne says, "It's irresponsible/ So civilized . . . Nature boy, nature man, take me along." On "Cool Water," the album's final song, Byrne warns that we're running out of time: "And his lungs are filled with rain . . . And the water's rushing in . . ."

Byrne may have read too many Charles Darwin works between albums, but his message is nonetheless felt. The music is dense, but maybe too dense — things can get boring at times on this album. Any Talking Heads album is worth buying though, and Naked is a marked improvement over True Stories.

When Robert Plant, after his most successful solo tour to date in 1985, suddenly fired his entire band, he surely seemed on the brink of retirement. But, after hiring an all-new, younger, band Plant has released one of the finest albums of 1988, Now And Zen. Plant, nearing 40, has finally realised it is not so bad to recognize his famous past as Led Zeppein frontman, and his use of Zeppelin digital samples and two brilliant Jimmy Page guitar solos on the album indicate this. The main reason for Plant's renewed enthusiasm is keyboardist Phil Johnstone, who co-writes on eight of the nine tracks and provides an aggressive, hungrier feel to the songs. Sure, Plant's twice our age, but with Now And Zen, who is to say his best is behind him?

Tiffany's newest single, "I Saw Him Standing There," a brilliantly "witty" cover of The Beatles classic "I Saw Her Standing There," was just too bad for either of us to resist. This song is so pathetically awful, it seems almost deliberate. She is such a talentless person that one must question how she could possibly land a recording contract. Tiff, your mom's calling you! Go home! Seriously, though, if you like her genre of music, invest in her substantially more talented rival, Debbie Gibson.

Guitar hero Eric Clapton is set to release a compendium of his 25 year career, titled Crossroads. The six album (four CD) set features his hits with The Yardbirds, Cream, Blind Faith, Derek and the Dominos and his solo career, along with rare live and studio tracks. Recommended for any blues/rock enthusiast . . . The Smithereens released their second Enigma-label record, titled Green Thoughts — out in stores now . . . Another guitar legend, Jimmy Page, will release a solo album in early summer; it features many big-time guests. More in the next issue . . .

Plant

(Continued from page 21)

most prominent of the album.

David Boyle's guitar rises to the forefront of "Billy's Revenge." This song really boogies along, helped by the best sounding drums of the album.

"Ship Of Fools," provides Plant's best bluesy vocal performance. The light guitar and keyboards, along with the theme of lost love, brings to mind "Going To California."

"Why" makes you sure to remember that Plant always strives towards being a contemporary artist. The backing vocals are, once again, quite good.

With "White, Clean And Neat," Plant dispells anyone's idea that he could possibly fit this image because of his crooning of "Sea Of Love" on the Honeydrippers project. In fact, the album proves once again that he remains the King of Cock Rock. Appropriately, the narrator is Jerry Wayne, a hit crooner of the 40's. The choruses sung by the backup vocalists help make this another fun tune.

Robert Plant has put together a solid, rock album. By taking a look back at his past, he has moved his career forward into new territory. Plant has reworked his old themes with an introspective twist, and awakened the soaring guitar at his side — but now, the tickling keyboards control the rhythm more than the ponderous drum beat, creating a new modern sound for the Zeppelin vocalist.

Plant has found a fine balance between not compromising his desire to be current (yet not pop), and drawing upon the successes of his illustrious career. Most importantly, Plant's new phase of his career displays tremendous promise for future albums as he regains confidence in his blues roots.

New music talents shine

By JOE McGOWAN
Senior Reporter

Remembrance Days
The Dream Academy
Reprise Records
★★★★

"Indian Summer" is the first single from Remembrance Days, the new, and second recording from The Dream Academy, and it has something of the rhythm and atmosphere of their first, very successful single, "Life in a Northern Town."

The self-titled debut from The Dream Academy had a somewhat bigger sound than does Remembrance Days, with sharper contrasts and more emphasis on guitars and drums — an influence, no doubt, of their first producer and guiding hand, Pink Floyd's David Gilmour. Remembrance Days has a softer sound, and this, again, has something to do with one of the album's producer's — Lindsey Buckingham.

Nick Claird-Lowes (lead vocals, guitars), Gilbert Gabriel (keyboards, vocals), and Kate St. John (oboe, saxophone, cor anglais, vocals), the members of The Dream Academy, cite The Beatles as their prime influence, but the sound they have is really all their own. The nearest way of describing their sound would be to mention Roxy Music and Fleetwood Mac (especially now with Buckingham's participation in their work).

As with the first Dream Academy record, several big names in the music world showed up to help. This time around, guests included Genesis producer Hugh Padgham, Larry Fast and Jerry Marotta (the keyboardist and drummer from Peter Gabriel's outfit), Paul Carrack (on piano) and Buckingham (on guitar).

On the first side of Remembrance Days, after the opening single "Indian Summer," which is every bit as pleasing as its predecessor "Life in a Northern Town," four tracks follow with a soft, subtle sound and the usual flawless execution and production to be expected from The Dream Academy. Standouts on the first side, besides the single, are "The Lesson of Love" and "Hampstead Girl."

The second side opens with "In the Hands of Love," a more powerful and energetic track, somewhat reminiscent of "The Edge of Forever," "Bound to Be" and "The Love Parade" from the first LP. "Ballad in 4/4" and "Everybody's Gotta Lean Sometime" are also strong tracks, in their own quiet way, while "Doubleminded" is the album's one weak spot — it makes The Dream Academy sound like the Human League.

Remembrance Days closes with "In Exile (For Rodrigo Rojas)," a longer and more complex work in memory of the Chilean student burned to death in the streets of Santiago by Pinochet's soldiers. Lyrics that were before pensive and romantic suddenly become starkly realistic: "Where soldiers tear gas churches/ And there's ten thousand missing persons/ Whose cases are never solved/ And the Government advises not to get involved/ No Te Metas . . . " "In Exile" brings to a very serious finish the second, first-rate release from The Dream Academy, whose dexterous playing and perfectionism should earn them a unique place in the music world.

. . . To the Third Power
3
Geffen Records
★★★

. . . To The Third Power is the debut release from what could be called EBP. Although rumors of an ELP (Emerson, Lake, and Palmer) reunion had been circulating for nearly a year, the virtuoso keyboardist Keith Emerson and the equally skilled drummer Carl Palmer have teamed up with Robert Berry to form 3, a group that comes dangerously close to the new supergroup model established six years ago by Asia.

While members of the early '70s supergroups (Yes, Genesis, ELP, King Crimson, etc.) were always interchangeable, the absence of Greg Lake from any Emerson and Palmer lineup is sure to be sorely missed. ELP had essentially fallen apart after the 1979 North American Tour, after a brilliant eight-year career. Nineteen eighty-six saw something of a reunion in the form of ELPO (Emerson, Lake, and Powell). Cozy Powell seemed an odd choice at first — a hard rock/heavy metal drummer in an art rock trio. But the album Emerson, Lake, and Powell and the supporting tour saw the dynamic return of Emerson and Lake, and drummer Powell gave new strength to ELP's work. "Touch and Go" was their strongest single in a decade and the powerful rendition of "Mars, the Bringer of War" from Holst's Planets was perhaps their best instrumental ever (ELP or ELPO).

There was much talk that Carl Palmer was exiting from John Wetton's Asia, and all of it true. The replacement of vocalist/bassist/guitarist Greg Lake with newcomer Robert Berry was, though, quite a surprise.

And so there is 3. Their debut . . . To The Third Power begins with three pop-oriented tracks, "Talkin' Bout," "Lover to Lover" and "Chains," and the second side contains more of the same (including a very strange, though not altogether bad, reworking of The Byrds' "Eight Miles High"). The material is by no means of poor quality. But nearly any other group could have recorded the cuts. Only the occasional sparkle of Emerson's keyboards or the thunder of Palmer's drums raises the fare above the level of MTV product.

The short tracks by 3 do allow Berry to exhibit his fine, clear voice, which works well with performers known to indulge, on occasion, in wild and lengthy instrumentals. But, for the most part, Emerson and Palmer seem to have had some sort of musical restraining orders placed on them — neither dominates any of the seven shorter songs. There is only one track left to . . . To The Third Power, and it is by far the very best.

At the close of the first side is the longer piece "Desde La Vida," a three-part work that picks up the theme of "Pirates," from 1977's Works, Volume I, with tales of treasure and Spanish galleons. The parts that make the whole, "La Vista," "Sangre De Toro" and the intervening instrumental section "Frontera," show that "EBP," when they shake off the confines of the four-minute pop track, can stand on its own when compared to ELP in its heyday.

"Desde La Vida," the longest track on the album, combines little pieces of everything that made ELP great, and Berry's vocals on the piece show that he is also quite capable of handling well the more expressive work of Emerson and Palmer. Though it may seem heretical to ELP fans to say so, this most recent major piece from "EBP" could, given time and several listenings, rank with the hallowed "Karn Evil 9." "Desde La Vida" should offset any disappointment ELP fans have at the absence of Lake, and, if "EBP" allow themselves to expand creatively their current work, a new supergroup may be born.

CONGRATULATIONS TO THE 1988-89 A.C.S. EXECUTIVE BOARD!!!

President . . . . . Trysha Whalon
Vice president . . . . . Dan Dougherty
Secretary . . . . . Mary Johnson
Treasurer . . . . . Edie Pearce
Social functions . . . . . Mindy New
Special events . . . . . Mario Forcina
Mens intramurals . . . . . Paul Perri
Womens intramurals . . . . . Scott Calvert
Publicity . . . . . Joe Pawluczyk
Publications . . . . . Irene Langran
Commuter concerns . . . . . John De Masi

Stop by the Association of Commuting Students office (215 Dougherty Hall) for information about joining a committee, upcoming events or just to say hi.

A.C.S. . . . where the Action is!!!!!!

Greek Page

Greeks form response committee

By CRAIG ZAPPETTI
Staff Reporter

A committee of 10 fraternity and sorority members, headed by Lisa Gunnery of Delta Gamma and Craig Zappetti of Lambda Chi Alpha, was formed to compile a response to the "Evaluation of the Greek Organization System." This evaluation was formulated by members of the administration and staff in February 1987.

The report was designed as a "review of the present fraternity and sorority system at the University in light of the University's general educational goals and specific student life goals."

The response committee was formed in the spring semester of 1988 to critique the observations and conclusions the evaluating board reached through its study.

The group plans not only to answer the evaluation itself, but to list items it felt consistently lacking in the group's evaluation.

Co-chairperson Lisa Gunnery stated, "Not only are we trying to present an overall opinion of the committee's evaluation, but we are also trying to present our system in a new light — one that attracts attention to more than just the social aspect of our Greek system and focuses more on the beneficial experience of Greek life."

The committee plans to survey both Greeks and non-Greeks to compile facts in support of their conclusions. In the response, the committee will include an analysis of the evaluation and sections detailing the assets the Greek system brings to Villanova. It will also make recommendations for the improvement of Greek relations with the administration.

The response committee plans to have the report out by the end of this year.

Members include Paul Eells of Sigma Phi Epsilon, Rob Mattes and Ray deCastro of Pi Kappa Alpha, Joe Cretelli of Sigma Nu, Chris Duca of Pi Kappa Phi, Beth Dreiling of Kappa Kappa Gamma, Heather Durkin of Kappa Alpha Theta and Sue Bennet of Alpha Phi.

Panhel, Bonas receive honors

By MICHE VEIX
Staff Reporter

The executive boards of the Panhellenic and Interfraternity councils attended the 1988 Northeast Greek Leadership Conference on March 3-6 at the Hunt Valley Marriot in Baltimore.

Greek representatives from many northeastern colleges and universities were represented and took part in this annual event. Villanova's Joe Zaller and Lee Losciale led the conference as the Northeastern Fraternity's president and vice president, respectively.

The Panhellenic Executive Board (from left) Sandy Collins; Rush, Suzanne Bennett; vice-president, Miche Veix; president, Gary Bonas; advisor, Barb Doyle; treasurer, Jeanne Burkle; secretary.

The theme of this year's convention was "Opening the Doors to Greek Leadership" and the weekend was filled with beneficial programs and events. Sessions were held on such topics as AIDS education, marketing the Greek system and various motivation techniques.

Gary H. Bonas Jr., assistant director of student activities, was honored by having an award given in his name for excellence in pledge education. Bonas was also the recipient of the Marcia Guenzler Award for Excellence in Panhellenic Advising.

The evening concluded with the Villanova Panhellenic Council winning the prestigious Northeast 1988 Award for Overall Excellence.

Phi Gamma Delta inducted

By STEVEN M. LEWIS
Staff Reporter

As many students realize, there is a new fraternity here on the campus of Villanova University. This fraternity is Phi Gamma Delta or FIJI.

FIJI comes to Villanova through the work of former Lambda Kappa Delta (LKD) brothers.

LKD was founded in 1917 by the Rev. Ruellen P. Fink, O.S.A., dean of the College of Arts and Sciences. LKD was the first fraternity on Villanova's campus.

Recently the brothers of LKD decided that as a local fraternity, interest was dwindling and it was time to do something positive. Since FIJI has an excellent nationwide reputation and the national headquarters in Lexington, Kentucky expressed an interest in establishing a colony here on campus, Phi Gamma Delta was an easy decision for the LKD members.

The national headquarters was first contacted in 1987. They then sent representatives to Villanova for a preliminary visit. On Feb. 28, 37 men were initiated into FIJI as colony pledges. This group includes 12 former LKD brothers and 25 other students new to the Greek system.

The Delta Colony of Phi Gamma Delta would like to thank Villanova for its support and would also like to offer its hand to any other organization who may need some assistance.

Battle of the bands

By PAUL FRATAMICO
Staff Reporter

On March 26, Lambda Chi Alpha will be sponsoring a battle of the bands at the Jake Nevin Field House.

Lambda Chi Alpha is donating all the ticket proceeds to the Center for Early Childhood Services. The center helps emotionally and developmentally disordered young children and their families.

Casio, Vintage Cola, Wise Potato Chips and a number of other local businesses are sponsors. Casio donated a keyboard which will be presented to the winner of the battle of the bands. Casio also donated a keyboard which will be raffled off to a member of the audience.

Opening the show will be Katzenjammer, a local band formed by Villanova students. Making a special guest appearance on drums will be David Rath, a member of Heaven's Edge, which set attendance records at the Empire Rock Club.

Appearing next is a band very familiar to Villanova students, Blue Period. They have played at John Barleycorn's Pub and a number of other local clubs. The band is headed by Mike Robinson and Brian Seymour.

Blue Period will be followed by Tier 7, a three-piece band headed by Andre Calilhanna.

Appearing last is a band from Penn State, Seconds. John Spina leads the band and plays guitar.

Various acts will be appearing between set changes. Jack Altmiller will be entertaining the crowd with acoustic guitar selections and two comedians will be performing.

The event will be judged by members from the band Bricklin. There is also a possibility of Robert Hazzard appearing to help judge the contest.

Craig Zappetti, the president of Lambda Chi Alpha, noted that this is a great opportunity for the Greek system at Villanova to demonstrate what they can do to enhance on-campus social life as well as a chance for Greeks to assist a worthy cause.

Tickets are on sale in Connelly Center, the Office of Student Activities, and through any member of Lambda Chi Alpha. Tickets will also be sold at the door the night of the concert. Students are encouraged to buy tickets before the night of the show to avoid long lines and the possibility of the concert being sold out. Doors will open at 7 p.m.

GREEK WEEK 1988
Schedule of Events
April 9 - 16

April 9	TBA Volleyball - Jake Nevin Fieldhouse
April 10	12 p.m. Softball - Morris Estates
April 11	4 p.m. Fun Games - Sheehan Beach 6:30 p.m. Swimming (duPont) 8 p.m. Boat Races (Pavilion)
April 12	3:30 p.m. Arm Wrestling - Austin Field 6:30 p.m. 6 Man Relay - duPont Pavilion
April 13	3:30 p.m. Obstacle Course - Sheehan Beach 7 p.m. Greek Skit - Jake Nevin Fieldhouse
April 14	12:45 p.m. Greek Lunch - Pie Shop 3:30 p.m. Chariot Races - Morris Estates 7 p.m. Hot Shots - duPont Pavilion
April 15	3 p.m. Tug of War - Sheehan Beach
April 16	1 p.m. Team Triathalon - duPont Pavilion 6 p.m. Banquet - Holiday Inn

VILLANOVA GREEK
EASTER EGG HUNT
March 26, 1 p.m.
In front of Main Chapel
ALL CHILDREN 3-10 YEARS WELCOME!
Free Coffee and Donuts!
The Easter Bunny!
The Wildcat!
Chocolate Prizes!

Athlete of the Week

DAVE ECHEVERRIA

This week's Saco East Athlete of the Week is Dave Echeverria.

Echeverria, a senior on the men's swim team, recently advanced to the NCAA Division I championship. In doing so he became the first Villanova diver to qualify for the NCAA's.

Echeverria, who finished first in the one and three-meter events in the Eastern Championships and National Catholic Tournament earlier in the season, totaled 468.90 points in the March 11 meet to earn a spot in the prestigious NCAA tournament.

Echeverria will be participating in the NCAA's on April 7-9 in Indianapolis.

SACO EAST University Sportswear
JACKETS ● CAPS ● T-SHIRTS ● PROMOTIONAL ITEMS
1045 LANCASTER AVE., BRYN MAWR 527-4198

Lacrosse splits pair

By JOHN F. SWIFT
Statistician

The Villanova men's lacrosse team has not had it very easy thus far. After dropping their opener to the powerhouse Towson State in a close game, they had to travel down to Philadelphia to play the University of Pennsylvania who just happen to be the tenth ranked lacrosse team in the nation.

The result was not surprising. The Cats were simply overmatched and they were defeated soundly by the score of 15-4. John McEvoy and Chris Scaring each had two goals and McEvoy and David Hone each racked up two assists for Villanova.

After opening the season with back to back defeats, the Cats had every reason to be frustrated heading into Providence College on March 20. But they came out and played aggressively as they jumped on the Friars early.

At the conclusion of the first quarter, Villanova held a solid 7-2 lead. It looked like Villanova was heading towards its first victory of the season and it was going to be an easy one at that.

But the Friars were not willing to accept that scenario. Providence staged an excellent comeback and forced the game into overtime where Villanova prevailed by the narrowest of margins 11-10.

McEvoy had three goals, Hone and Geoff Albrecht scored twice, and Jim Rogers, John Furlong, Michael Balistaris, and Dave Chisholm each tallied once for Villanova.

Joe Lingle played in the goal for the victorious Cats. Bobby Essig and McEvoy led Villanova with five ground balls and Rogers followed closely with four.

Villanova played Kutztown on March 23 and they will play Bucknell on March 26.

A look at "March Madness"

By JOHN F. SWIFT
Statistician

The NCAA tournament provides a great deal of excitement to everybody involved. The players are fired up, the media is in a frenzy and the campuses of the schools involved are buzzing with anticipation of the impending fate of their team.

But, perhaps, the greatest challenge of the NCAA tournament lies in the plight of the fans who wish to follow their team to the various stops along the "Road to the Final Four."

For teams like St. John's, Seton Hall and North Carolina, who were shipped out west, the task is a difficult one for the college student on a limited budget.

This year the Villanova Wildcats were sent to Cincinnati, Oh. for the first and second rounds of the tournament.

The Cats, as usual, were underdogs to advance past the second round and the trip was viewed by many as possibly the last chance to see their beloved team in action this season. I, for one, was not prepared to let this chance go by.

The biggest problem was transportation. The school had a sufficient number of tickets although they did not come cheaply. Once we arrived, we were prepared to freeload off the band for accommodations. The only problem was how to get from Villanova to Cincinnati.

The school provided no bus, and travel by airfare or train was too expensive. Our only alternative was to rent a car. We were able to rent a Volkswagon for $30 a day with unlimited mileage. With three people to share the expenses, it was more than affordable.

We questioned whether the trip was worth the trouble many times during the 11-hour drive, but when we arrived and experienced the type of basketball that only happens during the NCAA tournament, our doubts vanished.

Villanova is one of those teams that never seems to receive the credit they deserve. Yet, they always seem to prove the experts wrong by overachieving where they are not even given a legitimate chance. This year's tournament has been no exception thus far.

Regardless of what happens in Birmingham, Alabama this weekend, Villanovans can be proud of their team and for what it stands.

The odds are stacked up pretty high against the Wildcats as they journey to Alabama for the regionals this weekend. But isn't this what Villanova basketball thrives on?

Powerlifters

(Continued from page 30)

wen the 181-pound weight class in 1987.

Mizzi concluded the day with lifts of 534.5 pounds in the squat, 374.75 pounds in the bench press and 534.5 pounds in the deadlift. "I was happy with my bench and deadlift, but I think I could have done more in the squat," Mizzi said. "I think I had a little trouble adjusting to the openness of the gym area here. The weightroom at Villanova is smaller."

In the 198-pound class, Harmon ended with a 1,421.75 pound total to capture seventh place. According to Harmon, it was a disappointing day. His final two squat attempts were disqualified on technicalities. "I'm not sure how good the judges' calls were, but what you lift is what you lift," Harmon said.

Harmon completed lifts of 534.5 pounds in the squat, 352.5 pounds in the bench press and 534.5 pounds in the deadlift.

"The competition was outstanding this year," Harmon added. "With our entire national team graduating this year we'll definitely need younger people to come out."

You'll get first hand experience in the courtroom right from the start. In three years, you could handle more than 3,000 cases in a wide variety of subjects from international to contracts to criminal law. If you think you have what it takes to be a Marine Corps Officer and lawyer, talk with the Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer when he visits your campus.
Have 190,000 clients from the start.
More than 190,000 Marines could use your service.
We're looking for a few good men.
Marines
See Capt Farr at the Connelly Center April 4.

— BODY TONING —
BRYN MAWR BODY·TECH
The Newest In Fitness on the Main Line
A luxurious salon featuring 7 separate toning stations combining Isometric, Isotonic, High Repetition, Non-Strenuous exercise.
☐ Loss of Unwanted Inches
☐ Improved Circulation
☐ Increased Flexibility
☐ Reduced Cellulite
24 N. Merion Ave. Bryn Mawr
next to Illusions - 527-5553
COMPLIMENTARY VISIT
10% OFF FOR STUDENTS

NCAA Basketball

Oklahoma
Auburn
Louisville
Brigham Young
Villanova
Illinois
Maryland
Kentucky

Oklahoma
Louisville
Villanova
Kentucky

Southeast Regional: 3/24, 26— Birmingham-Jefferson Civic Center Birmingham, AL

NCAA CHAMPIONSHIPS

UCLA	10
Kentucky	5
Indiana	5
North Carolina	2
N.C. State	2
Oklahoma State	2
San Francisco	2
Louisville	2

	PTS	AVG	REB	AVG	AST	BLK	STL
Doug West	410	15.2	141	5.2	69	9	24
Tom Greis	354	13.1	161	6.0	31	66	9
Mark Plansky	343	12.7	161	6.0	97	2	33
Kenny Wilson	287	11.5	40	1.6	121	2	31
Gary Massey	224	8.3	92	3.4	40	14	51
Rodney Taylor	204	7.8	155	6.0	9	7	6
Barry Bekkedam	77	3.0	48	1.8	4	18	5
Pat Enright	34	1.4	12	0.5	34	2	7

SOUTHEAST REGIONAL
VILLANOVA 66, ILLINOIS 63

VILLANOVA

	Min	G-S	F-Ft	R	A	P	Pts.
Plansky	37	4-10	5-7	3	7	2	16
Taylor	30	3-4	4-4	8	1	3	10
Greis	34	5-8	6-8	13	0	5	16
Wilson	36	3-11	0-0	2	3	2	9
West	31	2-8	3-6	3	1	2	7
Massey	23	2-2	1-4	3	0	5	5
Enright	6	1-2	0-0	0	0	2	3
Bekkedam	3	0-0	0-0	2	0	2	0
Totals	200	20-45	19-27	34	12	23	66

ILLINOIS

	Min	G-St	F-Ft	R	A	P	Pts.
Anderson	31	6-19	1-2	6	0	4	13
Battle	32	6-9	3-7	6	1	5	15
Kujawa	36	2-7	1-3	12	2	2	5
Balckwell	21	1-2	1-2	1	0	3	3
Bardo	36	5-7	3-8	2	1	4	13
Hamilton	18	2-5	0-2	5	0	2	4
Gill	25	4-7	1-1	1	3	2	10
Smith	1	0-0	0-0	0	0	0	0
Totals	200	26-56	10-23	33	8	22	63

Villanova	20	46 — 66
Illinois	30	33 — 63

Team rebounds: Villanova 1, Illinois 0.
Three-point attempts: Villanova 7-15 (Wilson 3-6, Plansky 3-7, Enright 1-1, West 0-1). Illinois 1-2 (Gill 1-2).
Blocked shots: Villanova 2 (Greis 2), Illinois 2 (Anderson 1, Gill 1).
Steals: Villanova 4 (Plansky 1, Taylor 1, West 1, Massey 1), Illinois 5 (Blackwell 2, Gill 2, Bardo 1).
Turnovers: Villanova 17, Illinois 12.
Officials: Don Shea, Tom Fraim and Tom Fincken.
Attendance: 16,562.

KENTUCKY 90, MARYLAND 81

MARYLAND (81)
Massenburg 2-4 0-0 4, Lewis 4-10 2-2 10, Williams 8-11 4-6 20, Gatlin 6-12 2-2 18, Archer 5-13 2-2 14, Dickerson 1-1 0-0 2, Walker 0-0 0-0 0, Hood 0-4 2-2 2, McCoy 3-5 2-2 11. Totals 29-60 14-16 81.
KENTUCKY (90)
Manuel 4-7 4-4 13, Bennett 7-9 3-4 17, Lock 5-7 0-0 10, Chapman 9-18 2-7 23, Davender 5-9 13-14 23, Ellis 2-6 0-0 4, Madison 0-0 0-0 0, Jenkins 0-0 0-0 0. Totals 32-56 22-29 90.
Halftime — Kentucky 42, Maryland, 41. Three-point goals — Maryland 9-23 (Gatlin 4-8, McCoy 3-5, Archer 2-7, Hood 0-2, Lewis 0-1), Kentucky 4-9 (Chapman 3-7, Manuel 1-2). Rebounds — Maryland 23 (Massenburg, Lewis 6), Kentucky 34 (Bennett 12). Assists — Maryland 15 (Gatlin 7), Kentucky 11 (Manuel, Davender 5). Total fouls — Maryland 23, Kentucky 13. A — 16,562.

Spaeder, Braca lead Wildcat powerlifters through tourney

By KARLA BECKNER
Staff Reporter

The Villanova powerlifting team turned in an excellent performance at the 1988 National Collegiate Powerlifting Championships, but fell slightly short of their strong fourth-place finish in 1987.

Senior veterans Steve Spaeder, Tony Braca, Mike Lucci, John Mizzi and Mark Harmon combined to score a 24-point men's team total at Temple University on March 20.

The competition consists of three basic lifts: the squat, the bench press and the deadlift. Each lifter is given three attempts at each lift, with the highest weight lifted in each area added together to determine the final score.

Spaeder captured second place in the 148 pound weight class with his 1,322.5 pound total. According to Spaeder, his 507 pound squat, 330.5 pound bench press and 485 pound deadlift were his best for the season.

"It was a good meet," Spaeder said. "The top three competitors were very close. We all missed our attempt at 507 pounds in the deadlift. If any one of us would have made it, they would have won."

In the 165-pound weight class, Braca set a personal best for himself in the squat with his 473.5-pound effort. "The competition was tough today. There were some great lifters here," Braca said. "I think I just needed a little more strength on my second attempts in the bench press and deadlift."

Lucci and Mizzi both placed high in the 181 pound weight class. Lucci took fifth with a 1,488 pound total and Mizzi came in seventh with a 1,444 pound total.

Lucci had his best deadlift and bench press with lifts of 584 pounds and 352.5 pounds, respectively.

"My squat wasn't as good as I had expected," Lucci said. Lucci

(Continued on page 29)

(Photo by Beckner)

Villanova's powerlifting team, consisting of five seniors, competed in the NCAA championships at Temple March 20.

Dr. Edward Teller
WORLD RENOWNED PHYSICIST SPEAKS ON THE ENERGY
E·V·O·L·U·T·I·O·N

April 11, 7:30 p.m.
VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

All Students
Invited FREE

Dr. Edward Teller is a Senior Research Fellow, Hoover Institution and advisor to International Strategic Defense.

Sponsored by department of physics and the Energy Education Advisory Council of Philadelphia Electric Company.

Public invited free

Sponsored by Villanova University in cooperation with the Energy Education Advisory Council of Philadelphia Electric Company and Scientists and Engineers for Secure Energy, Inc. (SE_2)

For Information Call Anita Webb (215) 645-1715

V.U. to Sweet 16

(Continued from page 1)

Ahead 56-46 with a mere three minutes remaining, Coach Lou Henson's team missed the front end of five one-and-ones, shooting a dismal 3-11 from the foul line down the stretch. The Fighting Illini left the door wide open for a V.U. comeback, and the Cats roared through, storming to a 66-63 miracle win.

"It boils down to two things," a dejected Henson said, "They made their three-point shots and their free throws, and we missed ours. That was the ball game."

Indeed, despite Illinois' blunders on the foul line, 'Nova still needed a tremendous shooting effort at the end to catch the Illini. The Wildcats hit 6-10 three pointers in the second half, including their last four in a row.

"I've never seen a team shoot that way at the end of a ballgame," said Illinois guard Kendall Gill, "All the shots went down for them. They really played a great game and they deserved it."

Actually, however, the Wildcats' effort over the first 35 minutes was less than great. Villanova broke out on top early to a 15-7 lead, but the Illini went on a 23-5 run over the last 10 minutes of the first half, coasting to a 30-20 halftime lead.

The height and quickness of the Illinois backcourt stifled Villanova's perimeter game, disrupting almost every Wildcat shot. In the first twenty minutes Mark Plansky, Doug West and Kenny Wilson, 'Nova's three top outside shooters, were a combined 1-10 from beyond the paint.

Though the Wildcats' shooting heated up somewhat in the second half, Illinois appeared to be in control, maintaining a double-digit lead. V.U. put together several mini-runs, even cutting the lead to five at one point, but for each instance Illinois seemed to have an answer. That is, however, until they hit the charity stripe.

While Illinois was trying to figure out how to make a foul shot, Plansky, Wilson and senior co-captain Pat Enright were pumping in three-pointers at the other end to get 'Nova back into the game. The team's best three-pointer, though, may have been the one Plansky was unable to get off.

With four seconds left in the game and the Wildcats trailing 63-62, Plansky put a sweet "up" fake on Gill, drawing the guard into the air and causing him to commit a foul. The senior forward then calmly knocked down both free throws to put 'Nova ahead for good.

"If he didn't go for the fake I probably would have given him another one," Plansky said, "Then I would have just went up for it."

"It was a good fake," admitted Gill, "I went for it and I shouldn't have."

Rodney Taylor, who finished with 10 points and eight rebounds, sealed the Wildcat win with two last-second free throws. Sophomore Tom Greis grabbed a game-high 13 rebounds and his 16 points tied him with Plansky for scoring honors.

"The effort this evening was one of the finest I have ever witnessed," said an emotional Massimino, "Either as a coach or as a spectator."

Pawprints . . .

— The Wildcats advanced to the second round with a solid 82-74 win over the Arkansas Razorbacks.

Villanova opened up a 40-33 halftime lead at the half, but the Razorbacks hung tough, making it close towards the end.

West finished with 22 points and Wilson added 17 in the victory which upped Massimino's record in first round NCAA Tournament games to 9-0.

— With the win over Illinois, Villanova earned the right to meet Kentucky in the Southeast Regional semifinal on March 24 in Birmingham, AL. The other semifinal matchup pits the Oklahoma Sooners against the Louisville Cardinals.

— West, the Wildcats leading scorer, was forced to watch much of the second half from the bench with a mild concussion. With 5:26 left in the first half, the junior guard was inadvertently kicked in the head by Illinois center Jens Kujawa. The injury is not serious and West is expected to be ready for the regionals.

— The Wildcats comeback was even more incredible when you consider it came without the services of three regulars. Both Greis and Gary Massey had fouled out with over two minutes remaining while West was on the bench with the concussion.

(Photo by Scancarello)

(Photo by Scancarello)

Center Tom Greis uses the ball-fake before going strong to the basket. Rodney Taylor and Barry Bekkedan look on, (above). Forward Rodney Taylor prepares for a monster jam against the Arkansas Razorbacks, (below).

Basketball

(Continued from page 32)

Wake Forest Head Coach Joe Sanchez was faced with the difficult task of motivating his team to rebound from a 34-21 deficit.

"At the half, I told them we had to put two good games into one half and play as hard as we can. We had some first half road jitters that we had to get over. We stayed with our game, took our jumpers and controlled the boards in the second half," said Sanchez.

Unfortunately for 'Nova, the Demon Deacons did settle down. Their guards, Kathy Wille and Alice Neal, contested every pass and every shot, forcing the Cats into several turnovers and missed shots.

Wake's inside players then clamped down on Angelotti and Oaten (six second half points combined). This improved defense, coupled with cold Villanova shooting, led to the six minute scoreless period late in the game that turned it around.

"That (the scoreless streak) was the turning point of the game," said Perretta. "We got some good shots in that period, we just did not put them in the basket. They tightened up the defense on Lisa (Angelotti) and let the other kids shoot.

"Their guards shot well, penetrated and played good defense. Their shooting opened up the inside game."

Angelotti led 'Nova with 18 points, followed by Oaten with ten, Beth Pasik with nine and Teresa Pasik with six.

Villanova finished the season 20-10.

LSAT
GMAT
GRE

MCAT, DAT, NCLEX, NMB, CPA, BAR REVIEW & OTHERS
Prepare with The Best
645-3317 • 659-0111

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
SUMMER SESSIONS '88

GRADUATE and UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

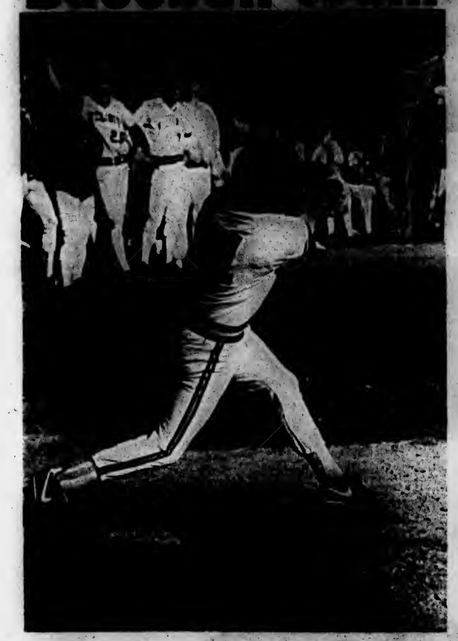
BUSINESS
ENGINEERING
MATHEMATICS

COMPUTER SCIENCE
NATURAL SCIENCE
LIBRARY SCIENCE

LANGUAGES
COUNSELING
EDUCATION
HUMANITIES
THE ARTS

DAY and EVENING CLASSES

SESSION I — Wednesday, June 1 to Wednesday, June 29
SESSION II — Friday, July 1 to Monday, August 1
EVENING SESSION — Wednesday, June 1 to Monday, August 1



CONTINUOUS REGISTRATION
until the day before each session begins.

For summer Bulletin, write:
SUMMER SESSIONS OFFICE
Or, if you prefer, call:
(215)645-4339

REGISTER NOW!

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

Baseball team continues to struggle

(File Photo)

The baseball team continued their early season woes with four more losses last week.

By DOUG SCANCARELLA
Sports Editor

Last week Villanova's baseball team continued its early-season slump. The beleaguered Cats, who Head Coach George Bennett describes as suffering from "lack of consistency," dropped four out of seven games this past week as their overall record fell to 6-11.

"Everyone's disappointed. Our record is probably the reverse of what we thought it would be at this point," commented Bennett.

In the first game of the seven-game stretch, 'Nova lost to Philadelphia rival LaSalle. V.U. was able to get six runs across the plate, but the overpowering Explorers scored 13 as Villanova lost their first game since returning from an early season southern swing.

The next day V.U. collected their fourth win of 1988 as they toppled Rider, but the following day the Wildcats lost their home opener to Westchester. Last year V.U. smacked out 42 home runs at home, but the 1988 home opener was different. Westchester held Villanova to just four hits (all singles) as the Cats were shutout, 9-0.

'Nova split the following two games and then came up with a big win when they defeated St. Joseph's at home. Villanova belted 18 hits on the way to a 17-10 victory.

Corey Williamson went four for five from the plate, contributed five RBI's and smacked a home run. Also hitting home runs for the Cats were Dave Carr and Dan Farren.

The Wildcats ended the week with a disheartening 13-2 loss at the hands of the Temple Owls. "We did not hit the ball well at all. Temple broke out of their slump against us. They were hitting .150 before the game and they scored 13 runs against us," said Bennett.

Six wins at this stage in the year, with this team is certainly disappointing, but the Big East schedule has yet to begin, and Villanova is a traditionally late-blooming team.

Perhaps Bennett summed up the early part of the season best by stating, "We have quality players, but they are not functioning as well as they can. It is not a lack of effort, we're just slumping. Hopefully better weather will help us improve and get ready for the league games."

Cats eliminated from tourney

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

The Villanova women's basketball team's surprising 1987-88 season came to a heartbreaking conclusion here at duPont Pavilion March 16, in the opening round of the NCAA Tournament.

Wake Forest University forward Jenny Mitchell scored an uncontested layup with :02 seconds remaining to propel the Demon Deacons to a 53-51 come-from-behind victory.

Villanova, despite a second-half scoreless stretch of over 6:30 minutes, still had a good chance to win when a Carole Oaten turnaround jumper put the Cats ahead 51-49 with 1:16 to play. However, Wake Forest's Alice Neal tied the score seconds later with a clutch jumper, setting the stage for Mitchell's heroics.

The loss was especially bitter for 'Nova, considering the fact that they squandered a 13-point halftime lead. Head Coach Harry Perretta could sense a Wake Forest comeback before the second half began.

"At halftime I told my assistants I was afraid we'd fade, because at the end of the first half we looked fatigued. We weren't up enough. We could have been up more," explained Peretta.

In the opening half, the Wildcat frontcourt of senior forward Lisa Angelotti and junior center Carole Oaten terrorized Wake Forest for 22 points on 79 percent shooting. However, 'Nova's outside shooting, which had been such an important part of their game throughout the season, faltered in the first half. Their failure to blow the game open early came back to haunt them late in the contest.

In the locker room at halftime,

(Continued on page 31)

(File photo)

Teresa Pasik and the women's basketball team endured a heartbreaking loss at the hands of Wake Forest in the NCAA's.

Tennis rips Rider

By STEVE KIRSCH
Staff Reporter

The Wildcat netters continued to roll with three victories this past week. 'Nova soundly trounced Rider College March 15, 6-0, then went on the road the following day to defeat Mt. St. Mary's College, 5-1.

The Cats returned to their home courts March 21 and recorded another 5-1 victory over Haverford College. Sunday's match with King's College was cancelled because of the snow.

Early in the week, the Cats were led, as in past matches, by No. 1-seed, junior Mike Rouse. Rouse defeated Rider's Scott Fleigelman, 6-1, 6-2 and then MSM's Joti Baldrich, 6-2, 6-2.

Also victorious in both matches were No. 2-seed Pete Leonard, No. 4-seed Mike Loughman, and No. 5-seed Greg Ackerman. No. 6-seed Jeff Gorsky won his match against Rider and then John O'Dwyer stepped in as the No. 6-seed at MSM and captured his match as well. No. 3-seed Mike Freedman split his matches early last week, winning at home against Rider but losing while 'Nova visited MSM.

Following Rouse's victory against Rider's top seed, Leonard, a sophomore, won his match with Adam Deitz by scores of 6-1 and 6-2. Freedman, a junior, was extended to three sets but won going away by scores of 6-7, 6-2, 6-2. Freshman Loughman won 6-3, 6-1, Ackerman was an easy victor at 6-1, 6-1, and Gorsky also won 6-4, 6-3 to run the Wildcat rout to a 6-0 whitewash of Rider. O'Dwyer was victorious in an exhibition match, 6-2 and 6-4.

The Wildcats followed Haverford product Rouse's win at Mt. St. Mary's with four more singles victories. Leonard fought off MSM's George Amoss 6-4, 6-3. In 'Nova's lone match loss, Freedman was defeated by MSM's Eric Grainger by a tough 7-6, 7-5 score. Loughman bounced back for 'Nova, winning 6-2 and 6-1. Ackerman, a junior, was a 6-0, 6-3 winner and sophomore O'Dwyer added a 7-5, 6-2 win for a 5-1 team victory over MSM. The doubles matches were not played out.

As the Cats returned home to take on Haverford Monday, some lineup changes had taken place. Sophomore Taylor Teresi of Tonawonda, N.Y. had returned from a brief absence to reclaim his No. 2 seeding. Leonard dropped a notch to No. 3, Loughman remained at No. 4, and Freedman stepped in as the No. 5-seed.

Rouse led off, as usual, with another win. He defeated Haverford's senior Bruce Berque by a 6-2, 6-2 tally. Teresi returned to a difficult match and went three sets but lost by a tough 5-7, 7-6, 6-4 score. Leonard put 'Nova back on the winning track with a hard fought 7-5, 5-7, 6-3 win. Loughman won easily, 6-1 and 6-0. Freedman showed his winning form again by coming back with a 6-3, 7-6 victory.

Greg Ackerman won his match at the sixth seed spot, also needing three sets, by a 6-2, 6-7, 6-1 score. As the score was now 5-1 and it was getting late, the doubles matches were cancelled. Jeff Gorsky and Bill Shea then dropped one set exhibitions for 'Nova by scores of 6-1 and 6-3 respectively.

Head Coach Dr. Robert Langran is extremely happy with the way his team is playing right now.

"We had a good match (against Haverford) with three set matches and we won two of them. They were our toughest opponents so far. We hit a stretch now where all our opponents are tough," explained Langran.

Echeverria advances to NCAAs

By AMY C. SPENCER
Staff Reporter

A second-place finish in the one-meter diving event of the NCAA Zone one and two Diving Championships earned senior Dave Echeverria a trip to the NCAA Division I Championships and a spot in Villanova history as the first diver to advance to the NCAA meet.

Echeverria totaled 468.90 points in the March 11 meet, and captured the final qualifying spot for the NCAA meet April 7-9 in Indianapolis.

This honor is the endpoint of a season of achievement for Echeverria. In championship competition this year, he captured both the one and three-meter event titles in the National Catholic Championships and the Eastern Championships, and he won the one-meter while placing second in the three-meter at the Big East Championships.

In reference to his talented athlete, diving coach Gary Elder said, "All of his hard work has really paid off. Just getting to the NCAA meet means he's one of the top 32 divers in the country."

The rest of the swimming and diving team finished their season in style as they continued the tradition of fine performance in championship meets by placing third in the Eastern Championships held March 3-5 at Cleveland State University. The Cats had previously finished first in the National Catholic Championships and second in the Big East Championships.

Echeverria led the team to victory by winning both the one and three-meter titles. A score of 517.35 earned Echeverria his third straight Eastern Championship title in the three-meter and 474.10 points gave him his first title in the one-meter. This impressive showing led to Echeverria's recognition of the "Diver of the Meet" award.

Junior Chris Craft ended his superb season with a record-setting performance in the 200-meter butterfly. A time of 1:49.12 broke both the Eastern Championship and Villanova school records in the event. Craft also finished second in the 200-meter individual medley, the 100-meter butterfly, the 400-meter freestyle relay and the 800-meter freestyle relay, and third in the 400-meter medley relay.

Lou Dearstyne, besides joining Craft on the three winning relay teams, placed in three individual events. Dearstyne came up victorious in the 200-meter freestyle in 1:38.48.

He broke his own school record in the 100-meter freestyle during the preliminaries with a time of 44.95 and went on to finish second in that event. He had a personal best of 20.02 in the 50-meter freestyle while finishing fifth.

Overall, Villanova earned 556 points finishing third behind Pitt (Championship 760.5) and West Virginia (646.5).

Election extra

the Villanovan

Vol. 63, No. 18 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | April 12, 1988

Closkey and Fusco debate

By MAUREEN STAPLETON
Staff Reporter

The debate between presidential candidates Sean Closkey and Terise Fusco on April 6 indicated a discrepancy between what each candidate considered to be the most important issue confronting Villanova students today.

According to Closkey, this issue is the attitude at Villanova. He cited the Student Life report written by Program Evaluation Committee evaluator Dr. Arthur Shriberg, where this attitude was labeled "the Villanova way." This attitude was defined as the feeling that "nothing ever gets done and the students are treated as children."

When addressed with the same question, Fusco said, "I'm going to go out on a limb and say social life." She said she wants to bring in more large-scale events and a successful Spring Festival that will pass administrative approval. Fusco also expressed a desire to include the surrounding community in various Villanova affairs.

When asked what their goals would be, both candidates found a great need in the area of internal affairs. Both cited hopes of changing the visitation policy and a need to restructure the Security system.

Closkey said that he hoped to create a new visitation policy which would eliminate weekend visitation rules.

Also, he said that there is a need for upperclassmen scholarships, which the University does not currently offer.

Closkey also said he wants to push for guaranteed student basketball tickets in the duPont Pavilion.

Fusco expressed a desire to restructure the budget process. She proposed that each student organization allocate $250 to $500 for a needy student scholarship in order to become a model for the administration.

Fusco supported keeping dormitories open to visitors all night, provided that the visitors were escorted.

She hopes for Student Government to "become as effective as we can in the crucial issues."

Coed dormitories

Both supported the implementation of coeducational residence

(Continued on page 3)

The debate between presidential candidates Sean Closkey and Terise Fusco indicated a discrepancy between what each candidate considered to be the most important issue confronting Villanova students today.

Voter information

Law School	9 a.m.	to	3 p.m.	April 12, 13
Connelly Center	9 a.m.	to	5 p.m.	April 12
Bartley Hall	6 p.m.	to	9 p.m.	April 12, 13

★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★★

Senatorial debate held

By G.J. DONNELLY
Staff Reporter

Prospective student senators took to the stage April 6 to engage in discussion on students issues in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

Among those attending for arts were incumbent senator Diane Carman, and aspiring candidates sophomore Christopher Sperduto, juniors Christine Wnuk, Richard W. Johnson and Debbie Gross.

Representing the science department was its only candidate, junior Philip Kousoubris. University College's Jonathan Zahm was its sole senatorial candidate while incumbent Ken Fahrman and candidate Gregg Bowler represented the College of Commerce and Finance. Sophomore Commerce and Finance candidate Claudine Liss was absent.

Asking questions were a panel from the Villanovan, Editor in Chief Johanne C. Sharp, News Editors Dante J. Scala and Noel E. Falco, with Assistant News Editor Jennifer Reidy acting as moderator.

The debate was split into two parts, with Sperduto, Johnson, Gross, Kousoubris and Fahrman answering the first array of inquiries while the remaining candidates participated in the second round.

The opening statements were begun by Sperduto, who is a transfer student from Old Dominion University and expressed his happiness at coming to Villanova. "I do love this school a lot," he explained. "I'm proud to be a Wildcat." He claims to have spent the first semester trying to get involved with the student Senate and finished by claiming a qualification for the position.

Johnson's main concern was with action. He stressed his involvement with the academic affairs committee and his efforts to organize the student protest that occured last March 25 during the University Senate's discussion of the proposed operating budget. He subsequently criticized the student senators who failed to show up at the meeting which resulted in the budget's marginal passage.

"The final analysis is that like the rest of the people here, I'm interested in getting proper parking facilities and all the other major issues that need to be discussed," he said.

Debbie Gross pointed to her qualifications in research of Villanova student life and concluded that there was "a lack of dedication." She also expressed concern for a tuition increase and, like Johnson, criticized the Senate for a lack of commitment.

"I believe the Senate is a crucial part of our lives here at Villanova. It needs a strong intellectual voice," she said.

Philip Kousoubris, the sole candidate for the science seat, argued his experience as a member of the Villanovan. "I've kept up with the issues," he said while praising the protests of both the budget and U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese's speech last semester.

Rounding out the opening statements was Commerce and Finance's incumbent Fahrman, who acknowledged that he had not accomplished all he had promised when he had campaigned last year. However, he also railed against student apathy by pointing out such examples as the Law School's lack of a candidate.

The panel commenced the questioning by asking the candidates what issue they thought was most important. Fahrman said it was student apathy. Kousoubris pointed out the fallacies of the economic system by explaining, "We cannot have shoddy programs that are not accounted for."

Gross brought to the floor a need for an improved social system which would benefit the students while at the same time cutting down the problems of drinking and drugs.

Sperduto split the campus into two stereotypes — the on-campus and off-campus student. The on-campus students, he explained wanted coed dorms. The off-campus want a cut in tuition.

The next phase of the questioning was a true/false round in which the candidates were asked about their knowledge of the University Senate.

The next round of questioning dealt with a short-answer quiz to test their knowledge in more depth.

Reidy then opened the floor to students who wished to express their concerns. One concerned student inquired about the problem of tuition to Gross. She replied by stressing the need for more

(Continued on page 3)

Candidates interviewed

Student Government President candidates Sean Closkey and Terise Fusco were interviewed March 12 by News Editors Noel E. Falco and Dante J. Scala. The two candidates were both asked the same set of questions.

Sean Closkey

What experience in Student Government do you have?

Closkey said he is currently serving as assistant secretary of the internal affairs department for Student Government and as chairman of the student life committee of the University Senate. Also, he said he founded the Student Activities on Campus Committee [SACC] during his freshman year. SACC has worked with Student Government on creating "alcohol alternatives" such as the proposed Spring Festival.

"I started it [SACC] because I read in the Villanovan that Student Government had totally given up on all changes in social life because they felt it was impossible. And I'm ... conservatively optimistic ... I didn't think all the possibilities had been exhausted," said Closkey. "I felt I had to do something," he added.

What do you think qualifies you to be Student Government president?

"In my opinion, [I am] one of the more concerned people in Student Government ... on campus, I see myself as a Donald Trump-type, not a politician. I'm a business major ... I admit that I may sometimes commit political faux pas and I don't do things in political manners, but I go at things that annoy me and I take the bull by the horns.

"I will go at it and I'm extremely diligent and ... hardheaded," he said. As an example of this, he pointed toward his work with SACC.

Closkey also said that administrators know him and that "I know how to get things done" within the Villanova bureaucracy.

"I am almost an outsider inside Student Government because I come from a totally different background. It's not a political

(Continued on page 4)

Sean Closkey

Terise Fusco

What is your background in Student Government?

Fusco replied she has spent three years working in Vice President for student life Dr. Richard Neville's office, which has given her both an understanding of the administration process and a chance to meet members of administration. She has held the offices of class representative in her freshman year, assistant secretary of internal affairs and is presently vice president of Student Government.

Fusco said she got involved as a member of past president Joe Allman's government. She said she helped to write the new Student Government constitution and helped to choose Allman's cabinet.

She has been involved in such issues as maintenance, meal plan, laundry facilities, used book sale and coed dorms through these positions.

"Last year we made a lot of progress on a lot of issues simply by working on a lot of issues," Fusco said.

What do you think qualifies you to be Student Government president?

"I think I have a nice vision of the student body as a whole. I think that one thing unique about my attitude is that I feel like I'm optimistic. I like feeling that way because it allows me to feel optimistic about the University, too," replied Fusco.

She said optimism is important especially in the face of opposition by administration in some issues. "The president really needs to always be positive and always be thinking about new ways to tackle a problem and ... alternate routes and just really thinking positive. You need that in the organization to motivate," said Fusco.

Fusco also felt that her devotion to the University and to the organization is an important quality. She commented, "I think the other candidate is not nearly as devoted."

She added, "I've been involved

(Continued on page 4)

Terise Fusco

Vote Sean Closkey for president

We are pleased that we had such difficulty deciding whom to endorse for Student Government president. We also realize we had the option not to endorse either candidate. However, research has shown us, along with attitudes and perspectives presented during the presidential debate, that the best person to fill the presidency is Sean Closkey.

Closkey has a realistic approach to the issues and understands University process. He is the current assistant secretary of internal affairs of Student Government and is the sole student chairperson of a Senate committee. He has shown the ability to unite insight and initiative in order to address specific student needs, for instance, the creation of SACC [Social Activities on Campus Committee] to attempt to remedy the lack of social events on campus.

His innovative Spring Festival proposal, although not perfected, demonstrates to us that he has the capacity to adequately address issues and the enthusiasm to spark interest and participation in both administration and students. Closkey personally accepts the responsibilities of his projects and refuses to yield to the administrative obstacles placed before him. The cancellation of the Spring Festival has not discouraged him, but in fact ignited his new Casino Night proposal.

Closkey has seen his own ideas develop. Terise Fusco, as vice president, takes credit for the accomplishments of others while dismissing the failures she has supervised.

At first glance, Fusco appears very experienced and well-rounded in Student Government affairs and University issues. However, through interviews, the presidential debate and research, Fusco's credentials fall short and simply become resume supplements.

In Fusco's campaign, she erroneously leads students to believe she has actually been a major force in the political journal, student directory, the report on coed dorms, the honor code proposal and student protest of the budget proposal. She uses her supervisory position as vice president to pad her credentials with any and all issues successfully addressed by others during her term. The political journal was in fact the brainchild of current president Phil Brach and student senator John B. Lewis, not Fusco. Her name is not even a part of the staff box. While Fusco appears in the Student Directory staff listing, she fails to acknowledge that Chris Wnuk was the ultimate driving force in this project. Moreover, she consistently criticizes the department of internal affairs, of which Closkey is assistant secretary, yet lists the coed dorm report, submitted by this department, as one of her achievements. She has yet to attend a meeting to establish an honor code proposal, which is organized and led by Kristin Switala. While Fusco was in fact a part of the recent budget proposal protest, she was in no way, shape or form the architect.

Perhaps Fusco's supervisory role reflects her belief in keeping within the operating system. She seems content to perpetutate the legacy she has been handed by the reform government founded two years ago. But unlike predecessors Joe Allman and Phil Brach, Fusco appears complacent and all too willing to accept the word of administration without challenge. Optimism is important, but focus is essential, and Fusco lacks this balancing direction.

Closkey, in contrast, has a clear vision which has been sharpened by skepticism about student-administration relations. He understands the main issue facing students today is the existence of the "Villanova way," the pervasive feeling that nothing is ever changed at Villanova and that students are treated as children.

While Fusco views student apathy as a form of contentment, Closkey recognizes it as a frustration which has been stifled by the weight of the Villanova bureaucracy. Closkey advocates change where Fusco remains content.

Closkey is not perfect, nor does he claim to be. He exhibits perhaps too much idealism in his guaranteed student basketball ticket proposal. Our main question and challenge is whether Closkey will follow through on his rhetoric of student protest, demonstration and student unification.

We hope that he will exhibit the dedication that Fusco has shown in her years of service, but with the more focused vision he has displayed in debate and interviews.

Hopefully, Fusco will remain an integral part of Student Government and she and Closkey will work together to serve the students.

However, Closkey's overall stand and campaign clearly indicate to us that he is the only candidate with direction, practicality, substance and realism. Fusco will give the Webster's definition of a leader and what a president should be, but Closkey will fulfill it.

Letter

It is disappointing that I must withdraw from the University Senate race. The election rules state that one must be a second semester sophomore to run and hold a Senate position.

Several students and leaders (with good intentions) encouraged me to run. They felt the rules would be changed in time for the election. Since this did not happen, I cannot hold the position as a senator this year.

I am hopeful to remain involved with Student Government.

This has been a great experience and thanks to all of you for your help and support.

Michelle Bogosian
Class of 1991

Quote of Note

Every nation has the government it deserves.

— Joseph de Maistre

Letters policy

The Villanovan will print "Letters to the Editor" received at its offices in 201 Dougherty prior to the weekly deadline, Tuesday at 2 p.m. All letters must be typed and double spaced. The editors will withhold a name upon request, but all letters must be signed and should include the writer's telephone number. Because of limited space, not all letters can be printed. Others may be edited. Letters may be sent by mail to: the Villanovan, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. 19085.

the Villanovan

201 Dougherty Hall
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa. 19085

Johanne C. Sharp
Editor in Chief

Janet Diefenbach
Managing Editor

Natalie McKenna
Associate Editor

Page 2 April 12, 1988

EDITORS
News: Noel E. Falco, Dante J. Scala
Features: R. Michael Bullotta, Susan E. Corcoran
Entertainment: Kathryn Quigley
Sports: John Ricco, Doug Scancarella

ASSISTANT EDITORS
News: Kevin C. Heil, Jennifer Reidy, Sharon A. Waters
Features: Jacqueline Gentile
Entertainment: Allen Ambrosino, Jeff Gillies
Sports: Jim Bowman, John F. Swift
Managing Editor: Andrea LoCascio

Layout Director: Eileen McGinley
Art Editor: Andrew Bullion
Interns: Cynthia B. Bosnian, Kathleen Reichner
Photography: Dana Shafie
Greek Page: Jill DeForte, Steve DelDuco
Advertising Director: Jim Duffy
Subscriptions/Billing: Pam Salter
F.Y.I. Coordinator: Collette Mitchell
Personals/Classified: Paul Iacovoni
Advisor: June W. Lytel-Murphy

Staff: Richard Abraham, Michael Aimette, Lucinda Alfieri, John Baker, Karla Beckner, Tom Brugger, Monica Byrne, Diane P. Carman, Bill Carr, Russ Ceccola, Mary E. Charest, John Chepega, Diane A. Cillone, Andrea Cinelli, Joanne L. Conrad, Wayne Creskill, Jim Crossan, Steve D'Angelo, Tim Daniels, Joe DeFulvio, Michael Denison, G.J. Donnelly, Diane Dragonette, Bob Duggan, Chris Etgen, Kristen Fallan, Paul Fratamico, Debbie Gross, Kevin A. Hecht, Karen Iovino, Luci Jankowski, Michael Jones, Theresa Jones, Bridget Kelleher, Terry Kelly, Barbara Kresch, Irene V. Langran, Jackie Lanza, Andrew Mathis, Dave Maylish, Elliott McEldowney, Joe McGowan, Carolyn Mirabile, Steve Montresor, Coleen Moore, Dan Moriarty, Sharon Neubauer, Mary O'Neill, Christopher Pepe, Stephen Powers, Dana Rao, Siobhan Roder, Kristine Ryan, Stephen J. Schlager, Michelle Shanahan, Steve Shiliekki, Tara Siligato, Amy Spenser, Maureen Stapleton, Laura Stevens, Elana Rose Starr, Amgad Subougni, T. Patton Trimble, Christine A. Wnuk, MaryJo Yannacone.

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the administration, faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors.

The Villanovan is published Fridays, 10 issues a semester. Circulation: 6,500. Subscriptions are available at $17.50 per year. For advertising information contact the office 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, 215-645-7207.

The Villanovan reserves the right to refuse any ad insertions due to questionable content and space limitations. The deadline to place advertising is 12 p.m. the Tuesday prior to publication.

The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

Closkey supported

By MICHELLE CICCOLO

As an executive cabinet member of this year's Student Government, I fully support Sean Closkey for student body president. Having worked with both candidates, I am convinced that Sean is the leader who has shown his ability to get things accomplished.

The students at Villanova need to be well-informed about both candidates in order to cast an educated vote. Here follows some inside information on this year's Student Government. In every administration there are people who idealistically talk about issues and there are people who realistically get things done. Sean is the type of person who gets things done. Sean represents progress.

Both candidates claim to have worked on many of the same issues. This can be misleading and confusing. The Student Government's executive branch has five major departments. Each department has a secretary and an assistant secretary to lead the department. These leaders are directly responsible for the work done on issues within their department. Out of respect for my colleagues, I feel obliged to give credit to those who truly deserve credit.

Terise Fusco, as this year's vice president, has claimed responsibility for many of the things done by the different departments. She claims to have "led a government to a student directory, a report on coed dorms, a political journal, a model for a used book sale, a protest and numerous academic policy reports." She claims to have overseen projects such as the voter registration drive, and "a restructuring of the university budget process."

These projects were not done by Terise. The student directory was Chris Wnuk's accomplishment. The political journal was Phil Brach and John Lewis' project. Mark Holobetz and Kristen Switala are responsible for the academic policy reports. The budget protest was led primarily by Brach, Lewis and Holobetz. The voter registration drive was Patricia Marzulli's accomplishment.

More than 80 percent of the work done on the successful completion of the coed dorms report was produced by Sean Closkey's department. The preparation for next year's used book sale was also done by Sean's department.

In summary, Terise has not initiated any of these projects and many more of those she claims responsibility for. She was not directly involved in most of the departments as she attended very few of the department meetings. It is not enough for a leader to sit back and watch.

Sean, as assistant secretary of the internal affairs department, has been directly involved. Sean is the chairperson of the student life committee of the University Senate. He was appointed chairperson by the administrators who acknowledge and respect his abilities. Sean is the only student chairperson of any Senate committee.

Sean's department created the Food Services Board which meets regularly to improve the cafeteria services. Sean initiated the Spring Festival proposal. Sean initiated a proposal for Casino Night, which is an alcoholic event to be held in Connelly Center. Sean's department is working on a new student I.D. to be used like a credit card in the book store, Connelly Center, library and as a meal card. Sean is also a member of the I.F.C. [Interfraternity Council]. Sean has proven his ability to lead and to work productively.

We need a strong president to deal with the administration and to lead the Student Government. Sean has unique ideas of his own. His plans for next year are creative but also realistic. Villanova needs a leader who brings results. Sean Closkey is that leader. Villanova needs Sean Closkey as our Student Government president.

Fusco speaks out

By TERISE FUSCO

The president is a member of the University Senate. This person, because he or she is the leader of the students, is generally expected to be the most informed and adequate debater. The goal is to have all 13 student senators effective. I have attended every Senate meeting since my first year at Villanova. The knowledge gained from this would be incredibly helpful to the students. A strong Senate makes strong policy for the University. Because few other universities allow students to take a role in this process, Villanova has only just begun to use the Senate effectively.

The situation in which two student senators who did not attend the Senate meeting where the budget was approved by one vote should not have happened. If they were aware of the work and the importance of the issues at hand it wouldn't have happened. Mandatory student caucus meetings must occur prior to every Senate meeting. At this caucus, the senators report the issues facing them and the government cabinet reports their issues of top concern. We can enhance the entire process of the Senate and use it to our advantage by more communication within the government.

A Big East Student Government network is being formed to allow for the sharing of ideas, projects and issues. As a leader of the government this year I am working on this needed and helpful addition to our governing process.

More student involvement is imperative. There is some contentment among the students, mistaken often times for apathy, that stems from a qualified government working for the students. This government needs the rejuvenation of exciting issues. The 200 students at our budget protest is a start. Working on issues that concern the student has an important role in this also.

The task of the president is to have the vision for the students. The task of the president's staff is to address issues of concern. The president leads the work on the issues and must have a complete knowledge of them.

The president must be an effective public speaker; that person is the voice of the students. This voice must also have the ability to work on the issues that may arise, make the necessary administrative connections and then work with a staff to solve the problem.

Leadership and the presidency involves so much more than work on the issues. Anyone can talk issues and attempt to work on them. It is only the best leader who can facilitate the work of others, instill the correct vision to achieve a strong focus and meet the goals of working with the students. The government needs more involvement, it needs a dynamic leader, but most importantly, it needs a strong voice.

Villanova is beginning next term with a new University president, numerous new members of the Board of Trustees, and a huge fundraising campaign. With this new leadership and money to deal with we look forward to a massive development of the campus. Now is the time for students to be dynamically involved and get what we want. With the right type of person representing us, our needs can be voiced. Leaders knowledgeable of the administrative process and familiar with the problems of the system can work with it to begin Villanova's new phase out right.

Leading this active role in change, it is crucial to involve underclassmen. The student president must be committed to getting them involved, trained, and able to work with the administrators. They will actually see the changes. We all will reap the future benefits but they will be the campus leaders for the next four years. This is vision. This is the educational experience the University is seeking. Now is the time for change. Support my experience and my vision for this important role.

Presidential debate

(Continued from page 1)

halls. Fusco said that if the system were allowed to work, "the coeducational residence halls will come." Closkey said that the system was not working fast enough to bring coeducational residence halls.

Off-campus housing

As to alleviating off-campus housing problems, Closkey said that the voter registration drive should be utilized and the University should realize its commitment to more on-campus housing. He also said, "The situation is such that students know they are living illegally, landlords know that the students are living illegally and therefore take advantage of them."

Fusco said she realized the need for long-term goals for off-campus housing, but felt that short-term goals were also necessary. She added that there was a need for a guide that would explain to students how to go about finding off-campus housing and how to be better neighbors.

Minority students

The lack of minority students, according to Fusco, lies with money. She said that Villanova must restructure the budget so that more minorities could receive aid to attend the University. Fusco said, "There are going to be a majority of uneducated people, unless we address it, and so the minority burden is a burden for the nation. We're going to have to pay for them later in welfare — now we're going to have to pay for them in college."

Closkey also said that financial aid must be improved. He added that the general lack of black faculty members must be addressed. He said, "They're asking these people to come in and they don't have any members of their own race. They need that."

The Greek system

The Greek system at Villanova was also examined. Closkey, who is a fraternity member, said that the system's benefits clearly outweigh its negative aspects. He cited examples of philanthropy by the Greek students and said the system also provides a "social outlet" for students.

Fusco said that she supported the Greek system and felt it fulfilled a "very important need" at Villanova. She questions, however, the alcohol issue within the system and "the philosophy of the brotherhood and the fraternity that would allow drinking that would jeopardize your health."

Fusco also said that the University was doing "everything in its power" to control on-campus drinking and drinking off-campus at Greek functions. She said that the Greeks should bring more of their social functions, such as their TGs [Friday parties] and formals, back to campus in order to control drinking within the Greek system.

Closkey, in response to the same question, said, "I don't think there are any constraints on Greek social life outside [the campus]," but added that the University should provide the Greeks with lodges so that more control would be possible. He asserted that these lodges could be built on west campus and could act as eating clubs.

The structure of the Greek system, according to Fusco, is "supreme" and restructuring of the system is unnecessary. She said that Student Government would work to bring the Greek system back to campus.

Financial aid

Financial aid should be restructured, according to Closkey, so that both short-range and long-range plans can be covered. Fusco said this was possible once the University budget was restructured.

Student demonstrations

Fusco said she would support student demonstrations, such as the one at the March 25 University Senate budget meeting, "but only when working within the system doesn't work." She cited various examples of working within the system that did produce change.

Closkey also said he supports student demonstrations and said, "it shows the voice of the students." He added, "I think we've exhausted working on a couple of issues and maybe we are getting ready to protest some issues."

Student apathy

Student apathy at Villanova, according to Closkey, is "certainly ... a problem ... students don't think they can do anything." He said this situation stemmed from a lack of communication on the part of Student Government.

The 15 to 20 percent of the student population that votes in the student elections is better than the national percentage, according to Fusco.

She added, "Villanova students still care about the University they attend even if they don't vote." She said that more efforts to increase communication are necessary, but that the students feel "contentment, not apathy."

Student apathy can be alleviated, according to Fusco, by working on issues of student concern. Both candidates agreed that communication within Student Government is poor and needs reform.

Student senators

For the student senators, Fusco proposed mandating that they attend student caucus meetings that would be open to the public. Closkey said Student Government's executive board should have more interaction with the senators so that representation could be more effective.

Senate debate

(Continued from page 1)

scholarship money to deserving students while emphasizing that the majority of Villanova students were upper-middle class and thus well able to pay the tuition.

Sperduto closed by emphasizing the need for changes in parking while explaining that the school alleged apathy was really a "personal thing" and that students who are interested can act if they wish to do so.

Kousoubris stressed the importance of the "grass roots" protesting of the students to be made into united show of strength.

Gross urged an increase of communication between Student Government and students while pointing out such organs of information as the Villanovan. Fahrman said that what was needed was a systematic "attack upon the power brokers" of the University, such as the administration.

After a five-minute recess, Reidy called the audience back to order for the second half of the debate. The first speaker was Christine Wnuk, whose credentials included membership to the Right to Life Committee and editor of the Student Directory. She pledged to be a well-informed senator who would vote intelligently because of her knowledge of the inner workings of Student Government.

Arts incumbent Carman noted her experience and voting record. She discussed the tuition increase, the need for additional financial aid and coed housing.

Zahm, the only candidate from University College, focused his speech on the issue of financial difficulty. He suggested a halt to an increase of tuition and criticized the senators who failed to appear at the budget vote.

Bowler expressed a desire to "get involved" while explaining that "serious changes" were needed. Most of all he expressed a desire to "try."

After the true/false and short answer quiz each candidate answered questions on statements they had made previously to the Villanovan. Wnuk was asked about her role as Student Directory editor and claimed that she helped the Student Government by her listing of its members and providing a method of communication between it and the students.

Bowler again urged student participation within the system and if that leads to nowhere, to go on the outside and protest.

Carman was asked about a committee she served on investigating Security. She responded that the committee had interviewed Chief Rowan Kelly, director of Security, and would make their recommendations soon.

Zahm was asked about his resistance to the "minus" grading system. He responded that it was implemented to purposely knock student G.P.A.'s down and thus was unfair.

After the floor questions came the closing statements. Wnuk proposed that the Senate should set reasonable goals because of its limitations.

Carman promised that it would "not be a risk if you vote for me."

Zahm proposed the formation of a coalition between the students and the University to solve the problems of the budget.

Bowler finished the debate with a pledge for a new grading system as well as expressing a desire to be appointed to the budget committee.

Closkey stresses realism, student unity

(Continued from page 1)

background .... I am very much in touch with students ... I'm kind of, in many senses, a regular guy, a blue-collar worker. And I think that perspective, in conjunction with my experience in Student Government and my knowledge of what's going on and my intellectual capabilities puts me in a very good vantage point to see problems and to look for solutions."

Also, Closkey said he was not an idealist. "There's a certain group at Villanova that believes in this beautiful place called Villanova, it's a heaven-type ... I don't think it's true, and I think if you buy into that, you're never going to get there because idealism ... furthers one's distance from a solution to the problem."

What are your specific plans and goals? If you are elected, what do you hope to accomplish?

Closkey listed the elimination of the University's dormitory visitation policy as a goal, saying that a majority of residents oppose it.

"Why you have it is probably because they need quiet hours. Well, let's install quiet hours and get rid of visitation. If you have a Security problem, let's fix [that]," he said.

"I am an adult. If I choose to have someone of the opposite sex in my room past 12 a.m., that's my affair," he continued. Closkey also noted that besides Tolentine Hall, the University offers no building for men and women to be together after visitation hours.

Closkey also endorsed guaranteeing basketball tickets for students, saying that while students have been told they have to pay for the duPont Pavilion, they do not all get to see the games played inside it.

Closkey also wants to create partial scholarships of $500 to $1000 for upperclassmen which would be based on financial factors and academic merit. "To a student, $500 is ... a lot of money," he said. While the University is planning to increase financial aid in the future with an endowment campaign, it has no short-run solution for the financial aid shortage, said Closkey. "A lot of students are definitely in need of it," he said. He added that the program would not seriously affect the University's "budgeting structure."

Closkey also supports ongoing work on an honor code for the honors program, which is currently being done by Student Government members and honors students. He would like to apply the code to the entire University. "We need to reaffirm that Villanova has integrity and we are an academic institution with honor," he said. He also said that an honor code would aid Villanova students' reputation in the eyes of corporate recruiters.

He also said, "Let's get out to Radnor Township and let's use the votes that we registered this year during the recent Student Government voter registration drive." He added that Villanova students could be a force in local elections and also could force local politicians to listen to them more frequently.

He also said he wants to continue work on social life improvements. He cited the Spring Festival, which he said was recently cancelled, by the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A. University president, as an example. He added that "Casino Night," is currently being considered. Also, he said that proposed changes in student I.D., currently being considered by the social life committee of the internal affairs committee would allow organizations to card students at the door, thus permitting organizations to hold social activities on shorter notice.

He also proposed working on alternate meal plans, citing that such alternatives are possible without additional financial burden on the university.

Being a part of Student Government for the past year, what parts of Student Government do you think need improvement?

Closkey said Student Government has to do a better job of promoting itself in order to gain student support and "more strength." He added that the organization needs to promote itself as a group that can "actually cause progress."

Closkey also said that Student Government needs to establish better contacts with the students. "We often" don't address "all their needs," he commented.

Closkey also named issues Student Goverment should address, including coed dormitories and tuition.

He also said Student Government would improve if it was more aggressive and if it "takes stands." He added, "Let's have a good sit-in or two over a budget," and continued, "Let's voice our opinion louder ... make it very difficult to ignore the student body."

What do you think Student Government should focus on during the coming year?

Closkey said Student Government should focus on the issues he had already mentioned and on Student Government's interaction with the student body. "We have to get out there ... we are working for them ... we're too far removed."

He also noted a need to improve the organization's public relations and suggested consulting with University marketing professors; he also proposed other ways of involving faculty in Student Government.

What is the most important issue facing students today?

"Addressing the 'Villanova Way' as an issue, the way that things don't change, no one listens and students are treated like children — that's got to change, that in itself is an issue," said Closkey.

"We [Student Government] come up with many ideas, working proposals ... but we don't see the tangible evidence of our work," he added. He said that Student Government has to convert issues into "changes" by uniting students behind Student Government. "Let's force a change," he said.

Closkey said he blames the administration for the "Villanova Way." He said, "Our reports and our proposals have been put ... in the closet." The administration has to stop treating students like children and "address us as adults," he added.

He continued, "Is that reflecting well on the University if you say, we're [the administration] pumping out 1,800 adults each year, but we don't think that they're capable of handling any decisions of their own, especially social decisions?" he said.

Do you feel student apathy is a problem at Villanova? If so, what would you do to correct it? If not, why not?

"Yes, it is a problem ... because, in all truth, no one is listening. Or if they listen ... they're being rather patronistic," said Closkey.

He added, "To change it, we're going to have to show the students that you can actually do something, because I don't think we have shown the students that changes will result. I mean, what have they seen?"

Do you feel students, through Student Government, have an adequate voice in University governance?

"Oh, they have a great voice, but it doesn't do them any good. The problem is not, can they generate reports and information and do they have adequate information on which to base an intellectual, competent decision on ... The problem is, what happens once they create this report — normally, nothing."

If elected, what proposals would you raise for debate in the University Senate? What would you try to get the Senate to pass?

Closkey included visitation, academic scholarships and "most probably" new student I.D. He also spoke of the idea of having faculty living in residence halls.

He said the planning and priorities committee has to find a way of alleviating the financial aid crisis for the short term.

He also added the idea of involving faculty in improving the cultural life on campus.

What do you feel Student Government's attitude toward the administration should be?

"... I think the view we have right now is fine: we should view them as people we are working with. But the key has to be working with [them] as equals, or at least on some scale that is not presently ... presently, it's way off-balance."

He continued, "So, what we have to do, then, is come back and say, 'If you treat us like children, we are going to make life miserable for you. We are no longer going to be passive. We're going to be aggressive, we're going to go out and we're going to protest."

Fusco emphasizes communication

(Continued from page 1)

for three years and I'm not at all burnt out."

What are your specific plans and goals if you become president? What do you hope to accomplish?

"Lobbying. I think that's a big thing. We need to do it with the administrators, we need to do it with the students, we need to do it with the local government, national and state governments, also," replied Fusco.

Fusco stressed the importance of a dynamic and active Student Government. "We need more people going to the township meetings. I've gone to three meetings this year to familiarize myself and to qualify me more for the presidency. We need more people there," Fusco said.

She added that contact with the legislature can help in issues in financial aid, zoning laws and restrictions that are related to the drinking age such as the frequenting law [which states that people under 21 may not frequent drinking establishments].

"With constant lobbying maybe we can get that changed. Also, lobbying can do so much for the University public relations-wise," Fusco explained.

She continued, "Another thing I really feel needs work on is, and will be done whether I am the president or not, is restructuring the budget process. Through that, we will be able to hit the financial aid issue once again."

Fusco explained her plans, "What I'm working on with Phil Maurone [chairman of the Senate], is to get a person from financial affairs on the planning and priorities committee. Because of that, the planning and priorities committee will have that base with which they can prioritize what the University needs and can afford."

She said that the next step would be to pick, along with the students on the committee, "the five top priorities, not 30 like they have now, but pick five and meet them. Then, if the budget does not meet them, the budget does not pass."

Fusco's third main goal is improvement of social life. She said she plans to have a committee working on a "social life renaissance."

Being a part of Student Government for the past year, what parts of Student Government do you think need improvement? How would you go about improving it?

Fusco responded that the internal affairs department "definitely" needed improvement.

"That's the most popular department for volunteers and there's a problem because they don't use them. They haven't done enough recruiting and that is definitely a fault ... They've only worked on one issue this year. Just recently, right before the election, they started working on others," said Fusco.

Fusco said the issues addressed under internal affairs are those students care about, such as residence life, social life, parking and security.

She explained, "I'm the vice president, so therefore it's my job to lead them, but no matter how much pressure I put on them to get other issues done, it is their responsibility and they chose not to."

Fusco also said the public relations department needs restructuring and focus in order to be effective in lobbying.

Another area for improvement, according to Fusco, is external affairs. "The University needs to take on more role with off-campus residents. I'm working on contacting realtors ... to retain a realtor at Villanova who will place students lotteried off campus," she explained.

What do you think Student Government should focus on for the next year?

Fusco cited lobbying as an all-comprehensive focus since it includes every single department.

"That's really what the students need to do, they need to make the connection with the administrators ... And it's the fault of the government this year that we didn't do it the way we should have," she added.

What is the most important issue facing students at the moment?

"I'd say financial aid, but actually I'm not so sure that's the most important issue to Villanova students, but it is," said Fusco.

She explained, "This is what I feel about financial aid: We need more minorities here ... they're reaching a majority in America, but yet if we don't provide them with financial aid, they will not be educated so later on we're going to have to pay for them through welfare."

She added, "It's kind of scary the cycle that the country's getting into because the minority is a burden for the nation and therefore it's a burden for Villanova.

"I think we have to get serious about financial aid, we've got to get serious about getting minorities," Fusco said.

She also stressed social life. "Students should have to struggle with academics, but shouldn't have to struggle with social life. As a government, we really need to put pressure on other groups, and the government and the University to provide them with social life that's a safe, healthy, varied social life," she said.

If elected, what proposals do you want to bring up for Senate debate and would like to see passed?

Fusco listed planning and priorities, restructured budget process, bookstore policy and coed dorms.

"I think coed dorms should be brought up again and debated and decided. I think that for three years we've been working and I think it must be decided. If it has to go to Senate debate, it has to go to Senate debate. If it's going to be a policy issue, then we're going to have to make it a policy issue," Fusco said.

Do you feel student apathy is a problem at Villanova, and if so, what would you do to correct it? If not, why do you feel it is not a problem?

"People always say that. I don't think Villanova students are apathetic. They have proven that by being so involved with other people, all the charity efforts," said Fusco.

She continued, "But, I'd say issue-wise, maybe they are. In dealing with that, all we can do is make them aware of what's going on. Better public relations department, getting our political journal off the ground will make them more aware."

Fusco said that awareness is the first step to solving this problem, followed by constant recruitment efforts, such as dorm-storming.

Do you feel students have an adequate voice in University governance through Student Government?

"Yes, absolutely, our government is a model for other universities and I have met with student body presidents and vice presidents from across the country ... and at no other university did I find students able to decide on policy with the Board of Trustees, with administration, with faculty together," replied Fusco.

Fusco described Villanova's Student Government as "very unique, very adequate," but said the organization needs to be used properly. She again stressed constant lobbying as a way to reach this goal.

What do you feel Student Government's attitude should be toward administration?

Fusco responded, "It's got to be positive. They're here for us, too. Students forget that. We've got to always be positive. They're just people."

Closkey campaign charged

By SHARON A. WATERS
Assistant News Editor

Student Government presidential candidate Sean Closkey's campaign violated rules pertaining to the posting of campaign materials and had sanctions placed upon his campaign Wednesday by the election commission, according to a letter sent to Closkey by the commission.

The violation concerned posting campaign materials in locations other than those specifically outlined in the "election laws guiding all Student Government elections," which was compiled by Student Government and revised by the election commission for the current year.

The sanctions placed on Closkey, according to the election commission, included removing all illegal posters by 7 p.m. Wednesday, giving the commission 100 of his posters and submitting all receipts from the purchase of campaign materials to the commission as soon as possible.

the Villanovan

Vol. 63, No. 19 — VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. — April 15, 1988

(photo by Shafie)

These members of Pi Kappa Phi seem well on their way to winning the tree-sitting contest during Greek Week.

Budget approved despite 200 student protestors

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

Despite a student protest of nearly 200 people, the University Senate voted March 25 to approve the operating budget for the 1988-89 academic year by a vote of 17-16. The budget includes an average tuition increase of over 10 percent.

Two student representatives, Arts Senator Robert Brancatella and University College Senator Mark Wible, were not present. Carolyn Lea, Senate secretary, said neither had an excused absence. Brancatella and Wible were not available for comment Tuesday. The remaining student senators voted unanimously against the budget proposal.

Student protestors

Prior to the meeting, many students filed into the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall to attend the ensuing debate. Members of Student Government distributed signs protesting, "We don't want to take a hike," "Tuition increase — say no!" and other slogans.

By the time the meeting was called to order, students had completely surrounded the Senate table and filled the back of the room.

The Senate proceedings

Alvin A. Clay, chairman of the Senate budget committee and dean of the College of Commerce and Finance, said, "the total budget is $110 million ... it's the highest budget we've ever had. It includes an average tuition increase of over 10 percent, a 4 percent increase in room and board costs, an 8 percent increase in faculty salary and a 6 percent increase in staff salary."

He later added, "This budget is not the best, but it's a good one.

"The Senate budget committee recommends that the Senate approve the budget as prepared by the administration," Clay said. He added that the committee voted in favor of the proposal by a vote of

(Continued on page 8)

INSIDE

EDITORIAL: Student warns about UCO ..... p. 15

FEATURES: Faculty member visits South Africa ..... p. 21

ENTERTAINMENT: INXS at Spectrum ..... p. 27

SPORTS: Golf team starts strongly ..... p. 40

Election results impounded

Fusco admits trashing paper

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

As of Wednesday night, the results of the Student Government presidential elections were impounded until Dr. Richard A. Neville, vice president of Student Life, reaches a decision on what action should be taken regarding several complaints lodged against both campaigns.

Both Neville and the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, were notified of the impounding Wednesday night.

Mike Delzotti, election commissioner, said that Neville "has to decide whether the Senate has to be convened and vote on this matter .... we've [the elections committee] gone from a regulating body to a recommending body now."

He explained that two closed meetings were held by the elections commission Wednesday in response to certain campaign factors and a request made by Neville that a decision be made.

Detzotti described the first meeting as a pre-meeting, set up primarily to filter ideas through the group. He said, however, that the second meeting lasted four hours.

Delzotti explained the function of the meeting as "to make a recommendation from the elections committee to the vice president for Student Life as to what should happen with the presidential election, if anything at all."

He said there were a number of specific recommendations made by Neville and Stack, though the committee was not restrained to them.

(Continued on page 4)

Senate results in

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

The three senators elected for the College of Liberal Arts are Diane Carman, Christopher Sperduto and Christine Wnuk.

Gregg Bowler, Ken Fahrman and Claudine Liss won the senatorial positions in the College of Commerce and Finance. The three were unopposed.

Phil Kousoubris won the position of Science senator and John Zahn won the position of University College senator. Both ran unopposed.

There were no candidates for the positions of engineering, nursing and law school senators.

Modern sculpture vandalized

By LAURA STEVENS
Staff Reporter

On March 26, the sculpture, "The Awakening," by Jay Dugan, was found partially destroyed.

The vandalism was reported to Security at 11:33 p.m. by Connelly Center manager Greg Perrin. Resident Assistant Christopher DeCotiis witnessed "some people hanging around" the statue, Chief Kelly said.

In response to questions about possible motives, Kelly said, "There's no legitimate reason to have destruction like this." He indicated no specific leads on the vandals, saying, "I don't even know if there were Villanova students involved."

Dr. Richard Neville, vice president for student life, was also unwilling to indicate a specific perpetrator or motive. He was, however, sure that the action was deliberate. "The sculpture is very stable and it took several people to commit the act," he said.

Neville did indicate that "we do have several leads" currently being pursued by Radnor Township police.

Neville reported extensive community protest over the vandalism. "People have responded negatively to the destruction," and he said he hoped that the incident would "make the community aware of how mindless and destructive vandalism can be."

(Continued on page 6)

P.E.C. report may play role in V.U.'s future

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

The Program Evaluation Committee [PEC]'s final report, which is currently being distributed to the University community, could wield influence over Villanova's future, according to Dr. Angelo Armenti, the committee's chairperson, April 8.

Armenti estimated that the impact of the report would be a seven or eight on a scale from one to 10, "with 10 being the greatest impact."

"I think that if the report is implemented, it would have an impact by bringing the University into greater harmony with our Mission Statement," said Armenti.

The PEC's findings, which were compiled after a year-long analysis of the University by the PEC. It was charged in fall 1985 by University President the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., to evaluate all academic and non-academic programs and "arrive at resource allocation recommendations on a program-by-program basis," according to a PEC newsletter.

According to Armenti, the PEC's recommendations include:

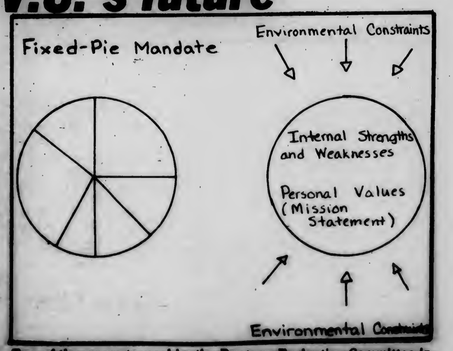
— terminating and restructuring certain programs.

— reducing the number of courses taught by part-time faculty in certain departments and replacing them with more full-time, but primarily non-tenure track, faculty.

— requiring mandatory "quiet hours" in all dormitories after 6 p.m.

— designating one of the small dormitories as an academic dormitory.

— improving services offered by Security, Food Services, Falvey Memorial Library and Financial Aid.



Other PEC recommendations are concerned with the lack of interior space on campus, the construction of an academic office building, improving the University's commitment to writing and other analytical skills at the undergraduate level and creating a uniform nine-hour load for faculty involved in graduate teaching.

Also, the PEC made recommendations for financial savings and improving productivity in both academic and nonacademic areas.

General concerns and strengths

Among the PEC's findings were several general concerns, said

(Continued on page 10)

Two of the concepts used by the Program Evaluation Committee in making its final evaluations were the "fixed-pie" mandate and strategic planning.

F.Y.I.

April 15

Campus organizations

Please return your activities forum sheet for the 1988 New Student Orientation Program to the Dean of Students Office in Dougherty Hall no later than today. If your organization has not received a form, stop up in 213 Dougherty Hall and pick up one.

April 16

Dance Ensemble

Kick into spring with the best legs on campus! The Villanova Dance Ensemble will present its eighth annual Spring Dance Concert this week in the Jake Nevin Field House. The show will begin at 8 p.m. The dancers have prepared their own numbers as well as a modern piece by a guest choreographer that promises to please!

Montclaire College dancers are featured this year as special guests of the ensemble, as well. General admission tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students and senior citizens. They can be purchased at the Connelly Center Ticket Office. Join us on Saturday night for a dance fantasia that you cannot miss.

FIJI carwash

The pledges of FIJI will be holding a charity car wash today from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Atlantic gas station on Lancaster Avenue in Rosemont across from St. Thomas of Villanova. The cost is $4 or $2 with student I.D. All proceeds go to The Daemion House in Philadelphia. So have your car looking groovy for spring and make a donation to a worthy cause.

Homeless Committee

Are you looking for a productive way to spend a Saturday? Are you tired of the same old stuff? Why don't you volunteer to help out with environmental projects for the homeless. We need you to join us April 16, 23 and May 1. Please sign up in Campus Ministry if you are interested.

April 17

Road rally

The annual A.C.S. spring Road Rally will be held today. The starting time is 8:30 a.m. in the small parking lot across from the Jake Nevin Field House. Sign up in the A.C.S. Office, Room 215 Dougherty Hall. The cost is $5 per person, and includes a picnic lunch afterwards. There will be trophies, cash prizes and much moral Hope to see you there!

April 18

New student theatre group

We are making progress in organizing Villanova's new, student-run theatre group. This exciting, long-awaited new activity will provide students with opportunities to perform, to direct and to produce original work. Tonight's meeting will be at 9 p.m. in the West Lounge in Dougherty Hall. Topics include: election of officers, ratification of our constitution and selection of a name.

Our first meeting in March was a success! Bring your ideas, enthusiasm and a friend tonight. New members are welcome.

Arab and Islamic club

There will be a meeting at 6 p.m. in the Honors Seminar Room on the fourth floor of the Falvey Memorial Library. Balloon Day plans will be finalized and International Day will be discussed.

April 19

U.S. Leadership in Space seminar

The Common Heritage Institute and nine other departments and programs at Villanova will co-sponsor a seminar entitled "Onward and Upward: Reasserting U.S. Leadership in Space. A discussion of the New American Space Policy." The seminar, to be held from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center Cinema, will feature four speakers who will focus on specific aspects of the new space policy released by the Reagan Administration earlier this year.

GE Astro-Space is also a corporate co-sponsor of the seminar. The Common Heritage Institute considers the seminar an excellent starting point for what we hope will be a continuing educational program at Villanova on space policy. A 4 p.m. reception in the Cinema lobby will preceed the seminar.

April 20

Carol Everett to appear

Well known abortion clinic operator turned pro-lifer Carol Everett will be on campus to speak of her personal experiences and give a behind-the-scenes look at an abortion clinic.

She will also speak of how and why she gave up her clinic to join the fight for life. Her popular tour of college campuses will bring her to Villanova at 1:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center Cinema. It is interesting, and it is free.

Chess Club

The Chess Club has its final meeting in Room 105 B in Bentley Hall at 3:30 p.m. New members are welcome.

College Repuublicans

There will be a meeting at 4 p.m. in the Bryn Mawr Room in the Connelly Center. This will be a very important meeting in which officers for next year will be elected and the upcoming Pennsylvania Primary will be discussed. Please make an effort to attend this meeting which will be one of the final meetings of the year.

April 21

Spanish Club

The Spanish Club will be electing new officers for next year at 12:45 p.m. in St. Thomas Hall Room 201. Anyone interested is urged to attend.

Musicians needed

Campus Ministry is looking for vocalists and instrumentalists to sing and play at the Baccalaureate Mass. If interested, come to our rehearsal at 7 p.m. in the Main Chapel, or stop by the Campus Ministry office in the basement of St. Rita's Hall. Senior standing is not required!

April 25

Spot bid sale in Philadelphia

The U.S. General Services Administration announced that it will be holding another of its very popular Spot Bid sales in Philadelphia. 100 lots of used personal property will be offered for sale, including wood and metal office furniture, office equipment and secretarial sets (chairs, desks and typewriters). The Spot Bid will feature 24 used automobiles including late model, confiscated vehicles. Featured vehicles: Mercedes Benz (2), Porche (2), Chevrolet Corvetee, Ford Mustang, Suzuki Motorcycle and an International Transtar Tractor. The property listed for this sale is located at the Federal Personal Property Exchange, 15th Street and Washington Avenue, in Philadelphia. Inspection may be made at the site on April 21 and 22, from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. Bidding will start promptly at 9 a.m. on April 25. Complete information on property for sale and inspection is available by calling GSA on (215) 597-4369, or contacting GSA's Federal Supply Service Bureau, Property Management Sales Office, Room 5156, 9th and Market streets, Philadelphia 19107. Please ask for a copy of sales notice 3FBPS-88-32.

Spring break 1989

Applications for Villanova Union spring break chairpeople available now in the Union Office. Help plan, promote and run next year's trip. Applications due April 22.

Ski Club

People can collect damage deposits from the Killington ski trip in the Student Activities office starting today. If you have any problems check the board to see when you can contact

Balloon Day

Come to Balloon Day on April 19. It will begin at 11:30 a.m. and will last until 4:30 p.m. All the booths and the excitement will be in Kennedy Mall. Be a part of the fun. If you missed both of the informational meetings and would like to be involved, stop by Campus Ministry sometime soon.

Sunshine Day

Please stop at Room 121 Tolentine Hall today if you have not already signed up to take part in Sunshine Day on April 23. We need to be sure of how many one-to-one volunteers, game organizers and others we have to spend the day with the underprivileged kids that day. Do not delay. Please sign up today. Thanks for your support!

Belle Air editorial positions

The Belle Aire yearbook is now accepting applications for editorial positions on the 1989 Belle Aire editorial board. Applications are available in the yearbook office, Room 204 in John Barry Hall. There are many positions open for creative and dedicated people. The filing deadline for all applications is April 22 at 5 p.m.

Attention seniors

If you have any photos (with negatives) or slides that you think would be appropriate for the slide show at Baccalaureate Mass, please drop them off, in an envelope with your name and address, in Campus Ministry as soon as possible. Please mark each slide or photo with your name also.

Graduation announcements are being distributed April 11 through May 16, 9:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 2 to 4 p.m. in Room 202 Dougherty Hall. Please note that this office will be closed between 12 p.m. and 2 p.m. each day.

If you did not receive the recent mailing concerning commencement, which outlines information concerning caps, gowns and reporting times, please stop by the Dean of Students Office in 213 Dougherty Hall, to pick up a copy.

Literary Arts magazine

The Villanova Literary Arts Magazine, USES, will be distributed the week of April 12. Please look for it in Dougherty Hall, Connelly Center, Vasey Hall and Falvey Hall.

Thank you

Project Sunshine says "A Big Thank You," to all of you who went without lunch, March 24 to benefit Sunshine Day! Because of your generosity we have another $2,700 to make the day even better for the children.

Spring break 1988 participants

Security deposits for Cancun and Jamaica must be picked up in the Union Office as soon as possible.

Second of a two-part series

Sexual harassment probed

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

The nature of sexual harrassment at Villanova is not one of blatant acts, but rather of smaller, less obvious actions which create a "chilly" climate for the harrassed, recently agreed three members of a committee which created a proposal for a University policy and procedure on sexual harassment in 1986.

"It [sexual harassment at Villanova] is more small, venial incidents that promote a climate of inappropriate behavior," said committee member Dr. Mary Desmond, biology professor.

Dr. John Immerwahr, philosophy professor and chairperson of the committee, echoed Desmond's statements and said that comments on people's clothes or appearance, jokes and sexual banter were examples of such harassment.

"A chilling classroom climate puts woman students at a significant educational disadvantage. Overtly disparaging remarks about women, as well as more subtle differential behaviors, can have a critical and lasting effect," stated a past report by the Association of American Colleges.

The report, titled "The Classroom Climate: A Chilly One for Women?" added, ". . . A learning climate that subtly or overtly communicates different expectations for women than for men can interfere with the educational process itself."

Currently, there is no official University policy and procedure on sexual harassment at the University. The 1986 proposal is still in the hands of the University's law firm, Morgan, Lewis and Bockius, said Dr. Charles L. Cherry, associate vice president of Academic Affairs, Wednesday.

Cherry said the length of time taken for the proposal's consideration is due to the slowness of the law firm, not because of a deliberate slowdown by the administration.

A three-fold problem

Immerwahr described the nature of the problem of sexual harassment as three-fold. The

(Continued on page 12)

(photo by Shafie)

Dr. Barbara Wall, O.P., philosophy professor and member of a committee which created a proposal for an official University policy and procedure on cases of sexual harassment.

Applications rise again

By BRIDGET KELLEHER
Staff Reporter

"This year Villanova has received more applications for admission than ever before," according to the Rev. Harry J. Erdlen, O.S.A., dean of admissions, recently.

Over 9,600 high school seniors and potential transfer students applied for admission this year. This represents a 4 percent increase from last year's figures. All the schools within the University received more applications, with the College of Arts receiving the most.

New Jersey led all states with 2,354 applications and Pennsylvania was second with 2,288. Increased recruitment in non-eastern seaboard states has resulted in a higher number of applications from such states as Ohio (124), Illinois (120), Texas (41), Oklahoma (14) and California (100).

Minority applications also showed a significant increase. This year, the University received 775 minority applications, as compared to 697 in 1987 and 451 in 1986.

Of the minority applicants, 320 were Black, 224 were Hispanic, 13 were Mexican/American, 217 were Oriental and one was American Indian. From this group, 161 Blacks, 103 Hispanics, seven Mexican/Americans and 118 Orientals were accepted.

Denise Houser, in her third year as Villanova's minority recruiter, attributes the increase to greater recruitment in the mid-Atlantic states, especially New York, and Maryland.

Houser said, however, that among those accepted, financial difficulties may prevent many of the prospective students from enrolling at Villanova. "Financial aid is a key concern," said Houser.

In the News

Villanova Club Week proclaimed

Thomas Kean, governor of New Jersey, proclaimed the week of April 10 "Villanova Club Week."

The Villanova Club of South Jersey is a society which consists of both alumni and friends of Villanova. The club has members throughout New Jersey.

The purpose of the club is to foster social, intellectual and educational relationships between its members. The club also promotes and conducts charitable, religious and patriotic activities in New Jersey.

The Villanova Club of South Jersey gave a tribute to the Villanova basketball team at its 38th annual dinner. It was held at the Hyatt House in Cherry Hill, N.J., April 12.

M.S.

U.S. space policy to be examined

A seminar entitled "Onward and Upward: Reasserting U.S. Leadership in Space" will examine the new American space policy April 19 from 4 to 6:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center Cinema.

Four different speakers will discuss the new policy, released by the White House Feb. 11. They include: Dr. John Logsdon, director of both the Space Policy Institute and the graduate program in science and technology at George Washington University; Kenneth S. Pedersen, deputy associate administrator, external relations. National Aeronautics and Space Administration [who authored the policy]; Lt. Col. F. Kenneth Schwetje, space law expert in the U.S. Air Force International Law Division; and David J. Wright, manager of civil space program marketing for the General Electric Company in Valley Forge, Pa.

As the leading American experts in the field of space policy, technology and applications, these speakers will provide an analysis of the new policy from different perspectives: its historical basis, the rationale behind its creation and its military and commercial components.

M.S.

Ireland lecture planned

Villanova University's Center for the Study of Conflict is sponsoring a distinguished visiting lecture series titled "Living in Crisis: Ireland and Northern Ireland."

As part of this series, on April 21, Professor Seamus Dunn, from the department of education at Ulster University at Coleraine, will speak on "The Role of Education in a Divided Community." Northern Ireland's educational system is split into two sectors that closely reflect the Protestant-Catholic division within the country.

The lecture is free of charge and will be held in Corr Hall Chapel.

M.S.

Renowned scientists present differing views

Physicist Teller takes pro-nuclear stance

By DANIEL MORIARTY
Staff Reporter

The following is an interview conducted Monday with Dr. Edward Teller.

What recent scientific breakthroughs do you anticipate will have an effect on the job market?

One obvious breakthrough has been the development of electronic computers — something on the order of one million jobs, perhaps more. I learned about computers after the second World War from a man named John Von Newmann.

Another sensational advance of the last couple of years is the high temperature superconductor, which is apt to have many applications and which, starting from industry rather than the big universities, has already engaged the attention of thousands of people.

This discovery was made in the IBM laboratory in Zurich — a very remarkable place — by Bendorz (a German), and Muller (a Swiss).

I am told that this was a very big project — $150,000 [He laughed].

The work was continued in this country at the University of Houston. In general, the widespread contributions of industry and smaller universities have dominated the field.

Progress is also being made in Japan and the Soviet Union, where the Russian superconductivity experts, who never visited the West before, are now coming over to international conferences. Does secrecy render these international conferences somewhat ineffective?

It is wrong that much of the information is classified. Secrecy, which fails to keep things secret from the Russians, does keep secrets from the rest of us and interrupts communication. The apparent scarcity of contributions in the United States is to some extent due to secrecy.

Who will be the builders of tomorrow's reactors?

They will be Japanese and Germans because American environmentalists and concerned scientists have prevented our work. When you have no applications, no support, no audience, you get nothing done, or very little.

What is your response to those who claim that SDI [Strategic Defense Initiative] may not be able to do what it claims?

I don't know what it claims to be able to do. Our opponents have said that it should claim 100 percent effectiveness. It, of course, can't claim 100 percent effectiveness and, to my knowledge, never did.

It is aimed at creating more trouble for the attacker than for the defender. It is aimed at deterring an attack by making it, in the end, ineffective. And I think that we have made very good progress toward that goal. It is an extremely dangerous situation.

In order to greatly improve the stability — the chance of peace — we should pursue both arms reduction and defense — that is, SDI. And we absolutely need a bipartisan foreign policy to bring that about. If we don't — and we haven't had that in the last five years — this gives the Soviets an excellent opportunity to play Americans against Americans, and that is what has happened.

To put it another way, the one man who has supported arms reduction and defense is a man who therefore should be called a middle-of-the-roader, and his name is Ronald Reagan.

Of the candidates in the upcoming presidential elections, whose defense policy most closely corresponds to your own?

Bush.

How do you perceive the Soviet glasnost?

There are two real accomplishments that I see in glasnost. One is that Gorbachev allowed Sakharov to come back to Moscow. One man — not very much — but a good man.

The other is, that when they had a real difficulty in Chernobyl, the Soviets appeared to, and I think did, put all relevant information on the table in Vienna at the International Atomic Energy Agency, which, to my mind, is a first not only in Soviet behavior but, generally, in Russian behavior.

They have always been authoritarian and always slow to admit a mistake. These two are real pieces of progress.

I will disclaim a third piece, namely Gorbachev's offer to withdraw from Afghanistan. I think there is a good chance that he will withdraw, but that is not due to glasnost, but to the Stinger missile, which made their position in Afghanistan a very difficult one.

I do not know whether my

(Continued on page 11)

(Photo by Shafie)

Dr. Edward Teller, a renowned physicist, spoke Monday at Villanova on "The Energy Evolution."

Levinthal gives lecture

(Photo by Shafie).

Professor Cyrus Levinthal of Columbia University gave a lecture Monday on the history of the arms race.

By THOMAS BRUGGER
Staff Reporter

As part of the Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar Program, Villanova invited Professor Cyrus Levinthal of Columbia University to speak Monday. His topic was "The History of the Nuclear Arms Race: Did Technology Drive It?"

Levinthal, educated at Swarthmore College and the University of California at Berkeley, has taught at the University of Michigan, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology [M.I.T.], and at his present post as professor of biophysics at Columbia University.

His interests are genetics and molecular biophysics, and he is a member of the National Academy of Sciences. One of his aims is to try to slow down the nuclear arms race.

Levinthal began his speech with historical background. Physics was developing steadily in Germany and England in the 1930s, but had not yet caught on in the United States. The United States eventually began its own research and was successful in first engineering the atomic bomb. After the atomic bombs were dropped, ending World War II, relations with the U.S.S.R. arose as a concern.

Though, as the speaker related, Americans saw the U.S.S.R. as a mass of unknowledgeable peasants, they realized that there did exist a quantity of very intelligent Soviet scientists. When the Soviets exploded their first atomic bomb in 1949, fears of espionage ran through the American populace. This tension helped to lead to the McCarthy period.

(Continued on page 12)

Michael Dukakis rebounds in Wisconsin primary

But Jackson's campaign retains strength, New York contest looms in future

By G.J. DONNELLY
Staff Reporter

Massachusettes Gov. Michael Dukakis sparked some life into his campaign last week with a convincing win over the Rev. Jesse Jackson in Wisconsin's Democratic primary. Dukakis took 48 percent of the vote, with Jackson at second with 28 percent, Tennessee Sen. Al Gore third with 17 percent and Illinois Sen. Paul Simon bringing up the rear with 5 percent.

The victory puts Dukakis in the position of being the front-runner going into the April 19 New York primary. New York holds 255 delegates which, if given to Dukakis, could grant him irresistible momentum as the Democratic convention approaches. His main worry comes from Gore, who could siphon off enough of his support to give Jackson the win.

Gore has been pursing the Jewish vote through praising Israeli Prime Minister Ytzack Shamir and attacking Jackson's support of the Palestinian Liberation Organization.

Jackson has encountered troubled with the Jewish vote. Some have never forgiven him for his infamous characterization of New York City as "Hymietown" four years ago, or his former alliance with the zealously anti-Semitic Louis Farrakhan, the leader of Nation of Islam.

For Dukakis, a step must be taken to make his campaign more exciting. The governor, by nature, is a cautious party politician in the Walter Mondale mode and in comparison to Jackson, is a rather ineffective speaker. However Dukakis does have the party machinery working in his favor and polls show him with a comfortable lead going into the New York primary.

Jackson's surprisingly strong "Rainbow Coalition" campaign is the exact opposite of Dukakis' one-step at a time strategy. His supporters are intensely dedicated to their man and Jackson does not disappoint them.

Jackson's whirlwind populism has been making some inroads to the white vote, significantly among the liberal well-educated group of Democratic voters, but still is in need of many more if his campaign is to succeed.

"I'm a tree shaker, not a jelly maker," Jackson exclaims, and his liberal populism has shown this to be true throughout his political life. He was behind the formation of Operation PUSH in Chicago, a civil rights activist group, and was active with Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.

In fact Jackson appeared the day after King's murder on national television wearing a shirt, allegedly stained with King's blood, and claiming to have held the dying activist in his arms. Close followers of King have disputed this story.

Jackson has also acted independently to meet with political leaders like Fidel Castro of Cuba and with the government of Syria to obtain the release of a downed U.S. fighter pilot.

Dukakis and Gore have both presented themselves as "competent" and qualified candidates for office. Gore has been willing to take chances by criticizing Jackson but his stand on some issues has been vague. Dukakis has been hurt by the allegation that he is "unemotional."

One factor in Dukakis' favor is that he would be more of a match for Vice President George Bush than Jackson. Newsweek's independent poll found that Jackson would win a scant 32 percent against 58 percent for George Bush in an election.

While Bush is all but granted the nomination for the Republican party, the Democrats may now be stuck in a brokered convention. A brokered convention is one in which no candidate has the delegates needed to automatically gain the nomination. As a result, there is bartering behind the scenes "powers that be" of the party. This entails maneuvering delegates until one can command a majority.

If this occurs, then it is quite possible that Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York could be drafted to run for president. Some, like Gore, do not find such a possibility unappetizing, but Dukakis does not share those feelings.

If nothing else, Jackson has proven blacks to be a powerful force in Democratic politics. He has been invited to a "power lunch" with such old-guard Democrats as Carl Gifford and is in a position to shape the Democratic party's politics for years to come.

Currently, Dukakis is the front runner with 741 delegates, Jackson is second with 705, Gore is in third with 395 and Simon, who has put his campaign on hold, though not withdrawn, is last with 171.

Portions of this article were taken from Newsweek, Time and U.S. News and World Report.

As Greek Week 1988 draws to a close, the Order of Omega would like to take the time to recognize the dedicated individuals who have worked for months behind the scenes in preparation for Greek Week. Greek Week '88 was organized by Christie Bonesch, Martin McGahan and Melissa Mourtzanakis.

Christie Bonesch is a junior history major from Bethleham, Pennsylvania. As a sister of the Kappa Alpha Theta sorority, Christie has served as assistant marshal; and vice president of the pledge education. Christie is also a member of the Blue Key Society, and was an orientation counselor this past year. Additionally, Christie was a member of the 1987 Greek Week committee.

Senior Martin McGahan is a member of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity and comes to Villanova from Atlanta, Georgia. During his four years as a Pike, Martin has held the positions of IFC representative and social chairperson. Martin was also a committee member for Sibling Weekend '88, and is a member of the Order of Omega.

Melissa Mourtzanakis is a junior marketing major from Silver Springs, Maryland, and a sister of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority. As a sister of Alpha Chi, Melissa has served as the assistant to the president, and currently holds the position of president. She also attended the Alpha Chi National Convention as a delegate. Besides her activities in Greek Week '88, Melissa was a member of the 1987 Greek Week committee, and has been involved in Special Olympics at Villanova.

For all of their hard work and dedication to Villanova's Greek system, the Order of Omega is proud to honor Christie Bonesch of Kappa Alpha Theta, Martin McGahan of Pi Kappa Alpha and Melissa Mourtzanakis of Alpha Chi Omega as the Greeks of the Week.

Registration conducted

By BARBARA KRESCH
Staff Reporter

About 500 students registered in Radnor Township through the voter registration drive held by Student Government, according to Patricia Marzulli, secretary of the external affairs department of Student Government.

The drive was conducted by representatives of Student Government, who went from door to door in the dormitories on Feb. 28 and 29, and March 1, 20, 21 and 22. She said that those who did not register in the dormitories could do so in the Student Government office.

The purpose of the drive, said Marzulli, was to "push for students to register here in Radnor Township in order to be recognized by residents and to feel like they are members of the community."

Student Government President Phil Brach said that the issue of student voting in local elections is "the reason why I first got involved in Student Government. Villanova students have this voice and they do not use it."

Brach is looking ahead toward the 1989 election, saying that "If enough students vote, they will be able to elect the next town commissioner." This would affect issues such as housing and zoning laws.

Marzulli was pleased with the results of the drive, saying that students were very responsive, asked questions and showed concern. She saw the results as a statement that "Villanova students care enough to vote in local elections."

Brach had set higher goals, hoping for twice as many people to register than the number that did.

Brach said that next year Student Government is considering conducting a voter registration drive for incoming freshmen during orientation. He said he hopes that this method will encourage more students to register next year because registering will be the norm.

This year, Student Government is also concerned with the primary April 29. It is informing students about the details of the primary and providing transportation to the designated voting areas.

(Photo by Baker)

Patricia Marzulli, secretary of the external affairs department of Student Government.

Voting results impounded

(Continued from page 1)

He said that the Villanovan's formal complaint submitted by Johanne C. Sharp, editor in chief, to the elections commission, that "Terise Fusco personally threw out over 1,000 of the 8,000 printed copies of the April 12 Election Extra issue of the Villanovan prior to distribution . . . violat[ing] the entire student body's right to read the only student newspaper at Villanova University" was a factor.

"It was not the single factor. It was one of the factors that figured into the aggregate of the improprieties of the election," he added.

In response to the Villanovan's charge, Fusco admitted she "disposed of some [of the newspapers] but it was right after they came out." She estimated that she disposed of "probably 800 total," including one stack in Dougherty Hall and one in Connelly Center.

Fusco attributed her actions to "a natural human reaction." She explained, "It was my only form of expression to something I feel is lies. I was faced with lies and allegations taken as fact, knowing there was no way I could express how I felt about it. I feel entirely justified."

As to the stacks missing from other buildings, Fusco replied, "I was not involved with that, but I know there are a lot of people who share the same reaction as I did . . . I feel they're perfectly justified."

Asked if she felt any conflict between her role of representing the student body and her acts suppressing the information that affects them, Fusco answered, "The papers were retrieved, so that's irrelevant. It's irrelevant because the information was not accurate."

She also said she was "not sure" whether she would do it again, although she did not think so. She then reiterated that she was not sure.

Delzotti said the Villanovan did play a role in events, but would not comment on the size of this role or whether there would be a response to the Villanovan.

Sean Closkey's campaign manager Michelle Ciccolo said Delzotti told her in response to her question of the Closkey staff handing out newspapers to "continue doing exactly what you're doing."

Delzotti said in answer to this assertion and the question of the use of the Villanovan as campaign material, "I don't specifically remember telling someone that they could hand it out . . . to the best of my recollection I don't remember saying that."

He said he could not comment on whether this issue was a part of the proceedings.

Closkey said the commission had not brought a charge against him. "As far as I know, I have not done anything wrong . . . the election commission said we were allowed to hand out papers and we did," he said.

Closkey said he did not talk to anyone on the Villanovan beforehand about an endorsement, did not know there would be an endorsement of him and was surprised and "very pleased" by the endorsement.

Delzotti said the commission is bound by the election rules to hold the elections within the specific chronological time period of two weeks, and was restricted as well by the availability of rooms for election events.

"I take absolutely no responsibility, nor does the commission take any responsibility, for a conflict in dates. It was more the calendar. It is not the paper's fault either. It is simply the calendar, the time we worked in," he said.

Delzotti cited confusion with the rules in terms that "the candidates did not read them." He explained, "The rules were as lucid as possible and . . . the commission has said in the past that it wasn't confusion, it was blatant violation."

Closkey was charged with campaign violations last week.

Freshman enrollment may rise in fall of 1988

By JENNIFER REIDY
Assistant News Editor

The University plans to enroll approximately 50 more freshmen next year if the budget passed by the University Senate is approved by the Board of Trustees, according to Dr. Richard A. Neville, vice president for Student Life.

Neville said that he believed "the budget committee found it an economic necessity" to increase freshman enrollment in order to bolster endowment through the additional tuition funds from these students.

However, Neville also said that he was against such measures, for these incoming freshmen would be forced to live off campus. He said that the possible increase in freshman enrollment within the proposed budget was "partially" the reason why he voted "no" on it.

"The Senate had recommended a policy that all freshmen live on campus. It is also difficult for these freshmen to adjust under the situation of living off campus, and this is a definite concern of mine," Neville explained.

The two new dormitories under construction on south campus could not house these students because they were promised to upperclassmen, he added.

The decision was initially made by the administrative budget committee, headed by Edward V. Murray, assistant to the president, which receives recommendations from the planning and priorities committee of the Senate on what programs require prioritized funding. This body is separate from the Senate budget committee, which decides whether priorities have been met and recommends that the Senate approve or reject the budget.

"We are doing everything we can in our power to enroll 50 freshmen commuters. I understand and support Dr. Neville's position and agree that freshmen should not have to live off campus," Murray commented.

"The class of 1989 is a very large class. Once they graduate, there will be a dramatic decrease in the student population. I have to look ahead at these things in order to maintain a stable enrollment of about 6,000 to 6,100 students," he explained.

This situation will aggravate a currently tense relationship between the University and the township residents, according to Phil Brach, Student Government president.

"The township will be upset that the potential lies for 50 more students to be in the community," Brach said.

"These maneuvers will hurt us in the future, particularly in applying for permits to build, etc. It is an issue of trust — the township feels lied to and kept in the dark," he continued.

However, the total number of off-campus residents will remain the same, considering that more

(Continued on page 12)

Underage drinkers cited

By MAUREEN STAPLETON
Staff Reporter

Three different incidents occurred on the night of April 8 involving Villanova students who were issued citations for underage drinking.

Two students were arrested at the south campus semi-formal held at the Sheraton Valley Forge, according to Andrew Byrne, director of security.

On the same night at 11:20, the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board [LCB] and the Radnor Township Police Department simultaneously raided Wayne Tavern and Smokey Joe's, according to Radnor Township Police Chief Maurice Hennessy.

At Wayne Tavern, 40 Villanova students were cited for underage drinking. Citations were given to four students at Smokey Joe's for the same offense.

Two individuals were arrested by the Upper Merion Police Department for underage drinking at the south campus semi-formal. According to Byrne, the students were arrested because " . . . we had to make an example."

In addition, approximately 10 individuals were removed from the function for either underage drinking or false identification. Byrne had no comment concerning students removed from private rooms at the hotel.

The Sheraton security department had recommended that paid security personnel be present at the function. This recommendation, said Byrne, occurs when there will be "a high probability that underage drinking will occur." The Stanford Hall House Council paid $50 for each of the security persons that were present.

The dance was halted momentarily "when things were getting out of hand and students were not complying with the law," said Byrne. At the suggestion of Byrne, the students were warned of the underage drinking law.

At Wayne Tavern, Manager William Hyatt was forced to clear everyone from the bar through the front door exit. The Radnor Police Department, along with the LCB, re-examined the identification of the patrons. Any patron with a duplicate license was taken to the police station. Seventy-two patrons were taken to the police station by school bus.

Hyatt said that the patrons were not searched at the station so "All the IDs they used on Friday night are still out on the streets."

(File Photo)

Police raided Smokey Joe's last Friday and arrested four Villanova students for underage drinking.

West campus discussed

Rezoning of 65 acre area sought by University

By SHARON A. WATERS
Assistant News Editor

Villanova University is in the process of having the west campus rezoned from residential use to institutional use, according to the Rev. Robert J. Martin, O.S.A., assistant to the president.

West campus, which includes St. Mary's Hall and is approximately 65 acres, is close in size to the 68-acre main campus as defined by the Regional Rail Line, Spring Mill Road and Ithan and Lancaster avenues, according to Martin.

Martin said that although it will house approximately the same number of students as main campus does, west campus will be primarily a "bedroom community" with also some office buildings.

Consequently, west campus will not be as densely developed as the main campus, according to Martin. So with the additional housing on west campus, some of the doubles in St. Mary's Hall will be reduced to single occupancy.

As for revising Alumni and Corr halls into office space, Martin said that the two new dorms on south campus are "new bedroom spaces" and "not replacements" for the two older dormitories. Plans for Alumni and Corr halls will not be determined until the west campus development is completed.

Present plans for the housing on west campus, according to Martin, possibly include apartment-style dormitories which would accommodate four people and include a living room and kitchenette.

Another alternative is suites, which would consist of two double-occupancy rooms sharing a bathroom.

According to Martin, these two formats for the housing would be better suited for upperclassmen who have reached a "different stage of development." Martin further explained that students belong to groups of friends and prefer to live with fewer people in the upperclass years. On the other hand, for underclassmen it is important to live in a larger environment at first where they can meet more people.

As of now, the architecture for the new west campus buildings will be "collegiate gothic," which is similar to St. Mary's Hall, in an effort to "make those new buildings blend well with St. Mary's," according to Martin.

The west campus development has also led to discussion of a bus service which would run through west campus and to main campus continuously from early morning to late night.

Martin said that construction of a walkway at the Spring Mill Road bridge is also being planned.

Relations with the neighbors to west campus have remained "favorable," according to Martin. He said, "My perspective is that the neighbors believe that we [the University] are acting in good faith with them because we're sharing information with them all

(Continued on page 9)

National News Notes

Compiled from the College Press Service

South African protests continue

Protest shanties — meant to symbolize the poverty of South Africa's black citizens — went up and, in one case, were forcibly torn down on several campuses last week.

On March 27, police arrested 23 students and tore down a month-old shanty town at the University of Colorado, erected to try to pressure the school's regents to sell the university's stocks in companies that do business in segregationist South Africa.

The regents again refused to divest at a meeting a week before the shanty town was destroyed.

At Western Michigan University [WMU], Kalamazoo city officials warned 15 WMU shanty residents to take down the structures, built in a city park to pressure the city to divest its investment portfolio of certain stocks.

Less dramatic confrontations with campus administrators also took place last week at North Carolina State University, where students temporarily occupied an apartheid "jail cell," and at the University of Maryland [UM], where the Campus Senate voted to ask UM regents to divest.

Nobel Prize winner Elie Wiesel, known for his writings about the Holocaust, cancelled a late-March lecture at Northern Michigan University when he learned the visit was being underwritten by newspaper publisher John McGoff, who in the 1970s secretly took $11.3 million from white South Africans trying to buy the Washington Star.

Abstention will not help athletes

Athletes who abstain from sexual intercourse before competition because they think they will play better may be fooling themselves.

"The notion that sexual intercourse diminishes athletic performance is a myth," said Dr. Loren Cordain, who directed a study of college athletes at Colorado State University (CSU).

"Heavyweight boxers quite commonly separate themselves for as many as six to eight weeks before a title defense. Triathletes and marathoners also follow this routine," Cordain noted.

Cordain, who has a doctorate in exercise physiology, and his co-author, Wendy Newton, who has a master's degree in exercise physiology, studied a group of married, male intramural athletes aged 20 to 35.

The men's agility, anaerobic power, reaction and endurance was the same when tested the morning after intercourse as they were after five days of abstinence.

"If intercourse didn't affect the performance of these subjects, it probably doesn't affect other athletes," mused Cordain. "No reason exists for boxers, football players or any athlete to abstain from sex for fear of affecting their athletic performance."

Second of two-part series

Stack critiques fraternities

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, said recently of underage drinking and alcohol abuse, "Certainly the alcohol problem is not just with fraternity and sorority functions. The thing that disturbs me with fraternities . . . [is that they] state they're not just drinking clubs, but they are really people bonded together . . . with ideals found in their rituals . . . sometimes I really think that's a load of nonsense.

"There's too many cases where fraternity members are aware of a brother whose life is being affected by alcohol and drugs, and they let the person keep going. They say they care, they say they're really tight, and at the same time, they rarely intervene or confront each other or members of their group about their behavior in this area," Stack said.

"Not only that, but in some of the activities that go on around pledging or around some of their meetings, it's accepted: we will kill so many kegs . . . there's pressure on people — a subtle pressure but it's real nonetheless — that in order to be an accepted member of this group you better be able to drink regularly and drink a lot," he said.

"I think if we had an honest accounting of [incidents] around the pledging activities that take place, if we went back over the last four or five years . . . we may find ourselves with one or two fraternities here at the most. There's too often too much activity that does not belong on a college campus and particularly does not belong on a Catholic college campus," Stack asserted.

Stack also said he worried about the image Villanova students projected to the local community. He spoke of incidents at the Bryn Mawr Hospital emergency room involving students who are drunk.

He used as an example an occurrence involving a student who was served alcohol at an off-campus fraternity party who later had to be taken to the hospital along with a friend by an R.A. [resident assistant].

He said that while one student

(Continued on page 9)

Correction

A statement concerning the Rev. Robert J. Martin, O.S.A., assistant to the president, in an article titled "University lacks harassment policy" in the March 25 edition of the Villanovan, was inaccurate.

The article stated that Martin was unavailable for comment Tuesday, March 22. While Martin was unavailable for comment at the time the reporter, Dante J. Scala, tried to contact him, Martin did attempt to contact Scala soon afterward on two separate occasions.

The Villanovan apologizes for the error and any inconvenience it may have caused.

Aftermath of NCAAs provides benefits, costs

Post-game damages cited

By STEVEN MONTRESOR
Staff Reporter

Up to $5000 of damage, exclusive of damage done to the sculpture "Awakening," was caused during the celebration after the Wildcats' March 24 victory over Kentucky in the NCAA basketball tournament, according to Thomas Trucks, director of Maintenance.

According to Trucks, several panes of glass were broken on doors in Sullivan, Sheehan and Stanford halls. Some windows were also broken in Dougherty Hall. There was also some vandalism of fire extinguishers, he said.

According to the Rev. Martin Smith, O.S.A., assistant directorof Residence Life for environmental management, four windows were broken in Sullivan Hall. The "quad," the area between Sheehan and Sullivan halls, was littered with toilet paper, beer cans and broken bottles. Toilet paper hung from the trees.

The victory was a big win for the school, said the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students. The University understands the importance for the students to have fun, he said.

Unfortunately, a certain number of inconsiderate actions exists within such a large crowd, such as the setting-off of bottle rockets and fire crackers and the breaking of a large number of bottles, he said. The University feels responsible for the dangers that follow in such a situation but finds it difficult or impossible to protect the students, according to Stack.

Stack estimated that the crowd in the quad numbered about 1,000. He noted that the University did not have a celebration of that size after reaching the Final Eight of the NCAA tournament in 1985.

He suggested that the students were trying to make 1985 happen all over again and added that it was too early a victory for the celebration.

The victories in 1985 set a precedent for this year's security, he said. In 1985, Villanova's victory was a surprise and the celebration that followed had results that were also surprising, according to Stack.

The damage in 1985 was much more widespread than the damage done this year, according to Stack.

One Sullivan Hall resident said, "It was great the way the University came together to celebrate the win. I think it gave all of us a sense of unity which we ordinarily do not have."

(photo by Shafie)

"Awakening" was vandalized following Villanova's loss to Oklahoma in the NCAA basketball tournament.

Cats bring home over $900,000

By KRISTEN FALLAN
Staff Reporter

The men's basketball team's finish among the final eight of the National Collegiate Athletic Association [NCAA] tournament last month gained the University approximately $922,900, according to the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Other Big East conference schools will also financially benefit from the basketball team's success.

According to the Philadelphia Inquirer, the NCAA projects to gross approximately $67 million from the 64-team tournament. Nearly $57 million of the NCAA's profit is gained from the broadcasting of the games on television.

Of the money received, Villanova keeps 50 percent. The other half is divided among the eight other teams in the Big East.

Craig Miller, director of Sports Information, said the profits received by Villanova "go into the school's general fund," not directly to the Athletics department. Miller also said that such profits "are considered an income" and will "benefit the whole University."

Miller explained that dividing the profits among all of the schools in the conference gives the smaller, developing or not as successful teams the opportunity to better themselves with the help of some money.

Athletics Director Dr. Theodore A. Aceto commented that the "conference teams benefit from the longevity of any team [in tournament play]."

Villanova did not participate in the NCAA tourney last year, yet the University received more than a school whose team lost in the first round. Aceto said that this was a result of "eight of the nine Big East schools participating in post-season play."

According to Aceto, the conference did financially well last season because "five Big East teams went to the NCAA tournament and two went to the Final Four." Other Big East teams participated in the National Invitational Tournament.

The NCAA pays the traveling expenses for a party of 30 to travel from each invited school.

"Awakening" vandalized

(Continued from page 1)

"The Awakening" is insured for $160,000 to $180,000. Jay Dugan, the sculptor of "The Awakening," is planning to reconstruct the destroyed part of the artwork at his own expense.

On May 1, he will travel to Tivoli, a quarry 15 miles north of Rome, where he will attempt to find marble as similar as possible to that in his sculpture.

"I must try to match the same color and veining. It's very difficult, but it's something I've got to do," the artist said. "I'm doing this at my own expense [estimated at $75,000] because I have great pride in that sculpture."

Dugan donated the sculpture to Villanova University in 1985. He described his motivation for the artwork: "What you try to do in an abstract sculpture is relate your ideas to the geometric shapes and allow them to represent your feelings.

"I chose the subject of an 'Awakening' for the university because a school is an environment where the students are learning and awakening to limitless conditions and fragments of knowledge."

Dugan expressed his "sadness and confusion" in reaction to the destruction: "I don't know what was achieved by it. I can't understand why the people, whether they were Villanova students or not, did what they did."

Dugan also expressed his desire to "reassure the student body" that "The Awakening" will be reconstructed, "if all goes well," by September 15.

Goode partakes in groundbreaking

Robert S. Krutsick, acting president of the University City Science Center, and Mayor W. Wilson Goode of Philadelphia converse at the groundbreaking of 3600 Science Center, the scientific development that marks the joint trade agreement that will link UCSC with Japan's Kyoto Research Park.

SUPPORT SPECIAL OLYMPICS AT VILLANOVA!

Special Olympics Pennsylvania

THURSDAY NIGHT, APRIL 21
AT SMOKEY JOE'S

Starting at 9 p.m., for every $3 pitcher sold, $1 will be donated to support Special Olympics at Villanova.

REMEMBER PENNSYLVANIA STATE LAWS ARE IN EFFECT
PROOF OF 21 ID REQUIRED

Educational Opportunities

Compiled by Maureen Stapleton
Staff Reporter

Mentzer nominees

Nominees Sought For The Mentzer Award

Each year the University sponsors the Mentzer Memorial Award, which is intended to honor one Villanova student who has contributed the most to expanding opportunities for the underprivileged.

The Villanovan invites students to nominate those of their fellow students whom they know to have volunteered time and energy on a regular basis to such efforts as social action programs, hospital volunteer programs and other types of volunteer programs for the underprivileged.

It is requested that particulars about the nominees be given so that documentation of their efforts is obtained. A cash stipend award will be given as well as a plaque. Nominations can be made to the Villanovan, Dr. James Murphy, or to Dr. Patrick Nolan of the English department.

Black experience in America

Writing on the Black Experience in America

The McDonalds Corporation is offering three honorariums of $2,000 for developing writers concerning the black experience in America. Writers will be competing for literary awards in poetry, fiction and playwriting. Winners in each category will receive an honorarium of $2,000, a trip to New York to participate in a celebrity reading of their work and a literary reception.

Deadlines for entries is June 1. For more information, write to: The Negro Ensemble Company, McDonald's Literary Achievement Awards, P.O. Box 778, Times Square Station, New York, NY 10108.

Scholarships

Scholarship Opportunities

The Adolph Coors Company will provide $501,000 in scholarship funds to eligible dependents of honorably discharged American veterans. Scholarship application forms are now available through Coors distributors, veterans service organizations or by writing Coors Veterans' Memorial Scholarship Fund, P.O. Box 3111, Northbrook, IL 60065, or by calling toll-free 1-800-49COORS. Applications must be postmarked no later than July 1.

The Center for Population Options is offering $5,000 for research projects which focus on media and its impact on adolescent pregnancy, family planning, reproductive rights, sexual behavior and related issues.

Applications may be submitted by individuals associated with any academic or independent media-related organization. Proposals can include studies, research, dissertations, surveys and media analysis. The application deadline is June 30, 1988.

To apply, contact: Center for Population Options, Media Office, 12023½ Ventura Blvd., Suite #2, Studio City, Ca. 91604, (818) 766-4200.

Conferences

Conferences of Note

"Keepers of the Story" is the theme selected for The Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission's (PHMC) 11th Annual Conference on Black History, scheduled for May 6 and 7 at Wilkes College in Wilkes-Barre.

Black history authorities will lead sessions on the family reunion, the church, oral tradition, the photographic record and other related sources. For more information on this conference or a brochure, contact Kristin Bailey, PHMC Black History Conference, Box 1026, Harrisburg, PA, 17108-1026, or call (717) 783-5376.

Drexel University is offering three free evening workshops in communication skills, mathematical skills, and study and time management skills to assist adults who are planning to return to school.

The introductory workshop, "Going to College," will be held April 21 from 6 to 9 p.m. This workshop will cover such topics as time management, financial aid, educational terminology and career planning.

The communications skills workshop will be held on Mondays, April 25 through May 16, from 6-8 p.m. This four-part workshop will focus on the proper usage of grammar in writing and verbal communication.

The four-part mathematics skills workshop will be held on Thursdays, April 28 through May 19, from 6-8 p.m.

Interested individuals may register for one, two or all three of the free workshops. For more information call the University College at (215) 895-1826.

A lecture concerning, "John Updike: The Pennsylvania Stories" will be held at 3:30 p.m. in Drexel University's Living Arts Lounge, 322 on Chestnut St., April 19. The lecture is free and open to the public. For more information, contact Dr. Burton Porter, (215) 895-1823.

The Greater Philadelphia Christian Writer's Fellowship Fourth Spring Writer's Seminar will be held at Rose Tree Park Church of the Nazarene, Route 252 and Providence Road, Media, Pa., April 30, beginning at 8 a.m.

Michael Phillips, author, editor, publisher, and bookseller, is this year's featured speaker. Other area leading Christian writers and authors will hold workshops on topics such as daily devotionals, greeting cards, poetry, personal experience articles, novels, nonfiction and more.

For more information contact (215) 356-8159 or (215) 544-4894.

Educational opportunities abroad

Educational Opportunities Abroad

The Sarah Lawrence/BADA London Theatre Program, one of the few open to undergraduates during the academic year, will immerse its participants in the British theatre scene. Students will pursue a rigorous course of study, including scene study, voice, movement, stage fighting and history of theatre.

Regular tutorials will allow students to work individually with the faculty; frequent trips to the theatre in London and Stratford-on-Avon, master classes and talks by major theatre personalities will supplement course work. All students take part in performance at the end of each term.

College and university juniors and seniors are eligible to participate. The London Theatre Program is highly selective and the number of students is strictly limited. Applications for the fall 1988-89 year, or for the fall 1988 semester, must be mailed by May 1; the deadline for the spring 1989 semester is November 15.

Contact Barbara Kaplan, dean of the college, Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, New York, 10708 for more information.

University of New Orleans International Study Programs will host this year's Brunnenberg Study Tour from May 26 through June 26. The Brunnenberg castle-farmhouse-museum complex is located in Dorf Tirol in northern Italy.

Participants live in a renovated Tyrolean farmhouse and take their noon meal at the Brunnenberg Castle. They enroll in a three-credit English course, The Medieval Castle in Italian Literature and work in the castle museum. Field trips and tutoring in German and Italian will be available.

For further information or an application, write UNO International Studies Programs, P.O. Box 1315-B, University of New Orleans, Lakefront Camous, New Orleans, LA 70148 or call (504) 286-7116.

National opportunities

National Educational Opportunities

Susquehanna University will offer an intensive program in Japanese language and culture from July 28 to August 19. Ninety hours of instruction will consist of five hours of language class daily, taught by native Japanese instructors, using progressive, dynamic methods and materials. Students will earn four transferable semester hours of credit.

Applications are due by July 1. Contact Dr. Susan Johnson, Susquehanna University, Selinsgrove, Pa 17870, (717) 374-0101 for application forms and information.

The Pittsburgh Theological Seminary has joined with three city universities to provide a comprehensive and diversified system of joint degree/dual competency programs.

These joint programs have been established with Carnegie-Mellon University's School of Urban and Public Affairs in the field of Public Management and Policy, with Duquesne University in the areas of Law and Church Music/Christian Education, and with the University of Pittsburgh in the discipline of social work, business administration, library science and health administration.

When successfully completed, the joint degree programs result in two masters degrees, including the master of divinity degree awarded by Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. For specific information about the joint degree programs contact: Director of Admissions, Pittsburgh Theological Seminary, 616 N. Highland Ave., Pittsburgh, Pa 15206 or call toll free 1-800-451-4194.

The Washington Center, a nonprofit educational organization, will offer a two-week symposium titled, "Crisis and Choice in American Foreign Policy" on August 14-26, 1988. It will take place in Washington, D.C., and is offered for undergraduate and graduate students.

An optional third week on "American-Soviet Relations" will be held from August 7-13. A highlight of this optional week will be a foreign policy-making simulation in which each symposium member plays a role.

The registration deadline is May 2. Colleges typically award two or three academic credits for participation and low-cost housing is available to all participants. Limited scholarship awards are also available. For program and registration information contact: Loretta Hawley, Program Coordinator, the Washington Center, (202) 289-8680.

Employment

Employment Opportunities

The Peace Corps has announced an increase in the monthly readjustment allowance paid to Peace Corps volunteers when they complete their services overseas. Under the new rate, a volunteer serving a two-year assignment earns a total readjustment allowance of $4,800, not including their training period.

More than 5,200 Peace Corps volunteers and trainees are working in more than 60 developing countries in grassroots, self-help projects in agriculture, education, forestry, fisheries, health and small enterprise development. Through Peace Corps, more than 120,000 Americans have served in more than 90 developing nations since 1961.

For more information and an application, call (800) 424-8580, extension 93 or write: Peace Corps, Room P-301, Box 717, Washington, D.C. 20526.

Friends Hospital, a psychiatric hospital located in Philadelphia, is looking for volunteers for the summer.

Available positions include assisting with patients, library research, computer data entry and a variety of other placements. Free parking, convenient public transportation and a meal allowance are available.

For more information, call (215) 831-4777.

The FAA plans to hire approximately 3,000 men and women over this year and train them for careers as air traffic control specialists. All new hired people receive their initial ATC training as paid employees at the FAA Academy in Oklahoma City. Most are hired at a base salary of $18,726. Those that successfully complete the academy course then will be assigned to a field facility where the on-the-job training will begin.

No previous aviation experience is required of persons applying to these positions. Those who pass the test and meet other qualifications will have their names added to the list of persons eligible for controller jobs.

Each applicant must have three years work experience, a college degree or a combination of work and college experience.

Additional information can be obtained from Shirley Gerard at (301) 859-3733.

News Writers Wanted

Come to 201 Dougherty Hall

Ask for Dante or Noël

Senate votes in favor of budget recommendation

(Continued from page 1)

7-2 with one abstention.

Student Senator John Lewis then made a motion that the Senate not recommend the budget as prepared by the Senate budget committee. The motion was seconded by Phil Brach, Student Government president.

"This amendment will send a clear message [to the Board of Trustees]. I'd like to restructure debate from letting the amendment slide through to a debate on why this budget should not be moved to the Board of Trustees," Lewis said.

Clay then said that the amendment was unnecessary since the report had been "overwhelmingly supported" by the budget committee. "We've done too much work to be ignored," he said.

Dr. Angelo Armenti, dean of University College, argued that the motion was out of order. The motion was then voted on and defeated.

Lewis debates against budget

Lewis then stood up and began a long speech on the budget proposal which was then up for discussion. "I fought like hell to stop [this budget] and I think it's very bad for the University. Not because it raises my tuition $800. I'll be able to get the money, but I have friends that won't."

Lewis cited the Mission Statement, declaring that by passing the budget and subsequently raising tuition 10 percent, Villanova is not living up to its mission of enrolling "students with diverse social, geographic, economic and educational backgrounds."

Lewis gave an example of a student who was first in her class with a 690 verbal score and 610 math score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, but was unable to attend because of financial reasons.

"Here is someone who could truly qualify to share in the academic experience of Villanova [but] she's going to Rutgers because we didn't have the financial aid, we didn't have the resources. We didn't care enough to help the people who were accepted to this school," he said.

Lewis urged that the Senate "think about the people who'll never come here. Think about the people who came here and can't stay here. I've lost friends that can't afford it. I know people that have $48,000 in debt when they come out of this University."

Lewis added that the University will not have a strong alumni organization, if alumni are in debt because of college expenses. "If you embitter the student body by increasing their tuition every year, do you think they're going to give money?" he asked. Lewis then received loud applause from the student protestors.

Armenti then asked what size the increase should be. Brach said it should be a 4 percent increase, adding that "we're addressing a national problem. We're spending money like the federal government."

He said that most schools spend 10-15 percent of their budget on financial aid while Villanova spends 2-4 percent. The student supporters replied with loud jeers.

"You don't always get the best. You get what you can live with," said Dr. Joseph E. Thompson, faculty senator and political science professor, of the budget.

Clay added that the University must pay for the debt on the duPont Pavilion and for better teachers, since the University is becoming more prestigious.

Faculty Senator Dr. Harry R. Strack, political science professor, said that he was in favor of the tuition increase "100 percent," but did not agree with the faculty salary increase.

He expressed concern that there was no long-range plan to increase faculty salary to a level which is acceptable for competitive institutions. He also disclosed that the football subsidy for next year is over $1 million and that he would vote against the budget because the priorities were "screwed up."

(Photo by O'Neill)

Despite a large student turnout, the University Senate approved the 1988-89 budget recommendation by a vote of 17-16.

Nicole Blanche, student senator, then said the Senate should first solve the issue of across-the-board spending before the budget is passed. Currently, every organization on campus is allotted a fixed amount of money per year.

Student senator Brian Moses then said that he is "carrying a monkey on his back" because of the debts he has for loans which must be paid back.

He said he would "love to give the University money" as an alumnus, but would not be able because of his debt. "We shouldn't compare ourselves to other schools. We should be ourselves," he added. He said the University is "creating a cycle of anger" if the Senate passes the budget.

Alumni Senator Frank Zarilli, said "if you can't afford it, you can't be admitted." He added that if the Senate voted down the budget, the Board of Trustees would probably still implement it. Zarilli, however, ultimately decided to change his vote and reject the budget.

Brach later said that the financial aid situation at Villanova is at a crisis level. "As a student I would not support a budget that went through this process. It's a problem which is inherently wasteful."

Lewis added that unless the Senate "gets serious about sending a serious message to the Board of Trustees, it is wasting a lot of valuable people's time. We'll wait until hell freezes over until we get what we want."

After more debating, the Senate voted on whether to approve the budget.

Faculty reactions

Maurone said he felt that the student protest was legitimate and that the students were well behaved. "It was certainly intimidating," he said. He added, however, that Student Government's argument against the budget should have been brought up in the fall when the Senate voted to accept the priorities as presented by the planning and priorities committee.

Dr. John A. Doody, faculty council chairperson and chairperson of the philosophy department, who voted in favor of the budget, said that he did not feel good about his decision.

He described his decision to accept the budget as an "unhappy compromise." He added that he voted for the decision which the faculty council took.

Maurone said he was surprised that the Senate vote was as close as it was and added that the Board of Trustees was scheduled to meet Tuesday to review the budget proposal for final recommendation.

This is a listing of the University senators' votes on the proposed budget recommendation for 1988-89.

accepted	rejected
Arvanites-F	Blanche-S
Cannon-F	Brach-S
Clay-A	Carman-S
Doody-F	Curtis-S
Ellis-A	Fahrman-S
Fee-F	Iorio-S
Fenner-A	Karam-S
Fitzpatrick-A	Kriesen-S
Frankino-A	Lewis-S
Gallen-A	Moses-S
Griffin-A	Neville-A
Joye-F	Pendrak-S
Longman-F	Punzi-F
Paparella-F	Strack-F
Rice-A	Valiga-F
Riley-A	Zarilli-AL
Ziegler-A

A-Administrative senator F-faculty senator S-student senator AL-alumni senator senators who left early: Armenti-A, Lynch-A, Rotte-F, Thompson-F senators with excused absences: Capone-A senators with unexcused absences: Brancatella-S, Wible-S
Senate chairperson: Maurone-F; does not vote.

(Photo by O'Neill)

Approximately 200 student protestors were present at the March 25 Senate meeting in support of Student Government's attempt to vote down the budget.

Green speaks on alcohol

By DIANE CILIONE
Staff Reporter

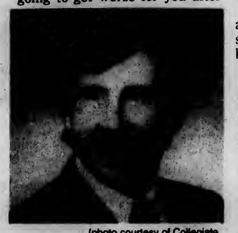
Mike Green, president of Collegiate Consultants on Drug and Alcohol and consultant to Villanova's Athletics department, spoke about drinking and drug abuse recently to a predominantly Greek audience on campus.

Green's lecture, as well as his whole collegiate consulting program, focuses on responsible drinking, rather than abstaining from drinking, for college students.

"I am not going to pretend that drinking does not happen in a college atmosphere," said Green. "My job is to talk about responsible drinking."

Having a drinking problem is not being an alcoholic, according to Green. Drinking problems have different degrees of intensity, he explained. "Some signs of the start of a drinking problem include occasionally missing class because of drinking, spending extra money on alcohol, not feeling well, having a hangover once or twice a week," he said.

More serious drinking problems include recklessly endangering one's self by doing dangerous things while drunk, consistently missing classes, neglecting class work, losing relationships because of excessive drinking and developing a reputation for excessive drinking, according to Green.



The most serious stage of drinking problems is marked by an increase in weekly drinking times, blackouts and violations because of drinking, he said.

Green's lecture slogan is "2 HALT TIPS," which is a mnemonic expression for the main ideas of his lecture.

"2" stands for two drinks an hour, according to Green. "A social drinker does not drink more than two drinks an hour which are equivalent to a 12-ounce beer or a one-shot drink," he said.

"H" stands for hunger. "Do eat at least two hours before you go out to drink, but do not eat salty foods," said Green. Also, do not eat after you get drunk, he said.

"A" stands for anger. "Decide before you drink if being angry is going to get worse for you after you drink," he said.

(photo courtesy of Collegiate Consultants on Drugs and Alcohol)

Mike Green recently spoke on campus about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.

"L" represents loneliness. Do not drink to meet people or to try to get out of a bad mood, said Green.

"T" is for tired. "Drinking has the effect of a depressant ... fatigue will get worse if you drink when you are tired," said Green.

"T" represents the "thing that gets you drunk." Don't do shots or funnels, he said.

"I" represents ingredients in drinks. "Know what they are," said Green. Drinks should be made with one shot and with a liquor which is not more than 80 proof.

"P" is for "people and places." One should avoid situations which will present problems when one drinks.

"S" represents substances, according to Green. At no time should drugs or other substances be mixed with alcohol, said Green.

"The response at Villanova to this program has been the best I've seen across the country," said Green. "That includes the Greek organizations at Villanova," he added.

The overwhelming response he received is a tribute to Director of the Drug and Alcohol Intervention Center Janice Janosik, Assistant Director of Student Activities Gary Bonas, Dean of Students the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., said Green. They are the people behind the scenes at Villanova who deserve a lot of credit, he added.

Work-study students wane

By E.H. McELDOWNEY
Staff Reporter

Colleges across the country are having problems finding students to fill work-study programs, according to a recent College Press Service [CPS] report.

This is not a large problem at Villanova, although the number of students presently employed under the work-study program has slightly decreased because of competition from off-campus employees, said Susan L. Batoff, Villanova's college work-study coordinator.

Batoff said that while "there are more jobs available than work-study students," the average number of students in the program has remained fairly constant. She added that the number of work-study students is usually around 500 per semester. But for the 1987-88 term, 406 students are involved in the program.

As a result of this shortage of work-study employees, the on-campus student wage scale was re-evaluated in accordance with a survey Batoff conducted of other area schools. The pay rate for Villanova is now "consistent with that of schools like the University of Pennsylvania, Bryn Mawr and Drexel," she said.

In the work-study program, the University department employing the student is charged on a bi-weekly basis 20 percent of the student's gross earnings. The remaining 80 percent is financed by the federal government.

The student must apply for, and be granted, a financial aid award. This award is based on many factors, including financial need. The award allows the student to "earn a portion of his/her education expenses through employment in an approved on-campus or off-campus job," according to the Villanova Work-Study Handbook.

Batoff defended the importance and convenience of on-campus jobs. She said that many students find on-campus employment easier to find, more accessible and more flexible in regard to class schedules and exams.

"Students benefit from the program by using their classroom skills or gain valuable experience by working in a business-like atmosphere," said Batoff.

She added that many of the jobs in the work-study program involve "career related duties" and "all the jobs are real jobs with real responsibilities."

The department employing the student benefits by receiving a dependable and convenient source of labor, she said.

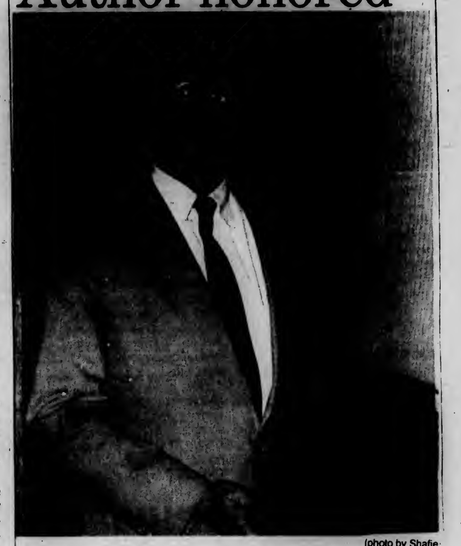
According to the Work-Study Handbook, jobs are available to undergraduates, graduate students and law students for the summer and during the academic year. Batoff said the on-campus jobs are "very diverse" and include library work, office work and working with the Athletics' office. Work-study also involves proctors, tutors, lab research and computer assistants.

The off-campus jobs include employment at various federal and state law offices, the Medical Examiner's office, hospitals and libraries. "In the past, these positions have been filled by graduate and law students but are also open to undergraduates," said Batoff.

Rezoning sought for west campus

(Continued from page 5)

throughout the process."



Martin added that every time the University moves on to a new step in the planning process, it contacts the neighbors and presents the plans to them. He added that the University is "integrating their suggestions [and] input into the plan."

University and local representatives meet approximately once a month, depending on the amount of new information to be discussed, according to Martin.

All decisions regarding the development of west campus are determined by the University president and the Board of Trustees, according to Martin. Martin also said that decisions governing if, when and how buildings will be constructed are primarily financial decisions.

Martin called the Covenant III fundraising campaign "a general name now for the fundraising of the whole master plan" of the University as well as other University expenditures.

Author honored

(photo by Shafie)

Tom Clancy, author of "Red Dawn Rising," received an award of appreciation from the NROTC for his visit to campus this week.

Fraternity critique

(Continued from page 5)

was unconscious, the other made a scene at the hospital when the staff tried to take a blood test.

"Even if the students are cooperative, the condition that they see our students in is a bad reflection on the school," he explained.

"Then to compound it, to have people there who are trying to help someone be received and treated that poorly is more of a sore spot and ... it's embarrassing," he said.

Stack continued, "It's embarrassing because they [the students] are there for things they need not to be there for ... they were there because they drank too much ... they end up abusing the hospital staff, who are there for real emergencies, not for little kids who can't control the way they drink alcohol.

"Every year there is a turnover of students, and I think that it's important that we're making some effort to try to educate students as to how serious the alcohol problem is.

"It's sort of an expectation that people, when they come away to college, will be able to drink as much as they want without having to be accountable to anyone, and it's sort of what they think college is all about," explained Stack.

"College is about learning, growing up; it's not about becoming an alcoholic," said Stack.

527-4330
FAST FREE DELIVERY!!
WITH $6.00 MINIMUM ORDER
LA NOVA PIZZA COMPANY
789 Lancaster Ave. • Villanova, PA
Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 11 a.m.-1 a.m. • Fri. & Sat. 11 a.m.-3 a.m.
Owned and operated by Vincent Amendola, former owner of Vincent's Pizza in Overbrook
Considered the best Pizzeria in West Philadelphia
NOW HIRING

PIZZA	Large	Medium	Small
Cheese	6.15	4.75	3.75
Pepperoni	7.45	5.75	4.55
Mushrooms	7.45	5.75	4.55
Sausage	7.45	5.75	4.55
Ground Beef	7.45	5.75	4.55
Green Peppers	7.45	5.75	4.55
Onions	7.45	5.75	4.55
Anchovies	7.45	5.75	4.55
2nd topping	1.10	.80	.65
3rd topping	.90	.60	.50
Special	10.50	8.50	7.30
White Pizza w/ch.	6.15	4.75	3.75
Broccoli Cheese	7.45	5.75	4.55

Stromboli	Lg.	Sm.
Italian	8.85	5.75
Pepperoni	7.50	5.00

Sicilian
(one size only)
$10.50
Steaks Available Soon!!

HOAGIES

ITALIAN SPECIAL	3.30
(imported ham, genoa salami, capicolla, provolone cheese and prosciutto, topped with pure olive oil and spices)
ITALIAN HOAGIE	2.95
HAM & CHEESE	2.80
PROVOLONE & SALAMI	2.80
TUNA	3.10
TURKEY	3.30
ROAST BEEF	3.60
CHEESE	2.60

(All our meats are delicatessen quality!) Sandwiches also available HOT!!
Tax is not included

WITH THIS COUPON
$1.50 OFF
SICILIAN PIZZA!

MONDAY & WEDNESDAY
With this Ceupon
Buy 1 pizza any size
Get 2 toppings for the price of 1!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

TUESDAY & THURSDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 large pizza
get two 16oz. sodas FREE!!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

FRIDAY, SATURDAY & SUNDAY
Buy a large pizza
with one topping
Get one FREE liter of soda
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

GRADUATION!!
THEN WHAT??
Use that excellent Liberal Arts education as the perfect stepping stone to a career in education!
PENN
UNIVERSITY of PENNSYLVANIA
Job opportunities have never been better in:
Elementary & Secondary Teaching
School and College Administration
Language and Literacy Programs
Counseling & School Psychology
Educational Planning and Research
For detailed information, clip and mail to: Admissions Office, Graduate School of Education, University of Pennsylvania, 3700 Walnut Street, Philadelphia, PA 19104-6216.
Name _____ Send general information ☐
Address _____ Send program information on _____

PEC report may have impact on University

(Continued from page 1)

Armenti. They include:
— "academic space"
— "perceived and real differences between our stated mission and daily practice"
— "the intellectual climate on campus"
— "perceived problems with a number of our graduate programs"
— "the need to further explicate the proper balance between graduate and undergraduate education"
— "the need to further define the proper role of scholarship and research in relation to teaching"

The PEC list of University strengths include:
— "our unique mission"
— "the high quality of our faculty [and] . . . our undergraduate students"
— "the ability, loyalty and dedication of our staff"
— "the excellence of virtually all undergraduate programs"
— "the University's location and image"

The PEC's praise of the University's graduate program was qualified. The committee cited the excellence of only "a number" of the graduate programs, as opposed to its praise of "virtually all" the undergraduate programs.

The final report is composed of 324 recommendations, including 302 related to specific programs and 22 general ones. The 22 general recommendations include some of the more significant ones, which will "require the Board of Trustees' attention," said Armenti.

The main issue which the report addresses is the University's academic programs, said Armenti.

PEC background

The PEC based its final evaluations partially on reports written by outside evaluators, such as Dr. Arthur Shriberg of Xavier University, who wrote a report on Student Life.

Also, leaders and directors of University programs described their program goals to the PEC, according to Armenti.

The PEC met 78 times since it began discussions in February 1986. Twenty of the meetings were six hours long and 30 of them were three and one-half hours long, according to Armenti.

The members of the PEC include Dr. Wayne Bremser, accounting professor; the Rev. Donald Burt, O.S.A., philosophy professor; the Rev. Edmund Dobbin, O.S.A., who became the assistant to the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences in September; Robert Garbarino, one of the deans of the Law School; Dr. Edward Guinan, astronomy professor; the Rev. John Hagen, O.S.A., English professor; Dr. Michael C. Kelly, chemical engineering professor; Dr. Dennis Kuhn of the masters of business administration program; Dr. Joyce Longman, mathematical science professor; Jean Maurer, nursing professor; William McNichol, civil engineering professor; Dr. Bernard Prusak, religious studies professor; Dr. Bernard Reilly, history professor; and Dr. John Wojcik, chemistry professor.

The PEC members were charged by Driscoll to employ strategic planning in making their "resource allocation recommendations," according to a PEC newsletter.

The planning involved considering "the major external forces . . . that will shape and define the environment in which the University will operate over the next five years" and evaluating those forces' "likely impact . . . on Villanova over the next five years in the context of both opportunity and constraint," according to the newsletter.

Also, the PEC considered the University's internal strengths and weaknesses as well as the personal values of the University in the context of the Mission Statement, according to Armenti.

The PEC was also required to follow a "fixed pie" mandate, which required that if any programs were to gain a larger portion of the University's resources, others' portions would be reduced, according to Armenti.

The University Senate will meet to make a resolution concerning the PEC's final report April 29.

GENERAL FINDINGS OF THE PEC STUDY

STRENGTHS

1. Our unique mission
2. The high quality of our faculty
3. The high quality of our undergraduate students
4. The ability, loyalty and dedication of our staff
5. The excellence of virtually all undergraduate programs
6. The excellence of a number of our graduate programs
7. The University's location and image

CONCERNS

1. Academic space
2. Perceived problems with a number of our graduate programs
3. Perceived and real differences between our stated mission and daily practice
4. The need to further define the proper role of scholarship and research in relation to teaching
5. The need to further explicate the proper balance between graduate and undergraduate education
6. The intellectual climate on campus

English seminar planned

By CHRISTINE E. ATKINS
Staff Reporter

The English department will be presenting a professional career seminar April 20 at 3:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center Cinema.

In an effort to enlighten students on the numerous career and academic options available to the graduate with an English major, a panel of four Villanova graduates with English majors from past years will present their post-graduate choices and direction.

According to Professor June Lytel-Murphy, Villanova students with English majors, minors and all interested students may equally benefit from this opportunity to meet and talk with those who have tasted life beyond academia in a question-and-answer period which will follow the presentations.

The guests speaking will be four professionals, including Willaim J. Jones '57, who is presently assistant manager of public information division at Philadelphia Electric Company; and Herbert Aspbury '67, the executive vice president for Manufacturers Hanover Trust; Kathleen Rowe McKee '75, vice president of marketing for Edward S. Gordon Commercial Real Estate; and Jane Ackerman Schappert '77, the regional manager for the Southeastern United States division of Xerox Corporation.

In addition to the conference, the speakers will also visit some classes for the purpose of a more personal student-alumni exchange.

Lytel-Murphy said that there exists a widely held misconception that an English major is only for the individual who wishes to teach English. Yet in reality, their firm grasp of the language makes them especially sought after in the job market in fields of communications, politics, banking and medicine, among numerous others.

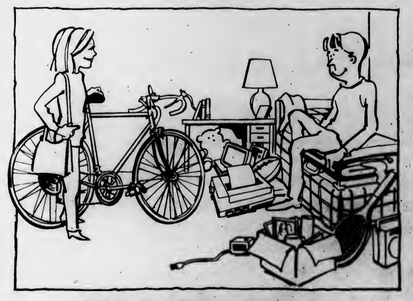
The panel itself reflects a sample of the divergent paths the graduate with an English major will pursue. According to Lytel-Murphy, she and other faculty in the department would like to see similar conferences held in the future, in the hope of quelling some doubts about the major itself and shedding a new light upon its depth.

Professor dies

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

Dr. Joseph L. Lucia, a professor of economics at Villanova, died April 8 at Bryn Mawr Hospital. He was 55.

Lucia was raised in the Tacony section of Philadelphia. A graduate of Temple University, he did graduate work at the University of Pennsylvania's Wharton School of Business.



He came to Villanova in 1957 and was active in several University committees. He was also involved in the Economics Society and the Italian-American Club.

Lucia was also a disabled veteran who fought in the Army during the Korean War.

A resident of Rosemont, he is survived by his wife, Ida; a son, Joseph, Jr.; two daughters, Rose Marie and Gina Marie; a brother, Michael; a sister, Mary Dambro; and three grandchildren.

His funeral mass was held Tuesday at the Main Chapel and he was buried in Calvary Cemetery in West Conshohocken.

Students

When it's time to pack up and go home...

We can help!

Getting your stuff home doesn't have to be a hassle. We'll pack and ship it all home for you. From bicycles to computers—shipping small loads is our specialty. Or pack it yourself. We offer a complete line of professional packaging supplies—from filler and tape to just the right size boxes. Call us now and your stuff will be home before you are!

- Custom crating and packing
- Shipping from 1 to 1,000 pounds—including overnight delivery.
- Insurance to $50,000
- Pick-up service
- Packaging supplies—boxes, tape, foam

CALL FOR INFO: 543-4281

Olde Sprout Shopping Village
1166 Baltimore Pike
Springfield, PA 19064

Packing and shipping and a whole lot more.

You'll get first hand experience in the courtroom right from the start. In three years, you could handle more than 3,000 cases in a wide variety of subjects from international to contracts to criminal law. If you think you have what it takes to be a Marine Corps Officer and lawyer, talk with the Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer when he visits your campus.

Have 190,000 clients from the start.

More than 190,000 Marines could use your service.

We're looking for a few good men.

Physicist interviewed

(Continued from page 3)

figures are accurate, but I understand that a Stinger costs $50,000, and that we have given the Afghans a thousand Stingers. Now here we have an invasion due to which three million people fled. And we managed to stop it within an expenditure of $50 million. That is a measure of what defense, properly applied, may be able to do.

What has your role been in developing nuclear energy that is not defense-related?

I had a few little inputs. For instance, in 1984, I became the chairman of the First Advisory Committee on Nuclear Safeguards. I had been very much interested in the safety of nuclear reactors.

Do you think that fusion is a possibility in the 20th century?

Essentially, no. Fusion has mistakenly been over-emphasized. I believe that the best hope is a hybrid reactor where 1 or 2 percent comes from fusion and the rest from fission.

What is your answer to reports of plant workers sleeping on the job and taking drugs?

To my knowledge nuclear plants are not the cause of nuclear accidents, people are. Throw out the humans.

There is, for instance, a specific plan to improve the system at Peachbottom which is completely automated, is underground, and in which humans play no role except if the reactor gets into trouble and shuts itself down. Then authorized experts specifically selected can go there and won't fall asleep. Humans are the Achilles' heel and are not needed.

What was the nature of your conflict with Oppenheimer?

Two eminent people have been hurt badly and probably unjustly, for the same shortcoming. One was Robert Oppenheimer, the other was Richard Nixon. Both worked very well. Both deviated in a very clear and obvious way from the truth in a public situation. And in both cases this had personal consequences which I believe were even more harsh in the case of President Nixon.

What is your prediction for the future of science and technology in the U.S. and the role that they can play?

I have heard a lot of complaints that most of our really first-class graduate students are foreigners. I think, that as a sign of a bigger transition, that our young people don't take enough advantage of the greater possibilities.

I think also that this is an advantage because many of these foreigners will stay here and become Americans, and many others will go home and will work with us wherever they go.

Teller speaks

By DANIEL MORIARTY
Staff Reporter

Renowned physicist Dr. Edward Teller gave a lecture titled "The Energy Evolution" Monday at 7:30 p.m. in the Villanova Room of the Connelly Center.

Approximately 500 people attended the lecture, which was sponsored by the physics department in conjunction with the Energy Advisory Council of the Philadelphia Electric Company to commemorate the department's 50th anniversary.

Welcoming remarks were delivered by the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, and professor Miro Todorovitch, executive director of Scientists and Engineers for Secure Energy.

Teller, who was born in Hungary in 1908, studied in Europe and came to America in time to join the famous Manhattan Project, which created the first atomic bomb.

Teller lectured for an hour on the growing necessity for safe nuclear energy as an alternative to fossil fuels and solar energy as well as on the connection between technology and peace.

He called for an increase in defensive weapons such as the Strategic Defense Initiative [SDI] and a simultaneous decrease of offensive weapons.

In his discourse on safe nuclear energy, Teller advocated small nuclear plants which could be built underground and be made completely automatic, thus eliminating human error.

He commented that the Nuclear Regulatory Commission [NRC] "ought to be abolished" because, for instance, their licensing procedure is "clumsy" and "not cost-effective."

In drawing the connection between technology and peace, Teller stressed the need for a bipartisan foreign policy if the available technology is to effectively promote world peace.

New chairpersons appointed

By LYNN PERDEK
Staff Reporter

Five academic departments will have new chairpersons beginning in the 1988 fall semester, according to Dr. Charles L. Cherry, associate vice president for Academic Affairs.

The department chairpersons are recommended by inter-departmental committees and are selected by the dean of the corresponding school, according to the faculty regulations manual.

Dr. Charles H. Helmetag, chairperson of the modern languages department, will be resigning at the end of this year after 15 years as department chairperson. Helmetag said that he will remain with the modern languages department as a German professor.

Dr. Estrella B. Ogden, a Spanish professor at Villanova since 1980, was named as the new chairperson of the modern languages department.

The mechanical engineering department is in the process of selecting a new chairperson. The current chairperson, Dr. Edward V. McAssey, is stepping down after this year. According to Cherry, no replacement has yet been named to fill the position.

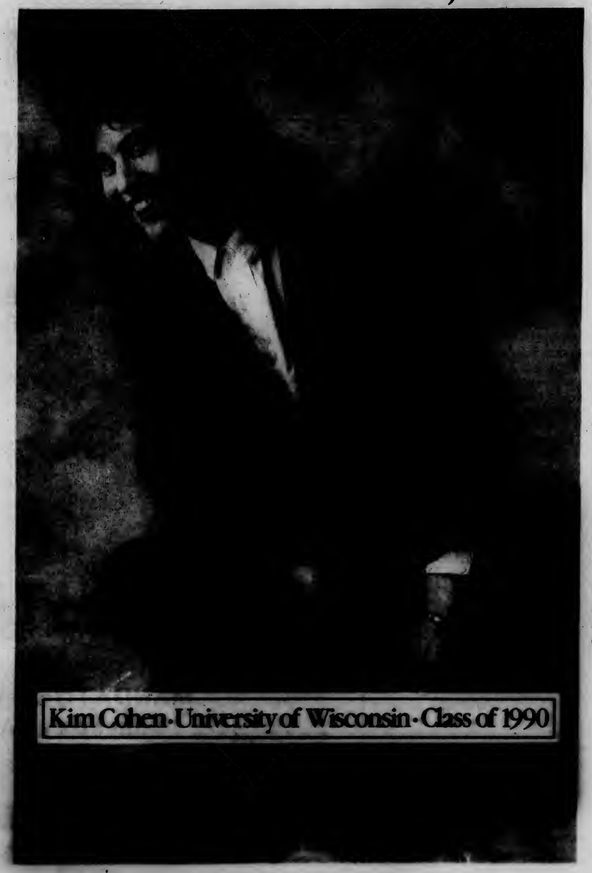
Recently, Dr. John J. Schrems was named chairperson-elect of the political science department, and will replace Dr. Priscilla G. Hopkirk, who has been chairperson for 10 years. Schrems has been part of the faculty since 1965. Hopkirk will continue as a University political science professor.

The chemical engineering department has named Dr. Michael C. Kelly as the new department chairperson. Kelly has taught at Villanova for 19 years. Dr. Robert F. Sweeny, chairperson of the department for the past five years, said that he will be resigning at the end of this year.

Also resigning as chairperson at the end of this year is Dr. George T. Radan, chairperson of the art and art history department. According to Cherry, no official replacement has been named yet.

Another recent change in department chairpersons occurred this past January. Dr. Gerald Long replaced Dr. Daniel J. Ziegler as chairperson of the psychology department. Ziegler became the new graduate school dean in September.

Georgetown gays settle



By College Press Service

A bitter, eight-year struggle that could affect gay students at private colleges around the country ended March 29 in a draw.

In a court compromise, gay students at private Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., won the right to use campus facilities while Georgetown officials — who had claimed sanctioning a gay group on campus would violate the school's Catholic principles — did not have to grant official recognition to the students.

The compromise — concocted in December and made official last week — also lets Georgetown get about $127 million in public funds, which District of Columbia officials had been withholding because Georgetown, by refusing to recognize the gay student group, was violating a district law banning discrimination on the basis of sexual orientation.

"No matter how bad they are, Grandma loves to hear the latest jokes."

Kim Cohen · University of Wisconsin · Class of 1990

You miss her sparkling sense of humor. She misses you and your jokes. Even the bad ones. That's one good reason to call long distance. AT&T Long Distance Service is another good reason. Because it costs less than you think to hear your grandmother start to giggle before you even get to the punch line.

So whenever you miss her laughter, bring a smile to her face with AT&T. Reach out and touch someone.®

If you'd like to know more about AT&T products and services, like the AT&T Card, call us at 1 800 222-0300.

AT&T
The right choice.

Enrollment

(Continued from page 5)

upperclassmen will be on campus in the new dormitories, Neville responded.

Murray added that while the freshman class may be increased by 50 students, the overall total undergraduate enrollment will be decreased by 80 students.

In regards to the issue of trust in University relations, Neville commented that "We try to give them all the information we can. However, Murray isn't always dealing with the public, and he and his department made that decision."

Brach said that it was "implied" that the administration would not raise enrollment. "It was implied by [the Rev. John M.] Driscoll, [University president] himself, when he spoke to the Senate that enrollment would be maintained or perhaps reduced. It has also been implied by various members of the administration in several public forums, such as township meetings," Brach noted.

Brach commented that "this prove a point — we've become a school that will accept students who can afford to come here."

Levinthal

(Continued from page 3)

Realizing the potential destructibility of a hydrogen bomb, Enrico Fermi and other renowned scientists pleaded to halt all research on this project. Dr. Edward Teller, a major opponent to Fermi's view, strongly advocated research. Work did ensue, yielding the contested weapon.

The paranoia on both the Soviet and American sides during this development of nuclear armament has been building up through the present day. Levinthal summarized, "nuclear bombs and nuclear weapons have only one purpose, to prevent the other guy from using his."

He gauged that though the United States has made the significant developments, the Soviets tend to catch up within four years. The problem which this leads to is "a new level of vulnerability." With the increase in weapons, Levinthal pointed out, there are clearly more opportunities to make misjudgments. Hence, "We [the U.S.] are not very secure, nor are the Russians."

He spoke at some length on the Strategic Defense Initiative [S.D.I.], explaining Reagan's firm stand on the issue as ultimately derivable to clever arguments by Teller. Levinthal decried S.D.I., claiming that virtually everyone in the scientific community realizes that it, with present technology, is not possible and refuses to work on it. "The claims for 'Star Wars' are grossly exaggerated," he said.

Levinthal said he believes that the only solution for the future is not to allow testing of new missiles or bombs. Such an agreement would apparently be kept, for "you can't test a missile [or bomb] without it being easily detected by both sides."

Harassment

(Continued from page 3)

first part of the problem is "people do not know what sexual harassment is," he said.

Dr. Barbara Wall, O.P., philosophy professor and committee member, agreed, saying, "Most cases of sexual harassment [in general] are due to ignorance and insensitivity, rather than to malicious, deliberate discrimination."

Another part of the problem is that without an official policy, people who are having a problem with sexual harassment do not know where to go for help, said Immerwahr.

"Without a policy, people are extremely vulnerable," said Desmond, who included faculty, students and staff among the potential victims.

"[They are] vulnerable because harassment often involves misuse of power," said Desmond. She cited examples, saying that students are potentially vulnerable because faculty have more power, and that staff are vulnerable to the power of their supervisor.

Desmond said that harassed students are able to go to the office of Student Life, where a "whole hearing vehicle [is] available" to them.

Faculty do not have the same kind of vehicle that students have, said Desmond. A faculty member who has a complaint about harassment can go to his or her chairperson, then to her dean, then to the Rev. Lawrence C. Gallen, O.S.A., vice president of Academic Affairs.

If a staff member feels he or she is being harassed, he can go to his immediate supervisor, who could be the person that is causing the problem, said Desmond. There is no other place for them to go, except for engaging legal counsel, she added.

Cherry said, "The administration has acted when it [a case of harassment] has been brought to its attention."

The Rev. Robert J. Martin, O.S.A., assistant to the president, said recently that there is a general University procedure for grievances which can be applied in cases of sexual harassment.

Immerwahr acknowledged this procedure, saying that it is a way of dealing with harassment problems and that a specific policy on harassment is "not absolutely essential" to deal with such charges.

Desmond did commend Gallen and the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president for "taking action on examples of outrageous harassment." When sufficient data were presented on these occasions, appropriate action was taken, she said.

Immerwahr said the third part of the problem concerns those who are accused of sexual harassment. "When there are no rules, there are infinite amounts of opportunity for injustice on both sides," he explained.

Alleviating the problem

While Wall said that the problem of sexual harassment was not unique to Villanova, she commented, "one would hope that we would foster respect for such a policy and procedure [of sexual harassment] . . . [it] ought to be an accepted norm that all people be respected and deemed sacred. Such a policy and procedure would reinforce the values that the University has always upheld, from its Christian commitment."

Immerwahr said a policy would "emphasize the University's commitment to creating an environment where men and women could work and study in a professional way.

"Second, it would make it easier for problems to be detected and dealt with in a confidential way, before it got out of hand," he said. A policy would also "protect the rights of the alleged victims and alleged perpetrators of sexual harassment," added Immerwahr.

Wall said a policy and procedure should be part of an educational process which aids in "creating an environment that is open and accepting of differences," rather than a punitive measure.

Cherry said an official University policy would be "an expression of concern." He added that another factor in correcting the problem might be that individuals are speaking out and asserting themselves more often against harassment.

Freshman denied candidacy

By SHARON A. WATERS
Assistant News Editor

Confusion over the eligibility requirements in the election race for Senate positions resulted in freshman arts candidate Michelle Bogosian withdrawing from the race last week.

The "qualifications for election" concerning class standing state, "undergraduate students must at least be a second-semester sophomore or at least have completed as many credits at the time of the election," according to the "election laws guiding all Student Government elections" compiled by the Election Commission.

According to Mike Delzotti, election commissioner, the election commission's rules do not prohibit a freshman from running for Senate, yet the Senate constitution will not allow a sophomore to be a senator.

The Senate constitution states that the "minimum qualifications for student election to the Senate shall be junior standing for undergraduate and University College students . . . "

Delzotti said, "I was advised by Student Government that the chances were good of it [the rule] being changed."

He said that he made it clear at a preliminary meeting of possible candidates that Student Government was trying to change the constitution rule so that sophomores could be senators, but there was still a possibility that a freshman could run, be elected and not be allowed to serve the office.

Delzotti said he "made no guarantees" and that if a freshman ran, he or she would serve as "an example" if elected that the student body supported having sophomore senators.

Bogosian, however, was apparently under the impression that the rule would be changed. She said, "Why would I bother running for something if I wasn't guaranteed [of being able to hold the office]?"

Student Government president Phil Brach said he did encourage freshman to run for senator because "I figured the easiest way to change the rules was to elect someone" to help prove the point.

He added that he "wanted to force them [the rules and review committee] to make an immediate decision."

Brach said he did not follow the normal procedure for getting the rule changed because he did not have enough time.

Feeling that some freshmen are more than qualified to be senator, Brach said he was "trying to build an argument that freshmen should be able to run" and the fact that a freshman was running helped his argument.

Saying that the Election Commission made it "as clear as possible that there was no guarantee," Brach concluded, "I don't think we [Student Government] misled Michelle."

Bogosian, who got the required number of signatures in order to be an official candidate and who had already made up her buttons and posters, was supposed to be reimbursed by Student Government for the money she spent on her campaign and the $6 fee she had to pay to be a candidate, according to Brach.

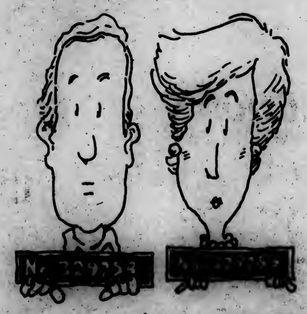
Phyllis Downs, a junior who attended the preliminary meeting, said, "He [Delzotti] made it clear that it [freshmen running for Senate] was against the rules." She added, however, that he encouraged freshmen to run and gave the impression that if freshmen ran, the rule had a very good chance of being changed.

She added that Delzotti was "vague" and the "impression was that freshmen could run but obviously you're [a candidate] running with the intention of winning and taking office."

She did not remember Delzotti specifically saying that a freshman not be able to serve if he or she won.

THE BROTHERS OF LAMBDA CHI ALPHA AND THE CENTER FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD SERVICES, INC. WOULD LIKE TO THANK THE FOLLOWING FOR THEIR HELPFUL SUPPORT AND DONATIONS FOR THE "BATTLE OF THE BANDS" HELD ON SAT. MARCH 26th.

The Sisters of Alpha Phi



Borden Snacks, Inc.	Food Fantasies, Inc.	Arqus Printing
Vintage Cola	Zips Toys To Go	Minellas Diner
Idol Maker Hair Salon	The Compact Disc Store	Copy Time Printing
Pie In The Sky	Special Occasion	Confections
The Photo Center	Rosemont Beverage Center	Goldsmith Jewelers
Children's Wear	Main Line Trophies, Inc.	Peche Mignon
Flowers On The Avenue	Cosmetique LaMoor	Ellen M. Drennon
Bryn Mawr Fur Salon	Chinese Kitchen	Bywood Sea Food Market
Sandy DeMaio	Harrison's Dept. Store	Salon 20
Flowers By Bill	Wine Hobby USA & Cheese Alley

THANK YOU FOR YOUR SUPPORT. IT WAS A GREAT SUCCESS!! WITH YOUR HELP WE WERE ABLE TO RAISE OVER $1500 FOR THE CENTER FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD SERVICES.

WANTED

FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, JUNIORS

Interested In Helping Out With SENIOR WEEK AND COMMENCEMENT

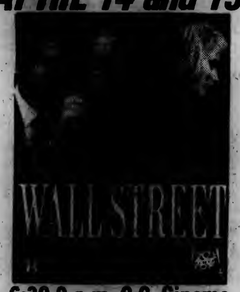
MANDATORY MEETING
Thursday, April 28
5:30 pm CC Cinema

Sign Up In Advance In The Union Office

THE UNION PRESENTS. . .

SPRING FEVER WEEK!

All Events Inside and Outside Connelly Center



April 18
10 a.m.-3 p.m.
Star Tracks!
Make Your Own Recording!
Computer Pictures
Give Yours To Someone Special!
Reptile World
Bring The Whole Family!
12-1:30 p.m.

April 19
Balloon Day
Sponsored By Campus Ministry
Live at the Terrace
Tier 7
7-9 p.m.

April 20
12-3 p.m.
Magician
Could He Make Finals Disappear?
Ice Cream Giveaway
Yes, it is Free!
Antique Carousel Organ
Bring your own Monkey
10-2 p.m.
Cut Flower Sale
Brighten Your Room!
7:30 p.m.
Spring Fashion Show
Featuring
ACA Joe Eddie Bauer
Bloomingdale's

APRIL 14 and 15

6:30-9 p.m. C.C. Cinema
Tickets $2
FATAL ATTRACTION has been rescheduled for
May 1
April 21, 22
Full Metal Jacket

Cultural Film Series presents

7 P.M. [illegible] AND 7 P.M.

Villanova's Hot New Nightclub

Cat's Den

Featuring: 'Picture This'
April 16 8-12 p.m.
Villanova Rm.
$1 w/V.U. I.D.
$2 w/out V.U. I.D.

CHAIRPEOPLE NEEDED!
FOR
Sibling Weekend
APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE IN THE STUDENT UNION OFFICE
Applications Due April 20
and
Spring Break 1989
APPLICATIONS AVAILABLE IN THE STUDENT UNION OFFICE
Applications Due April 22

Spring Break '88 Security Deposits For Cancun and Jamaica must be picked up in Union Office as soon as possible!

Delaware Community College Chorus
April 17
7:30 p.m.
St. Mary's Chapel
Free Admission

the Villanovan

201 Dougherty Hall
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa. 19085

Johanne C. Sharp
Editor in Chief

Janet Diefenbach
Managing Editor

Natalie McKenna
Associate Editor

Must we hire babysitters?

This year's student elections looked very promising, as we had two very qualified and competent candidates running for Student Government president. Unfortunately, some disturbing and appalling events have clouded this vision, and now we are forced like children who misbehaved to await our reprimand by the administration.

The unethical actions and mudslingings between the two campaigns raise serious questions about the leadership abilities of both Terise Fusco and Sean Closkey.

Both candidates used the Villanovan as a device to manipulate their campaigns. It angers and offends us that Closkey used the Villanovan's Election Extra of April 12 as campaign material. He utilized his endorsement for his own means by distributing and urging passersby to "Vote for Sean Closkey."

We are completely outraged at Fusco's unjust and blantant disregard for freedom of the press and freedom of speech. She obstructed the rights of students by attempting to dispose of over 1,000 copies of the issue before the student body had the chance or opportunity to read it.

The Villanovan has the right to publish an editorial expressing the opinions of the Editorial Board. The Villanovan realizes its vital impact upon the Villanova community as we are the sole student newspaper.

Because we did not previously schedule an issue after Easter and before the election, we published an additional issue. We felt an obligation to inform the students about the debates and to present objective interviews about each of the candidates. It is unfortunate that the calendar and time restraints forced us to publish our issue on election day without adequate opportunity for response. It was beyond our control and in no way a malicious intent to discredit a candidate's campaign.

We made an intelligent decision and we back our endorsement of Sean Closkey.

The Villanovan has completed its role in the election with our endorsement and now we continue as an objective and impartial news source. However the election concludes, we hope the vital link between the Villanovan and Student Government will continue in order to achieve our primary purpose — to inform the students.

Let's not let our opposing views stifle progress.

Protest a success

We applaud the initiative on both parts of student senators and students attending the March 25 Senate meeting. Almost 200 students united together to voice their concerns on the proposed tuition increase as well as the future of Villanova. Student senators John Lewis and Phil Brach led the thrust to defeat the budget and focused on the issues of financial aid, Villanova's image and reputation and the Senate budget process.

The effort was not purely selfish on the part of the students, for they did not simply wish to defeat on the basis of the tuition increase, but on the premise that Villanova would lose its academic, social and economic diversity and become an "academic haven for the wealthy," if the budget passed.

It was uplifting to see a room, so often empty, filled with concerned students armed with posters and vocal with loud rounds of applause.

Unfortunately, the budget slimly passed by a vote of 17-16, which is a surprising and encouraging outcome.

Even more sad is the fact that the budget could have been defeated if the two unexcused student senators were present. Robert Brancatella and Mark Wible showed blatant disregard of their duties when they failed to attend the meeting.

Sadly, as apathy finally shows signs of diminishing at Villanova, two student representatives only reinforce it.

Letters to the Editor

Fusco offends minorities

To the Editor:

This letter is in response to Terise Fusco's comments in the election extra issue of the Villanovan of April 12. Fusco addresses the issue of minority recruitment in what I feel is a most racist manner.

Fusco refers to minorities as a portion of society Villanova needs to reach. I agree. But Fusco's reasons for supporting minority recruitment are highly offensive to me as a black student and a proud, lifetime member of one of the "minority" groups she includes in her comments.

Fusco said that "if we don't provide them [minorities] with financial aid, they will not be educated so later on we're going to have to pay for them through welfare."

Fusco — I can assure you that I am not a burden to this society or to the University. Furthermore, blacks and other minorities have paid their dues and earned a respectable place in this and other nations. Do all minorities not work? Are there no non-minority members of our society who live off of public assistance?

Perhaps, Fusco, your intentions for discussing minority recruitment were noble. But your quotations come off to me, a black student at Villanova, as discriminating, racist, small-minded and uninformed.

Granted, there are minorities who do not support themselves as they should. But there are non-minorities who also choose to needlessly "burden" society and therefore Villanova. Not all of us minorities, blacks in particular, are here on "free-rides" for whatever reason. Our parents, relatives and friends work at jobs just as I am sure your associates do.

But this issue goes beyond that. The real issue in question and controversy is your usage of the term "burden." Just whom do you define as a "burden" to a society and who gave you the right to mandate such a definition? Is the high school football star who breaks his leg during his first college season a "burden" to his team and university or does he still deserve his promised college education? Are all the minorities of the world lumped together as a useless mass of unwanted waste and deemed "burdens to society?"

Fusco, in the future, it would be wise for you not to generalize. The use of assumptions, political jargon and generalizations quite often result in angry, resentful, clarifying letters like this one.

Cynthia C. Glover
Class of 1990

EDITORS
News: Noel E. Falco, Dante J. Scala
Features: R. Michael Bullotta, Susan E. Corcoran
Entertainment: Kathryn Quigley
Sports: John Ricco, Doug Scancarella

ASSISTANT EDITORS
News: Kevin C. Heil, Jennifer Reidy, Sharon A. Waters
Features: Jacqueline Gentile
Entertainment: Allen Ambrosino, Jeff Gillies
Sports: Jim Bowman, John F. Swift
Managing Editor: Andrea LoCascio

Layout Director: Eileen McGinley
Art Editor: Andrew Bullion
Interns: Cynthia B. Boanian, Kathleen Reichner
Photography: Dana Shafie
Greek Page: Jill DeForte, Steve DelDuco
Advertising Director: Jim Duffy
Subscriptions/Billing: Pam Salter
F.Y.I. Coordinator: Colette Mitchell
Personals/Classified: Paul Iacovoni
Advisor: June W. Lytel-Murphy

Staff: Richard Abraham, Michael Aimette, Lucinda Alfieri, John Baker, Karla Beckner, Tom Brugger, Monica Byrne, Diane P. Carman, Bill Carr, Russ Ceccola, Mary E. Charest, John Chepega, Diane A. Cillone, Andrea Cinelli, Joanne L. Conrad, Wayne Creskill, Jim Crossan, Steve D'Angelo, Tim Daniels, Joe DeFulvio, Michael Denison, G.J. Donnelly, Diane Dragonetta, Bob Duggan, Chris Elgen, Kristen Fallan, Paul Fratamico, Debbie Gross, Kevin A. Hecht, Karen Iovino, Luci Jankowski, Michael Jones, Theresa Jones, Bridget Kellecher, Terry Kelly, Barbara Kresch, Irene V. Langran, Jackie Lanza, Andrew Mathis, Dave Maylish, Elliott McEldowney, Joe McGowan, Carolyn Mirabile, Steve Montresor, Coleen Moore, Dan Moriarty, Sharon Neubauer, Mary O'Neill, Christopher Pepe, Stephen Powers, Dana Rao, Siobhan Roder, Kristine Ryan, Stephen J. Schlager, Michelle Shanahan, Steve Shillekki, Tara Siligato, Amy Spenser, Maureen Stapleton, Laura Stevens, Elana Rose Starr, Amgad Subougni, T. Patton Trimble, Christine A. Wnuk, MaryJo Yannacone.

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the administration, faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors.

The Villanovan is published Fridays, 10 issues a semester. Circulation: 8,500. Subscriptions are available at $17.50 per year. For advertising information contact the office 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, 215-645-7207.

The Villanovan reserves the right to refuse any ad insertions due to questionable content and space limitations. The deadline to place advertising is 12 p.m. the Tuesday prior to publication.

The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

Op-ed

Villanova student warns against UCO

By FRANK PUCCI

I would like to bring to your attention a problem of which not many Villanova students are yet aware. The problem concerns the actions of the organization United Christian Outreach (UCO). To help you understand exactly what UCO is doing wrong, let me first give you some background information about my personal ties with the organization.

Before starting college I had been warned of religious organizations that may at first seem innocent and appealing but are, deep down, merely intense cult-like clubs whose members seek out to convert others, primarily incoming freshmen.

After all, the brainwashing effects exerted upon vulnerable minds by such hypocritical figures as Sun Myung Moon, Jim Jones and television evangelists like Jerry Falwell and Oral Roberts have been shown to be very severe.

Because I feared being caught up in something like that, I was obviously skeptical about UCO when I was first introduced to it in September 1986 through a friend (we were both freshmen at the time).

From the very beginning, the only UCO-related events I attended were parties, barbecues and the like. Only on one or two occasions did I attend UCO's weekly Wednesday night prayer meeting; I never wanted to get overly involved with the organization.

Little did I know that a friend of mine had been going to meetings almost every week. Nevertheless, both the organization and its members seemed friendly and harmless for a long time.

However, one Friday night a few weeks ago I saw something that changed everything.

I was invited by my friend to Paul's Ardmore home to watch a home video titled "Rock 'n Roll: A Search for God." What I thought would be a look from a Christian perspective at how some rock stars express their spirituality through their music was actually nothing more than an inflammatory fundamentalist propaganda film.

The film shamelessly tried to associate every rock performer from Madonna and Michael Jackson to Slayer and Metal Church with Satan worship. It treated the subject with a completely one-sided fundamentalist point of view that was solely based on opinion, not fact.

As a fan of rock 'n roll, I can honestly say that there is definite, indisputable concrete evidence available to disprove at least 95 percent of the filmmakers' accusations of satanism. They somehow either forgot to mention or deliberately denied the facts; the only "proof" they had to offer was along the lines of "believe me or else."

For example, the film accused Jackson's "Thriller" video to be a celebration of the occult (and, therefore, of satanism), while at the same time they both denied Jackson's deeply Christian beliefs and stated that his anti-occult message at the beginning of the video is only a satanic cover-up.

Along with literally hundreds of opinion-based examples like this, the film included a very frightening final word: Those viewers who disagree with what was said in the film do so because Satan "wants" them to disagree with it.

In all honesty, is not this just a bold, immobilizing trap designed to scare people into becoming followers of some cult by not allowing them to even question their own better judgment of what they see and hear? This is the same trick that was used in the 1970s by Jones, who told his people, "If you deny me, you deny God!" The faithful believed his lie then; the filmmakers want the faithful to believe their lies today.

I was obviously very insulted by the production, but I was able to see right through it. After all, it was only a cult recruiting device that utilized fear as its chief weapon. However, at the time of viewing it, I was in a room full of UCO members, including my friend, who apparently believed every word of it!

I talked with my friend afterwards, and I discovered that over the past few months he had assumed a new unusually religious and narrow-minded view of life. This was not like him at all.

Since he had become so deeply involved with UCO over that period, the most certain conclusion is that he had somehow been changed by the group. If he, a big fan of rock music could accept as truth would advocate a bunch of blatant truth distortions as those put forth in "Rock 'n Roll: A Search for God," can one imagine how clever and manipulative UCO's tactics may have been toward controlling his thoughts in other more mundane gatherings? I found out almost two years later than I should have, that all of my suspicions about UCO being a fanatical recruit group were correct.

I did not write this letter to attack religion in general nor to whine about my misfortune of losing a friend to something I feared very much. I instead wish to warn Villanova students against joining organizations like UCO because of the reasons previously stated here.

I once thought my friend's common sense and emotional strength were sufficient to resist a near-brainwashed admittance into UCO, but the techniques of the group's recruiters were clever enough to circumvent them.

UCO does take part in many beneficial projects, such as aid to the homeless in Philadelphia. However, students, particularly freshmen (who are very vulnerable targets), must keep a very sharp lookout for organizations like UCO which may not be as innocent as they first appear.

In closing, I would like you to know that UCO founding member, Ed Lis, now a religion teacher at Villanova, has been showing "Rock 'n Roll: A Search for God" to his freshmen classes of Christian Theology in a Changing World. I do not know whether or not the religious studies department is aware that he is doing this, but I ask you all to please think about this for a moment.

Frank Pucci is a sophomore.

Quote of Note

There are people so addicted to exaggeration that they can't tell the truth without lying.

Josh Billings

Professor comments on V.U. lecture

By NICHOLAS B. TUFILLARO

Edward Teller, who will no doubt be remembered as the chief architect and primary advocate for the American H-bomb, delivered a set of simple messages on April 11 to a sedate Villanova audience.

Teller's messages were simple enough; first, the United States needs to build more nuclear power plants to decrease its dependence on foreign oil imports, and second, the United States should pursue both negotiated disarmaments and SDI to further world peace and American interests.

As a Catholic and an American I found Teller's talk very disturbing; not only because of Teller's message, but also because of the complacency with which the audience greeted this message.

It was an evening of appearances. Teller appeared to be a mouthpiece for Philadelphia Electric Company (PECO) as he told us that the lesson from Chernobyl was that humans should not operate nuclear reactors because humans make mistakes — thus Teller drew the conclusion that all nuclear reactors should be rully automated (but humans design nuclear reactors and their automation systems ... how many times did your computer crash last week?)

I could not help but notice that the PECO officials who were given front row seats to the talk were snoozing during the "lessons of Chernobyl" section to Teller's lecture; they woke up during the SDI portion — now, how much money will GE make from Star Wars?

But back to the appearances motif. The questions, dutifully written on 3x5 cards offered to Teller at the end of the talk, appeared to be judiciously sorted (dare I say censored) by the moderator. Lastly, the audience, in accepting both Teller's mesage and their 3x5 dialogue, appeared to tacitly accept the forum in which his message was delivered.

As I said, it was an evening of appearances. In fact, I doubt that Teller is a mouthpiece for PECO, or that the questions were censored, or that no one else felt a similar sense of viseral disgust over the evening. And yet, I have no evidence to think otherwise from what I observed Monday evening — and, at least in science, what we can not observe, we can not comment upon (clearly, not the comment of a string theorist).

Teller seemed to imply that nuclear technology could be developed as a useful energy source for the third world (an intriguing thought, given that nuclear reactors are the essential resource for making nuclear bombs, a lesson well known to Israel and Iraq), and that solar technology could not be developed as a useful energy source for the third world (how much price support does the solar industry receive?). The 3x5 cards were sorted into two or more piles by the moderator, what conclusion would you draw from this observation?

No one spoke up to substantially challenge Teller's arguments in support of nuclear weapons and nuclear energy. By speak up, I mean literally to raise one's voice to say for instance: "Mr. Teller, the U.S. Catholic bishops' letter on 'The Challenge of Peace: God's Promise and Our Response' says ..."

I feel ashamed that I did not speak up to offer Teller a genuine challenge. The organizers of Teller's visit did their best to avoid such a challenge, but I believe that Teller himself would prefer a genuine dialogue.

The luminous detail of Teller's lecture is his turn of phrase "the miserable third world" to describe the current economic condition faced by the majority of the world's population. Teller could have used the terms impoverished, unfortunate, dispossessed, exploited, hungry, malnurished or simply suffering. Yet, the word he chose to describe those who hunger most for food, peace and justice was "miserable."

Next time, why don't you get Johnathan Kozol to give a lecture. Or better yet, Kozol and Teller, so that they can meet face to face so that — as President Reagan is fond of saying — we can let the chips (nuclear ash?) fall where they may.

Nicholas B. Tufillaro is a professor in the department of physics at Bryn Mawr College.

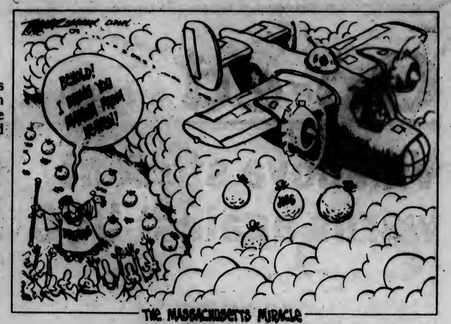
Role of the press defined

By NOEL E. FALCO and JENNIFER REIDY

Apparently there is a lack of understanding about the role of the press at Villanova (and in the country) lately. As a voice for what is going on at Villanova, the newspaper has the responsibility of printing the issues and events that concern Villanova students. If it were not for the Villanovan, sad to say, most students would not know what is going on behind closed doors.

While news stories must be factual accounts of events without the reporter's bias, editorials serve to convey an educated and insightful interpretation of this news. When the Villanovan endorsed Sean Closkey for Student Government president, in its election supplemental issue last Tuesday, the editors did not come to this decision haphazardly. Instead, they contemplated their research and information before recording their decision.

The right to freedom of speech and the press is a basic tenet of a free American society. To violate it is inexcusable. The press serves as a watchdog on government and those in power in order to protect the rights of its constituents. It is rather frightening when those who represent our government, if only on the level of student government, blatantly disregard these rights.



By disposing over a thousand copies of the Villanovan into the trash, presidential candidate Terise Fusco showed either a gross misunderstanding of or open contempt for the rights of the press and the students. The press is not a tool of the government or any one individual. If the press represents the students and its words end up in the trash, then what will Fusco do with the student body if she is unsatisfied with it?

While news stories must be factual accounts of events without the reporter's bias, editorials serve to convey an educated and insightful interpretation of this news.

Anyone who disagrees with the Villanovan's opinion has the right to write a letter to the editor voicing their own views. They do not have the right to prevent others from making their own decision on the editorial by destroying almost $200 worth of newspapers. The Villanovan does not force-feed its beliefs to its readers, who are mature and intelligent enough to reach their own decisions.

Fusco's actions angered those of us who had put such hard work into that issue. They also reinforced our belief in our endorsement. We hope that before she runs for public office, she learns the Bill of Rights and the art of diplomacy.

Noel E. Falco is a sophomore English and honors major and news editor of the Villanovan. Jennifer Reidy is a junior biology major and assistant news editor of the Villanovan.

THE MASSACHUSETTS MIRACLE

Professor probes Israeli conflict

By AMOS J. LEFFLER

I read your letter in the March 25 Villanovan concerning the injustices of the Israeli soldiers in Israel, and could not help but make some comments.

Although I might be considered prejudiced on religious grounds, I have spent considerable time in Israel during sabbatical leaves and so I speak from some experience.

It is important to understand what is taking place. This is a genuine insurrection, and so it goes far beyond normal police measures. The aim of the Palestinians taking part in these riots is to destroy the state of Israel, as they state clearly themselves.

It is in this light that the actions of the soldiers should be understood. Considering that after 15 weeks of this type of violence only a little over 100 people have died, an indication of overly brutal treatment is not apparent. Remember that several years ago in Syria there was trouble with the Moslem Brotherhood, and Assad ordered that the city of Homa be destroyed and the estimated deaths were 15,000 to 20,000. In this light the casualties are not overly high.

The view of many people both in and out of Israel is to trade peace for land. This seems like a reasonable compromise, but it is important to remember that there are many Palestinian groups whose aim, as stated clearly and categorically, is to destroy Israel.

If a settlement were reached, with those groups who would accept Israel, how do you handle the more radical groups? People might argue that the "radical" groups are small and impotent, but every Jew remembers that Hitler was put in that category and the results of that error are all too well known to be repeated.

It is for this reason that most Israelis, while eager for peace, have a deep skepticism towards any agreement that they cannot enforce themselves.

An extremely important but scarcely mentioned question is: What happens to the people in the camps in Lebanon, Jordan and Syria? If a territorial agreement were reached, would they be allowed to return? If they did, there would be standing room only, and the pressure for retaking all of the remainder of Israel would be irresistable.

As you can see the problems which need to be addressed, without even mentioning such things as Jerusalem, are almost insoluble. This is the reason that there has been no progress made over the years, despite many attempts and much effort.

Is any solution possible? If one or the other group would agree to give up all rights to the land in exchange for payment and another place to settle, the answer is yes. Otherwise the problem is probably insoluble and joins the list of many others such as Northern Ireland, Korea and the two Germanys.

Barring such a solution, can we make things at least bearable? This will not be easy, but one interesting possibility is granting the Palestinians rights to participate in the Jordanian government and to run their own local affairs.

The problem here is that most Palestinians detest King Hussein because of his policies in the West Bank between 1948 and 1967, and because of his suppression of the revolt during Black September. Also Hussein is probably reluctant to have control over these people since it would make Jordan 80 percent Palestinian instead of the present 60 percent. Possibly some larger grouping would be acceptable but nothing obvious appears here.

It is just this hopelessness that has brought on the present insurrection, and there is no reason to expect a quick solution unless maximum force is used to supress it. We have the classic irresistable force meeting the immovable object. At this point nobody can predict what will happen except that it is unlikely that things will return to the status quo.

We can only hope that some palliative will be found without the enormous amount of bloodshed that will result in any forced solution.

Amos J. Leffler is a professor in the chemistry department.

Letters to the Editor

Student defends Pi Kappa Phi

To the Editor:

In the four years that I have been reading the Villanovan, there have been a lot of articles that made me angry, but until last week's issue, I have never wanted to actually pick up a pen and write in about one of them. The article that I am talking about involved an investigation into a student who was struck crossing Lancaster Avenue while intoxicated. He was a pledge of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity at the time. Apparently the investigation was conducted under the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, since he was the only administration member quoted in the article.

Let me make it clear that I am not a member of Pi Kappa Phi. In fact, I did not get a bid when I rushed their fraternity, so I do not feel any obligation to write a letter on their behalf. Also, I have no grudge against Stack; I have never even met the man, and his office has been very helpful to me on several occasions. When I read the article for the first time, I was neither pro-fraternity nor anti-administration.

My problem is with the conclusions made, based on the circumstantial evidence presented in the article. Things are fine up until the sub-heading "Possible Cover-Up," after which Stack speculates on the motives behind the actions of Pi Kappa Phi following the accident.

From that point on, the article ceases to be a factual news story and starts to become some kind of public cross-examination, with a series of conjectures being made by Stack followed by obligatory rebuttals by Pi Kappa Phi president, Terence Dalton.

By having to answer to this back-and-forth style alone, the burden of guilt is placed on the fraternity. If Stack believes that there was a cover-up, then he has the right, if not the duty, to investigate it fully. But the place for that was in the hospital or on the campus or in his office — not on the pages of the newspaper.

And as to the facts given in the article, there was not one piece of tangible evidence present that showed a deliberate cover-up by the fraternity. Apparently, the meeting that followed the accident was a large implication of their 'guilt'; the fact that they all told similar recollections of the same event is construed as an indication that they were lying. As further proof against them, Stack noted that some of the brothers were concerned about repercussions against the fraternity while at the hospital.

Now there's an open-and-shut case if I have ever heard one.

I do not want to sound naive. Maybe the fraternity did cover something up. But there are proper guidelines and procedures to find that out. Stack is even quoted as saying that the appearance of the meeting was so that the brothers "would all be singing the same tune." That sounds like something you would hear on television.

I fully support any efforts by the school to investigate incidents involving its students, but only when they are made at the right place and in the proper manner. Otherwise, there is the danger that it could lead to members of the administration suddenly sounding like Judge Wapner, accusing the students of being guilty beyond a reasonable suspicion.

Tom McPherson
Class of 1988

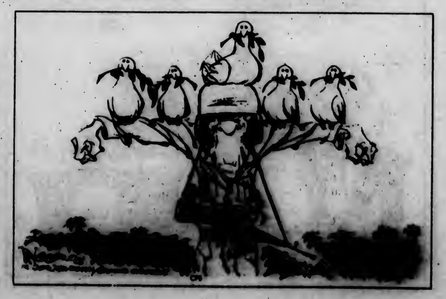
Editor's Note: The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, is certainly a qualified authoritative source on an investigation he is conducting. It is common practice of the Villanovan and all of the print media to accurately report both sides of every story, which is clearly evident in "Fraternity investigation underway" in the March 25 issue of the Villanovan.

Environmental group voices its concerns

To the Editor:

The newly-formed Villanova Environmental Group (VEG) is concerned about the effects on the environment of the balloons released on Balloon Day. Once the balloons fall back to the earth, they pose a threat both because they are not biodegradable, and because animals who play with them can be killed through suffocation or strangulation.

We understand that the Campus Ministry staff is looking into biodegradable ballons for future Balloon Days. But we also understandthat such balloons are very expensive, and they solve only part of the problem. Animals who find and play with the biodegradable balloons can be hurt as seriously as with non-biodegradable ones.



We would like to work with Campus Ministry and the Villanova community in exploring alternatives. We know that the ballons have been purchased for this year; we suggest that for this year we not release the ballons and instead donate them to Children's Hospital or some other charity. An idea for future years is to raffle off rides in a hot air balloon and be ride of the many small ballons completely.

We fully support the ideas behind Balloon Day. But we want everyone to benefit — including the animals and the environment.

The Villanova
Environmental Group

Letters policy

The Villanovan will print "Letters to the Editor" received at its offices in 201 Dougherty prior to the weekly deadline, Tuesday at 2 p.m. All letters must be typed and double spaced. The editors will withhold a name upon request, but all letters must be signed and should include the writer's telephone number. Because of limited space, not all letters can be printed. Others may be edited. Letters may be sent by mail to: the Villanovan, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. 19085.

Letters

Fusco supporter feels betrayed

To the editor:

After voting for Terise Fusco in this week's election and then discovering she had personally dumped hundreds of issues of the Villanovan election issues in dumpsters, I felt like I had just voted for Richard Nixon.

I would not have thought it conceivable for a college undergraduate to display such total arrogance and disregard for free press. Clearly, her actions prove she is too irrational and irresponsible for public office of any sort, much less one of the highest positions on campus.

Admittedly, her decision to bury the Villanovan issues was a spur-of-the-moment mistake, but if she is capable of this type of rash acting, what will she do as president?

I have a suggestion for her first action of office, if she is elected. She should start to lobby for G. Gordon Liddy to speak at 1989 graduation ceremonies. It would be only fitting, right?

Jim Bowman
Class of 1991
assistant sports editor

Students call editorial unethical

To the Editor:

We are writing concerning your editorial of April 12, endorsing Sean Closkey for president of the Student Government. We realize that it is common practice for newspapers such as the Villanovan, to endorse candidates for office prior to elections, but we have trouble agreeing with the way in which this endorsement was presented.

First, we disagree with the time at which the editorial was distributed. It may have been unethical to distribute this editorial on the day of the election. Most newspapers will print such endorsements days before an upcoming election, so as to promote discussion by the electorate before the actual election day. What the Villanovan has done was to endorse Closkey the day of the election, so as to have the "last word."

Secondly, this endorsement smacks of unethical behavior in that it attempts to "mudsling" Terise Fusco throughout the entire article. We believe that mudslinging is wrong in any account, but what makes this situation even worse is that a supposedly unbiased school newspaper has taken part in the mudslinging. We are appalled that the Villanovan would partake in such a practice. The endorsement would have been much more credible if it would have contained just positive information on why Closkey would make a good president rather than negative informationon why Fusco would not make a good presedient.

We would ask that in the future, the Villanovan would be more careful and more ethical in endorsing a specific candidate for office. Thank you for your time and attention.

David J. Dodaro
Class of 1989
Kenneth S.Kalinowski
Class of 1989
Aaron P.Anderson
Class of 1991

Artist questions work's destruction

To the Editor:

Perhaps you can understand something of the sadness and disillusion I feel over the destruction of "Awakening," the sculpture I created and donated to you Villanova students.

Compounding those troubling emotions is the confusion that besets me over the mindless barbarity which provoked the deed. Why would anyone deliberately smash a fine piece of art?

In that major marble and granite sculpture I had invested many thousands of dollars and more than 500 hours of my time in my studio in Italy over an eight-month period. My purpose in creating it was to give a new dimension to the lives of you Villanova students. I had hoped it might open your young eyes to a new world of beauty, design and expression.

I assure you that neither I nor any fair-minded person sees the deed, as representative of most Villanova University students. In fact, several of you have expressed your regrets in truly heartfelt terms.

At the moment, the perpetrators are unidentified. Whether that lunatic fringe is composed of Villanova students or others, it is unknown. But whoever they are, they have done a shameful disservice to your University and to you.

But I must say I am incredulous and deeply disappointed that witnesses to the act — and there must have been some, perhaps many — stood by and allowed it to happen. And equally disenchanting is that they have not come forward to identify those who planned and executed it. Their silence is cowardly. In a very real sense, it condones the deed. Thus, they become party to it.

It is my hope that the guilty students are soon identified. I hope I can face them one day. Not to vent my anger, which has long since given way to quiet acceptance of the incident as another harsh, perplexing reality of life.

But I want them to explain to me why. I want them to tell me their motive. I will ask them how they felt when they saw three tons of carefully crafted, 200 million-year-old marble crash to the ground around them and dissolve into nondescript rubble.

I am sure you, too, want to know why. But until the who is found, no one will ever know why. Will you help?

Jay Dugan

Paper ridiculed

To the Editor:

Stupendous waste of time, effort, and money was the Vanillanovan. Not only was your attempt at satire toothless, but the piece ranks as the No. 1 work in humorlessness that I have seen in my four years here (supplanting, of course, Vanillanovans of years previous).

Here is what you can do in order to restore any respectability you might have attained prior to this publication; first, take a survey of Villanova students, using the question, "Did you find the Vanillanovan issue funny?"

This significant question will preclude any otheers, such as, "Was the issue worthwhile?" Coinciding with the publication of the survey results can be the estimated cost of publishing the work.

These exhibitions of courage may uncover a tremendous (and traditional) waste of student funds, but it may also make amends for an effort that has undermined the integrity of our college newspaper.

Michael Mannix
Class of 1988

Dukakis supported

To the Editor:

Daniel Kelliher's op-ed piece on Michael Dukakis was an unfair attack on Dukakis's character and incorrect in fact.

It is true that Governor King laid much of the groundwork for Massachusetts' economic recovery. But Dukakis was the man to put the state's revenue to use in programs for the handicapped, unemployed and higher education.

If an "ultra-liberal" is a person who assists those who obviously need helpo to maintain their livelihood, then I am all for that person. I will put any label you want on that person as long as their policies benefit their constituents.

Regarding the furlough program for prisoners, Kelliher took one sensational case and criticized a generally successful program based on that case. And the program was enacted by the Massachusetts state legislature, not Dukakis. The representatives of the voters in Massachusetts should be held accountable if you want to blame someone for one isolated case.

Josh Foley
Class of 1989

"Awakening" vandalism probed

To the Editor:

March 26 was truly a sad day for the Villanova University community. At approximately 10 p.m. the sculpture outside the Connelly Center was severely vandalized.

The "Awakening" is the name given this creative expression by the artist, Jay Dugan, who donated the piece to the University in 1984.

In addition to the visual pleasure afforded to passersby over the years, it has served as a meeting and resting place for countless students during the middday hours.

The university community is deeply saddened, embarrassed and outraged by such a mindless attack. We express our heartfelt sympathy to Dugan, who spent untold hours conceiving and creating the beautiful and monumental work of art. Those responsible for such a wounding to the University's commonwealth have no place here as visitors to our campus not to mention as students.

The University must find a way to void itself of those who have such a lack of values and respect for University's norms. To that end I am asking your help.

Dugan is joining with the University in offering a $1,000 reward for information leading to the apprehension of the individual(s) responsible for the destruction to the "Awakening." Anyone witnessing the vandalism or having any information is asked to speak to the Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., Dean of Students, or myself. If requested, your anonymity will be respected.

If we are to continue to enjoy and benefit from our open campus, mutual regard for one another and the respect of all our publics, we cannot tolerate such willful destruction to our property and prize possessions.

Those who have any information please help our community quickly heal this wound to our reputation, self-respect and the creative expression of our benefactor, Dugan.

Dr. Richard A. Neville
Vice President for Student Life

On the Recent Desecration of a Sculpture

There on the stone table where the parted mask
Blended its division into one,
Complete emergence its appointed task,
A clue to something deeper than mere fun,
Instead was mirror to a shattered self
That envied stone, and dignity, and art;
And from the howling mob that climbed its shelf
Picked out a few to torment in the heart.
For what? A failing grade, a game of ball?
So falls the judgment on such Philistines
Who take the image out that does appall,
And riven self from self ingest the scenes
Of that grim, shattered stone, the face
So marred, and all the center twisted space.

John Sevcik

Parts of report refuted

To the Editor:

The long awaited Program Evaluation Report (PEC) is out. In the next month, pages upon pages of responses will be formulated and forwarded to the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., president of the University. As Student Government president, I receive a copy and have begun to formulate my official response. There are several areas of recommendation to which I will articulate my agreement and disagreement, but after finishing my reading of the report, one area of the recommendation bothers me so that I feel compelled to voice my concerns publicly.

The area that concerns me is the recommendations related to the Center for Peace and Justice Education (CPJE), recommendations No. 163 and No. 164. In short, the PEC recommends a "reconstitution" of the center by one, moving the academic courses into the philosophy department and two, moving the non-academic activities under Campus Ministry. On behalf of the entire student body, I strongly disagree with these recommendations and seriously question the rationale used to justify them.

The PEC admits that Peace and Justice Education is important and needed, as it is explicitly stated in the University Mission Statement. Yet they feel other places at the University are appropriate for such education. Of course other places at the University are appropriate for such education, that is what makes CPJE a "support" group.

Irish Studies could be "reconstituted" to political science and the Theology Institute to religious studies, if held to this same rationale. But they are not, because by the very nature of a "support" group there must be an academic discipline that they support.

The following support groups were called to "initiate a greater outreach to educate and raise the consciousness of University students and faculty on issues important to their institutes: "The American Institute for Pakistan Studies" and "The Institute for Arab and Islamic Studies."

I agree with this recommendation and might suggest that the above institutes look to the CPJE for guidance on how to fulfill this recommendation. How could the PEC ignore that the CPJE is the only support group that is significantly reaching out to students, faculty, administration and the community on issues important to the institute.

The PEC also suggested that CPJE courses are "easy grades." Since most of the faculty of these courses come from the philosophy and religious studies departments, I would think that such a problem would question the integrity of those departments. I cannot imagine faculty of such outstanding departments lower their standards in any course they teach.

As a final blow, the PEC describes the 2,100 square feet of space occupied by the CPJE as "excessive," and "more than many academic departments." What academic department in addition to teaching courses and sponsoring lectures also run workshops for any group on campus, teach in residence halls on a regular basis, and have a network of student groups. The 2,100 square feet (with the exception of the chapel's) is probably the most important use of space on this campus.

In closing, I cannot see how the PEC came to recommend to tear apart a support group so close to the mission of this university and so full of life.

The CPJE without question is the most successful support institution at the University today. Now is the time for students to give their input on these recommendations by writing to Driscoll, and encouraging him to reject recommendations No. 163 and No. 164.

Phillip Brach
Student Body President

Keep the sabbath

To the Editor:

On March 13, Villanova University played a basketball game which was nationally televised. Athletic events such as this game are commercial, profit-making endeavors for the television industry and the sponsors. This particular day was a Sunday.

The sabbath for the Christian community is Sunday. Speaking as a Catholic, it is my belief that by allowing the basketball team to participate in an activity which is economic and laborious, Villanova University is violating the sabbath.

At this time in the deteriorated state of our society, working on the Sunday sabbath or causing others to labor does not seem a big deal. The violation of the sixth commandment (adultery) still causes a strong moral reaction.

The third commandment states: "Keep holy the Lord's day." It is a simple and uncomplicated directive. The major theme of this commandment given by someone called God is that we are not suppose to work on the sabbath. The sabbath is set aside for rest and prayerful adoration of our Father in heaven.

The Academy Award-winning film, "Chariots of Fire," was about a Protestant young man from Scotland. The youth, Eric Liddel, was a gifted runner. Eric refused to participate in an Olympic track event (1927) because the race was scheduled on Sunday. He lost the opportunity to win a gold medal for Britain.

Later Eric Liddel became a protestant minister and worked as a missionary in China. Eric died in a prisoner-of-war camp and as the story concludes: "All of Scotland wept for him." Eric Liddel would not violate the sabbath and neither should Villanova University or any Roman Catholic college.

Violating the third commandment is not a small issue. If you do not know this, perhaps your education has not been as spiritually oriented as it should be. It is not an understatement to say that God the Father of all creation is very angry by the violation of His day — the sabbath.

Joseph Valley

Student defends Dukakis

To the Editor:

Daniel Kelliher's op-ed in the Villanovan entitled "Dukakis' credibility questioned" proves beyond doubt that there is nobody less objective than a Bay State Republican. Permanent minority status has left this breed with a penchant for disgruntled vitriol.

A neat picture of a defeated conservative emerges as Kelliher immediately blames Michael Dukakis' success on the right wing catchall-the media.

There can be no doubt that Dukakis has been the benefactor of economic circumstances in the state of Massachusetts. However the true test of economic leadership for a state governor is how he can channel the benefits of an upswing in the national economy into policies that will sustain his state in the future.

Dukakis has met this challenge with solid results. Dukakis has worked with labor and business to build an aggressive regional development program that made state resources available: To invest in road and water system construction; to finance job-producing business growth; to provide customized job training. As a result, no region of the state has an unemployment rate above the national level.

Dukakis has initiated an Education and Training Program (ET) which serves as a national model and helped move 38,000 welfare recipients from welfare to work.

This sort of innovation would go a long way in replacing the empty national coffers that the Reagan legacy will leave in its wake. Americans now realize that it is really morning in America, and Keynesian pump priming and feel-good rhetoric are not the solution to our economic woes.

Dukakis' realistic and progressive ideas make him by far the most credible presidential candidate.

Mark Cuthberson
Class of 1988
John Lewis
Class of 1989
Coordinators of Villanovans for Dukakis

Fans thanked

To the Editor:

Now that the basketball season is over, I would like to thank the basketball team for the fond memories they left me.

During the past four years the team has achieved great things, while overcoming many obstacles. Winning the National Championship during my freshman year, then going to the Big East Championship and Final Eight this year were remarkable.

Being involved with the basketball program was a great experience. I would like to thank the basketball office, the ticket office, the athletic department and the fans for all the help and support they have given the Basketball Club over the past four years.

Robert Nobile
Class of 1988
Basketball Club president

Planning for event is no easy task

To the Editor:

We are writing this letter in response to the mass confusion surrounding the Senior Dinner Dance, especially concerning the ticket sales "experience" which took place on March 24.

First of all, the Senior Dinner Dance is not just a dance, but an event. Planning begins a year in advance and is done completely by students acting under University guidelines, yes that is right, your peers.

The major stumbling block is finding a place large enough for even a large percentage of seniors, let alone the entire class. Unfortunately, Villanova's history tends to precede itself to the point where we are not welcome in many hotel ballrooms and other such facilities due to the destructive and abusive behavior which tends to be prevalent at Villanova events.

Finally, once we are fortunate enough to find a place who will accept Villanova students (providing it does not look too much like an airplane hanger) arrangements must be made to make the dance worthy of being the "Senior Dinner Dance." Such arrangements cost money, which ultimately are reflected in the price of the ticket. It is unfortunate that the price of the ticket had to be raised to $75, but there really was no other option in order for the Union to break even.

Basically, the purpose of this letter is to explain the situation in which the Student Union has found itself in terms of the planning of the dinner dance this year. As always, your suggestions, ideas and support are always welcome, especially regarding next year's dinner dance.

We do not, however, appreciate foul-languaged, ignorant accusations that certain seniors have been deprived of one of their Villanova "rights." We are by no means saying that the Student Union perfectly handled the ticket sales process on March 24. However, if we were able to anticipate the juvenile selfish behavior exhibited by a large percentage of the seniors in line (or lack thereof) that day, we may have been better able to handle it.

Beth Naughton,
former president
Billy Boyd,
former vice-president
Villanova Student Union

Wilson recognized

To the Editor:

We are writing to praise Head coach Roland V. Massimino and the members of his outstanding 1987-88 basketball team. Their achievements this year far exceeded the expectations of most Villanova fans.

For us, however, one disappointment marred an otherwise exceptional season: the failure to recognize Kenny Wilson in any single game as "the most valuable player." Without Wilson's impressive ball-handling skills as well as his fine sooting abilities, Villanova would have had difficulty winning some of the games that enabled the team to advance to "the final eight."

Everyone associated with the 1987-88 Villanova basketball program deserves special credit, but Wilson deserves to be recognized for his exceptional contributions. To Wilson — we applaud you!

Maris K. Delano
Sterling F. Delano
Chairperson of the English department

Betz supported

To the Editor:

Dr. Joseph Betz is to be commended on his excellent and conscientious piece on "Injustices of the Israeli Army." As Betz points out, the brutality of the Israeli Army against the Palestinians has been condemned by many people in this country including some members of the Jewish community.

However, Shamir, the Israeli prime minister, has not heeded these condemnations. Shamir and his Likud Bloc do not appear to believe that the Palestinians have any human rights at all. They are not able to see that forcing more than one and one-half million people to live under degrading and inhumane conditions is a violation of the most basic of human rights. It is a dangerous situation which will not further the cause of peace in the area.

What Shamir and his Likud Bloc are not able to see, or rather prefer not to see, is that the colonial policy of keeping another people under military occupation will not succeed in suppressing the national spirit of that people.

As Betz aptly puts it, we all have a responsibility to point out to the Israelis the dangers of pursuing this colonial policy in this day and age.

We cannot ignore our responsibility toward this situation given the massive amount of aid, both military and economic, we provide the Israelis.

Sayed M. Omran modern languages department

Ticket sales a fiasco

To the Editor:

I know I am not alone when I say I would like to congratulate the Villanova Student Union on their sale of Senior Dinner Dance tickets. Their total lack of anticipation of crowds and their disorganization in handling the situation was an extreme display of incompetence.

In all honesty, the Union is a wonderful organization which provides many and varied activities for diverse interests — lectures, dances, movies, ... however, their planning of this "event" left much to be desired. Concert tickets for such favorites as Springsteen and the Dead are handled in a much more orderly and fair manner.

I, along with my friend, was in line from about 8:15 a.m., and after six-and-one-half hours of chaos, trepidation, frustration and anger, I walked away empty handed. My once-in-a-lifetime senior year will have gone by without a Senior Dinner Dance with my senior boyfriend and friends.

Others who strolled in at 10 a.m. or later came away with contented smiles from the ticket booths, having received those precious tickets to the dance. Many of these people were smiling because they managed to come in the backdoors of Connelly Center or down the stairs and melt right into line with friends or "acquaintances" who would allow them to cut into line, while those of us who did it the orderly way were left out in the cold.

Surely blame should be put on those who let people cut in line, but if the Union had planned correctly much of this could have been avoided. Why not rope off a single file or two-person line beginning at the doors or hand out a numbered ticket or slip of paper when seniors entered through the door?

The Union's effort to hand out tickets after the fact only added to the confusion. People from the back of the line ran up to get tickets and others who were coming down the stairs were simply handed tickets while the rest of us stood around watching.

Maybe the Union should have asked the seniors months ahead of time who was interested in attending the dance to get a ballpark figure — something like what the sororities and fraternities do in planning their formals.

I realize the senior class is large, and not all seniors will be taking seniors, but what occurred on March 24 in the Connelly Center should not have been allowed to happen.

If all the seniors cannot be accommodated, then do not have an event that not all seniors can attend. It just is not fair because many tickets that were sold were to people who do not have dates, but since there is a limit and they are only sold one day, seniors are forced to buy them. Meanwhile, if a senior asks another senior later they have two tickets while others have none.

With so many students protesting — whether it be the Senior Dinner Dance, graduation, a traditional blue yearbook, a bridge or the tuition increase — wouldn't you think this reputable University and its organizations should begin to hear the voice of the students? For is not it the students who make it all possible? How can Villanova, its organizations and administration lose sight of the very core of why they exist?

Sometimes I wonder if I made the right choice in coming here. I cannot enjoy any of the usual college traditions — graduation, the Senior Dinner Dance and a traditional yearbook without a great ordeal occurring.

Speak up, seniors! Get the Union to set up temporary tables or an adjoining room. Do not stand idly by and let this issue die like all the others.

Name held upon request
Class of 1988

Union president gives explanation

To the Editor:

I am writing to you on behalf of the Villanova Student Union regarding the Senior Dinner Dance ticket sales on March 24 in the Connelly Center.

We prepared to sell tickets this year in much the same manner we have done for past years. Before the ticket office was opened, seniors were pushing towards the ticket window, ignoring the order that they were in. Very few people remained in line, and because of this, people who were first in line were pushed to the back, and whatever order there had been was lost. Once the seniors rushed the ticket office window, we made every effort to reform the original line, but many of the seniors would not comply. At this point, the only response was one of crowd control.

We have never had a crowd act in this way for Senior Dinner Dance tickets in the past. Because of this, there was no precedent for what happened, and we had no reason to alter a ticket buying system that was successful in the past.

It is unfortunate that we could not have received a little more cooperation from a majority of the seniors. It really bothers me that the co-operative students who helped reform the line were those who did not get tickets and ended up on the waiting list. I have had experience working with large groups of people, but I have never seen such aggressive and obnoxious behavior as was demonstrated by some members of the senior class that day.

I would like to explain that the Senior Dinner Dance is a program planned by the Student Union. Our organization's purpose is to provide quality programming for Villanova's students. The dinner dance is a difficult program to organize because it is planned for over 1,000 people.

I have heard so many different suggestions from various students since Thursday saying, "You should have done this ...

I think it is quite ironic that only one senior out of a class of 1988 was interested and willing to help us plan their dinner dance. I only wish that those of you who have offered your suggestions would have been there to help in the planning of the event. If you have suggestions about how we can plan ticket sales for next year to avoid a similar situation, please contact the Union office.

It is encouraging for us to see such a strong demand to attend one of our programs. We take the strong desire for ticket sales as a compliment. We have been planning this event since last spring, and are very confident that it will be a success, but only if we have the co-operation of the senior class as a whole.

John Price
president
Villanova Student Union

On Campus

By DANA SHAFIE
Photography Editor

This week the Villanovan asks, "How has the tragedy at Rutgers University, which resulted in the death of an associate member, changed Greek life at Villanova?"

I feel that it has affected students all over the country individually, but the effects will really not be seen in the Greek system at Villanova until the arrival of the new president.

Jim Kapp
sophomore
English

It got me aware that I should stop drinking as much as he did.

George Pav
sophomore
civil engineering

Why do you think they cancelled the keg toss?

Therese Civitanova
sophomore finance
Corrin Long
sophomore accounting
Kristi Gallo
sophomore
accounting

It just goes to show what can happen when a few bad apples get together, and the tragic effect of hazing.

David J. Chiaverini
junior marketing

The tragedy at Rutgers? I have suffered enough from the tragedy during Greek week last year!

Karin Konick
senior
accounting

It didn't — I always have a permanent buzz.

Chris Selwood
sophomore accounting

ATTENTION

CLASS OF

1989

(i.e. Current Juniors)

Sign-up for your Senior portrait April 11 to April 15 outside the Student Activities Office (204 Dougherty Hall).

Portraits will be taken Monday, April 18 through April 22th and April 25 through April 29.

This is your only opportunity to be photographed for the 1989 Belle Air Yearbook.

Testimony from the land of Apartheid

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

In Drankensburg, South Africa, Zulu sisters Miriam and Ellen sit outside an exclusive campsite for whites and sell beadwork and basketry for their income. The weather is extremely hot and uncomfortable, but Miriam and Ellen are not able to go into the water and cool off. They are black, and blacks are not permitted into pools and beaches with whites in South Africa.

Although the jewelry they sell is authentic, handcrafted and beautiful, and their price is very small, the white tourists still barter them down to get the smallest price possible.

"I thought that was funny, since the whites had all the money to begin with," explained Myra Goldschmidt, a Villanova faculty member who spent several weeks in South Africa over the Christmas break. Goldschmidt, whose husband, Dr. Michael Goldschmidt, is from neighboring Zimbabwe, travels to South Africa almost every year. This was her sixth visit to the country and her first visit there in two years.

"In the six times I have been there, I have noticed gradual changes, such as more blacks working in lower positions and a rise in the black middle class. With each visit, more and more blacks were working where they were unallowed to work previously. This time, I was eager to see how much the country had changed, since I hadn't been there in over two years. With all the outside (international) pressure, I thought I would see more change. I did not. The whites are still very comfortable. They live a charmed life of pools, servants, ..."

Goldschmidt, a linguistics specialist, was interested in learning the Zulu language, so she approached Miriam and Ellen at the campsite. "I asked them to teach me Zulu. They knew maybe 10 words of English, but after awhile I was able to converse with them. I spent five days with them, learning their language and different aspects of their lives. The tourists were very shocked at my behavior."

"When it was time for me to leave the campsite, Miriam and Ellen took my hand and said 'We will miss you, my friend. Yebo, hamba kahle, Myra,' which means 'Good-bye, Myra.' That was the highlight of my trip."

From Drankensburg, Goldschmidt traveled to the south coast to spend some time in Capetown. It was here in Capetown, at a holiday party, that she encountered one of the unpublicized victims of the Apartheid system: the coloreds. Coloreds, the offspring of interracial unions, are also known in South Africa as "nie-blankes"-non-whites. Most coloreds in South Africa live in Capetown. They are considered outsiders in South Africa, in that they are disliked by both the white minority and the black majority.

At the party, Goldschmidt was having a conversation with an attractive, fair-skinned woman in her thirties who kept saying she was "from the other side."

"I had no idea what she meant by this," said Goldschmidt, "until she finally said she was colored. She grew up resenting the fact that she couldn't go to certain cinemas or restaurants because of her heritage. She was very bitter about her role in society and she warned, 'multiply my bitterness by 20 million and you have a potential explosion.' "

(Continued on page 22)

T M disorders: a headache for millions of Americans

By JACQUELINE GENTILE
Assistant Features Editor

If you suffer from headaches, earaches or neckaches, but have no explanation for their cause, chances are you attribute your pain to stress or tension. While stress may be the culprit, sometimes the aches and pains have a more complex cause, temporomandibular disorders (TM). It is a mouthful to say and causes those who suffer from it, literally, a mouth full of troubles.

According to the American Dental Association (ADA) nearly 10 million Americans suffer from TM disorders. Five pairs of muscles allow you to open and close your mouth and move your jaw from side to side. The temporomandibular joints, (TMJ) one on either side of the face, also play a role in jaw movement. When the muscles and the TMJ do not function properly together, a TM disorder can result.

The ADA explains that if a person has a TM disorder, muscle spasms will result which cause pain, muscle tenderness and tissue damage. As a result, muscles and joints can become injured causing more spasms and thus a continuous cycle.

Some causes of TM disorders are arthritis of the jaw and injuries to the head, neck or jaw. Another cause of TM disorders is improperly aligned teeth or an incorrect bite. When teeth do not fit properly, stress is placed on the chewing muscles, causing spasms and the painful cycle described above.

Finally, stress can trigger a TM disorder. According to the ADA, people who are under stress during the day often clench and grind their teeth while they sleep. These habits tire the mouth muscles causing the spasm-pain-spasm cycle.

According to dental journals, this type of TM disorder, which results from teeth grinding and clenching because of stress, [illegible] women as men, usually between the ages of 20 through 40.

The ADA lists several symptoms of TM disorders. They include pain around the ear, tenderness of jaw muscles, a clicking noise when one opens one's mouth, a jaw that gets "stuck" or "locked," difficulty in opening one's mouth, pain caused by yawning, chewing or opening the mouth too widely and certain types of headaches and neckaches.

To determine the cause of symptoms, dentists usually perform diagnostic tests that include a medical history and examination, X-rays and taking impressions of teeth.

The ADA states that there are varied treatments for TM disorders, depending often upon the cause of the disorder. To eliminate muscle spasms and pain, moist heat can be applied to the face, muscle relaxants can be prescribed, and soft non-chewy foods should be eaten. Also, bite plates worn at night prevent teeth clenching and grinding.

If a TM disorder is stress related, counseling can be used to reduce stress. Also used in biofeedback, a relaxation technique that teaches people to control tension throughout their body.

If an incorrect bite or improperly aligned teeth are the cause of a TM disorder, orthodontic braces are sometimes used. Finally, if the TMJ itself is injured or arthiritic, or in the case of injury to the head, surgery is performed. The ADA does explain, however, that surgery is only used in extreme cases or after more conservative treatments have been employed.

Of course, not all headaches and jaw "clicking" signifies a TM disorder, but if you think you suffer from a TM disorder, alert your dentist or physician. The ADA states that most symptoms can be "readily and successfully treated." Then, you can go through your final exams painlessly — well, almost painlessly.

Campus Clip

(Photo by Shafie)

Suntanning 101 holds its first class of 1988 on Sheehan Beach. We stress that the class remains open to all transfer students, and the required suntan oil is now available in the bookstore. We regret to inform you that Tanning 4000, the senior seminar, was cancelled due to too many sun-related freckles.

Abortion: a former advocate's change of heart

By SUSAN E. CORCORAN
Features Editor

On April 20 at 1:30 p.m. in the Connelly Center Cinema, the Villanovans for Life will be sponsoring speaker Carol Everett. Everett, who used to manage a chain of abortion clinics in Fortworth, Dallas and Mosquite, Texas, recently quit her job and started to promote the pro-life belief after a string of medical mishaps resulted in the death of several women.

"I told myself it was just a fluke, but then another fluke happened, and then another," said Everett, 43, who recently joined two anti-abortion organizations, the Greater Dallas Right to Life and Texas Coalition for Life. "It began happening at the rate of once a month — someone out of 500 women, would be maimed or killed."

"I realized I needed to tell the truth," said Everett, who had an abortion in 1973 after her second husband died she decided they did not want any more children after the two she had with her previous husband.

"I didn't think abortion was instantly wrong. But first it was the women ... and then it was the babies that started bothering me."

Everett, who had run abortion clinics from 1977 to 1983, came to believe that she had been involved in the murder of 35,000 babies. It was then that she decided that she must change her view.

Her initial goal in working with abortion clinics was to help women, but greed took over, she said.

"I was greedy, but I wasn't alone," Everett said. She makes claims of botched abortions and of doctors at both clinics and hospitals agreeing to cover up the cause of death and injury.

Everett managed two clinics for her boss who sold medical supplies, the North Dallas Women's Circle and South Lake Women's Clinic in Fort Worth. When her boss refused to give her part-ownership of the clinics, she decided to open her own, where she would receive $25 for each abortion performed.

Her clinic started with 45 abortions per month, and in her last month before getting out of the business, "We did over 500 abortions. I made $13,625 my last month."

In her new job with Right to Life, Everett's salary is about $25,000 a year.

Looking back at her six years with the abortion clinics, she says, "I was a deceived Christian. I tithed on that money, thought I was where I should be. The deacons at our church thought I was neat."

Then, an expose of the clinics was done by Channel 14/KDFW. Two reporters who were not pregnant went undercover to the clinic, got tested and told they were pregnant. Everett and a medical school graduate who did the tests were photographed leaving the clinic together.

Everett said she quit her job after the story broke. "I suspected some abortions were being performed on women who weren't pregnant, but I couldn't prove it because I was a non-medical person," she said.

Everett now has come full circle on the abortion issue. She has been touring the country for three years speaking out against abortion.

A long drive for some Chile

By JEANNIE SAVITSCUS
Staff Reporter

On Aug. 1, Jimmy Stafford will leave Washington, D.C. with an estimated group of 10 others, and drive to Chile.

Stafford is a graduate student at Georgetown University. In May he will graduate with a J.B.M.B.A., a law degree and his masters degree in business administration. He wanted to go somewhere different, since he has already hitchhiked through communist countries and toured Europe.

Stafford got the inspiration for this trip from a dream he had in September. He envisioned himself in a jeep, driving with others through Central America. Since this dream, Stafford has been organizing and planning this trip.

The entire trip will take three months, from Aug. 1 to Nov. 1. He has planned to go through 13 countries: Mexico, Belize, Guatamala, Honduras, Nicuragua, Costa Rica, Panama, Columbia, Equador, Peru, Bolivia, Argentina and, finally, Chile. However, the group will not go into El Salvador since violence is, "too wide-spread and generalized."

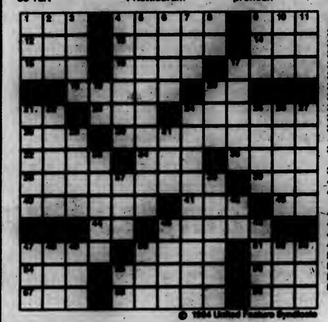
The route mapped out will also bypass all areas of fighting in Nicuragua and Honduras. Staf-

(Continued on page 25)

South Africa

(Continued from page 21)

Later that night at the party, a South African-born doctor who had emigrated to Canada, and had not been to his native country for years, said something to a group of men that illustrated the typical mentality of ruling white South Africans.



"I'm glad I got away [out of the country]," he said, "because the blacks and coloreds are everywhere. They're driving more, working and doing everything. It's terrible. This country is really coming apart."

Although blacks are driving and there has been a rise in the black lower-middle class, their progress stops there. According to Goldschmidt, "the country is still completely segregated, despite these advances by blacks. It is sad that the majority are fourth class citizens. They are not considered people."

The Villanovan Crossword Puzzle

ACROSS
1 Chinese pagoda
4 Lot in
9 Eggs
12 Everyone
13 Sounds a horn
14 Late
15 Insect
16 Book of Old Testament
17 One following
18 Small house
20 Yes: Sp.
21 Football score: abbr.
23 Algonquian Indian
24 Meal
28 Land measure
30 Gehirgously
32 Word of sorrow
34 Once around track
35 Tart
36 Finished
38 The self
40 Handles
41 Alcoholic beverage
43 Steamship: abbr.
44 Exists
45 Denude
47 Wolfhound
50 Footwear
51 Brown kiwi
54 Moccasin
55 Equals
56 Paid notices
57 Organ of sight
58 Remains
59 Asiatic ox

DOWN
1 Flap
2 Sudsy brew
3 Fish sauce
4 Kettledrum
5 Homes
6 Earth's satellite
7 Possessive pronoun
8 Tensile strength: abbr.
9 Poem
10 Irritate
11 Plaintiff
17 East Indian palmi pl.
19 For instance
20 Weight of India
21 Pamphlet
22 Sorrow
24 Collection
26 Century plant
26 Bullkite
27 Beginners
29 Title of respect
31 Cudgel
33 Country of Europe
37 Army officers: abbr.
38 Imprisonment
42 Roman 1001
45 Home of N.Y. Mets
46 Supplicate
47 Sinician
48 Simple lyric
49 High card
50 Deposit
52 Room in harem
53 Inquire
55 Postscript: abbr.

COLLEGE PRESS SERVICE

Solution page 23

who knows, who cares

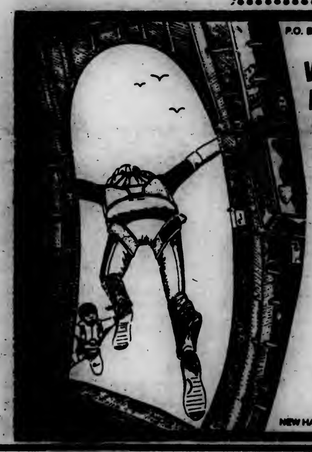
One, two, three, four ... who needs free press anymore ... five, six, seven, eight ... we hear Russia sure is great ... what a week ... the cookie crumbles ... the VACUUM circulates ... and the Villanovan becomes a collector's item ... so much for fair play ... if you don't agree ... destroy it ... before anyone else can form an opinion ... opinion ... who needs opinion ... editorials should be objective ... unbiased ... just like multiple guess tests ... and to top it all off, the Spring Festival was squashed ... not enough control ... control ... censorship ... maybe we need a second newspaper ... censorship ... censorship ... apathy ... students arrested ... fake IDs ... tuition increases ... mudslinging ... paper dumpings ... election violations ... guess what Villanova ... there's no place to go but up ... two, four, six, eight ... let's all sit back and meditate ... some of us know and some of us care ...

Edited by the Editorial Board.

Word of the Week

Vennootschap

A) An alcoholic beverage made from fermented onions which is extremely high in its alcoholic content



B) A witty response

C) A high resolution camera usually used to photograph sea life

D) Teamwork or partnership.

Solution page 23

Good luck in the show Barb Keating !

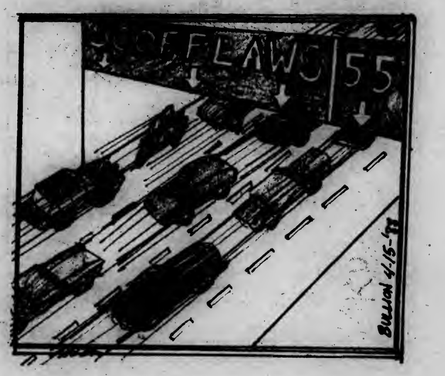
P.O. BOX 169 • GILBERTSVILLE, PA. • WEEKEND PHONE 215-323-0667

WE INVITE YOU TO:
STEP OUTSIDE!!

1st Jump Course Every Sat. & Sun.
10 A.M. Starting April 9, 1988
TRAIN & JUMP THE SAME DAY
ALL "STATE-OF-THE-ART" EQUIPMENT
Special Arrangements For Large Groups
Gift Certificates Available
FOR MORE INFO. CALL
(215) 687-5897

NEW HANOVER AIRPORT • SWAMP PK. & RT. 663 • GILBERTSVILLE, PA.

UNITED PARACHUTE CLUB



DAEDALUS EDUCATION SERVICES
LSAT Now At Villanova
GO FOR IT!
GRE • GMAT • LSAT
• ONE DAY SEMINAR • 6 & 12 HOUR REVIEW
• COMPUTER SCORE-ANALYSIS FACILITY
• EXPERT INSTRUCTORS
• EXTENSIVE STUDY MATERIALS
• VOLUMINOUS STUDY HANDBOOKS
GUARANTEED SCORES OR YOU repeat your next course free.
Offering Courses Since 1974
CALL 215-449-6911

— BODY TONING —
BRYN MAWR BODY-TECH
The Newest In Fitness on the Main Line
A luxurious salon featuring 7 separate toning stations combining Isometric, Isotonic, High Repetition, Non-Strenuous exercise.
☐ Loss of Unwanted Inches
☐ Improved Circulation
☐ Increased Flexibility
☐ Reduced Cellulite
24 N. Merion Ave. Bryn Mawr
next to Illusions - 527-5553
COMPLIMENTARY VISIT
10% OFF FOR STUDENTS

THE ART BIN

newdles by noël

German shepherd

Q and A to good health

By MARCIA COSTELLO, M.S.R.D.
Nursing Department
and
CINDY LAUER, R.D.
Food Service

Are vitamin supplements good for you, and what would be a good overall vitamin supplement to take?

Nutritionists recommend that individuals obtain a sufficient supply of vitamins and minerals by consuming a variety of foods in their diet. For healthy people who wish to take a supplement as an added "insurance," a multivitamin can provide adequate amounts of the essential nutrients. Unless a nutrient deficiency is present, high potency vitamins are not needed.

Is fasting good for you?

Although going without food for a day will not do any real harm, fasting for longer periods is definitely bad for you. During a fast, you are not taking in the required amounts of protein to maintain the protein material in your own body. As a result, more than 50 percent of any weight you lose can come, not from fat, but muscles and other lean tissue.

Are the vegetable proteins found in beans, bean sprouts, tofu, and even peanut butter, nutritionally equal to those found in meat and fish?

Unlike proteins from animal sources, vegetable proteins are "incomplete." To be synthesized into proteins your body can use, they have to be eaten in combination with other "incomplete" proteins that are complementary, such as those found in grains.

Rubes® By Leigh Rubin

St. Joseph's lends handicaps a Hand-in-Hand

By SAMANTHA FORLINI
Staff Reporter

The 12th annual Hand-in Hand Festival with the mentally handicapped took place April 9, on Saint Joseph's University campus. This year's festival entertained over 600 mentally handicapped guests of all ages and mental capabilities.

The event was coordinated by Nancy Donahue and Dan Conway. The theme of the festival was "Lean On Me," a recent pop hit by the group Club Nouveau. A total of 1,000 volunteers were recruited to assist the guests and help make the program a success.

The festival is designed to fulfill a three-fold purpose: Self-awareness and recreation for the mentally handicapped, contact between the mentally handicapped and the public and education of the public concerning the mentally handicapped.

Hand-in-Hand at St. Joe's began in 1977 with the help of the first student coordinator, George Carasiti. It has now become the biggest annual event for students at the university. The moderators this year, Claire Knoblock and Sr. Frances Hart, dedicated extensive time and guidance to prepare for the festival.

Saint Joseph's festival has received numerous awards for excellence. The Philadelphia Mayor Wilson Goode has proclaimed the second Saturday in April to be "Hand-in-Hand" day. A citation for service to the mentally handicapped was also bestowed by The Elwyn Institute.

Personalities at the festival included: Channel 6 sportscaster Don Tollefson, Ukee Washington, a member of the Philadelphia 76ers, Al E. Gator and the Hawk and the Big Shot. The masters of ceremonies were St. Joseph's seniors Marty Farrell and Connie Tricome.

It will not be long before next year's event will be planned. The inspiration and motivation of the guests make the efforts worthwhile. Their appreciation and enjoyment of the festival is easily seen in their smiles.

Searching?

ARE YOU SEARCHING?
WE ARE, TOO ...
Searching for young
Catholic men, like you ...
To live and work with the poor ...
To share their sorrows and joys ...
To care for the needy little ones ...
To bring Christ into their lives ...
To join the Columban Missionary Priesthood ...
If you have a heart big enough,
JOIN US!
COLUMBAN FATHERS
MISSIONARIES
in ASIA and LATIN AMERICA
FOR MORE INFORMATION, WRITE OR CALL:
Father Michael O'Loughlin
Vocation Director
Columban Fathers
St. Columbans, NE 68056
(402) 291-1920

Name
Street
City State Zip
School/College Age
Phone: ( )

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER

Smart

Help your parents get through college.

Just thinking about college tuition is enough to make most parents break into a sweat.

But can you blame them? When you consider the cost of tuition, books, dorms—not to mention pizza parties—you're talking big bucks.

Which is why you should do some talking. Like telling your parents about the Education Loan Programs at Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

At MHT, not only do we participate in all three Federally guaranteed loan programs, but we also work with state and national agencies and can make guaranteed loans in all 50 states.

In practically no time at all.

In a matter of minutes, MHT Student Loan Processors can program your information into our computerized loan-processing system.

Within 24 hours, the Bank will get a decision from the Guarantee Agency. It's that simple. Better still, with MHT your parents will get all the money they need from one source.

Example: If your folks need more money than government sources will give them, we can offer them tailor-made payment plans through The Education Loan Program, Educational Lines of Credit or Monthly Budget Program and Pre-Payment Programs that make it easy for your parents to fund themselves. (The Education Loan Program, Monthly Budget and Pre-Payment Programs are offered through the Tuition Plan, a company of Manufacturers Hanover.)

Once you get a loan from us, you can be sure it'll stay with us. Because we've never sold education loans to other banks (unless the borrower asked us to).

So if you need money for school, call 1-800-MHT-GRAD and get yourself an MHT Education Loan Application.

Then when your folks ask you about tuition, at least you'll have an answer.

"No sweat."

The Manufacturers Hanover Banking Group

Advice from BUTCH BAXTER

Dear Butch,
Merry Christmas, it's Irv. I have a story problem for you. If a train left Chicago bound for Baltimore at 4:17 a.m., traveling at 63 miles per hour, and the absolute magnitude of a supernova is .16, what are the names of the two men who operate the Dumbo ride at Walt Disney's Magic Kingdom?
Signed,
Irving E. Relevant

Hey Irv,
That's an easy one. Assuming Jesse Jackson finishes second in the New York primary, the answer is Carl and Raoul.

Dear Butch,
I have a small question; what, exactly, is the meaning of life?"
Signed,
Just Pondering

Hey Ponderer,
I'm kind of up in the air on this one, but I've narrowed it down to two possibilities. The meaning of life is either love, peace, hope and unity, with a striving for the common good of mankind, or a good buzz and a Playboy Bunny who believes the sole reason she is on this earth is to cater to the every desire of unshaven, overweight ex-con advice columnists.

Dear Butch,
The other day I woke up and found my husband left me for another woman, my dog died, I was fired from my job, my car was repossessed, I caught a bad cold and there was no prize in my Lucky Charms. At this point, I am in dire need of a laugh. Could you please tell me a joke?
Signed,
Desperate for a Chuckle

Hey Desperate,
I heard a good one the other day and it goes something like this: One day this business man was in his 20th story office building. He was staring out his window watching the wind blowing all kinds of debris around on the ground below. He thought to himself, "So that's why they call this the Windy City. Why, that wind is so strong, it would probably even blow me around."

So the man went up to the roof and peered over the edge. After a gutsy "Here goes nothin'," he jumped off. He fell about 10 floors when he caught a gust of wind that blew him clear back up to where he had started. "Wow!" he exclaimed, "That was incredible, I've got to tell someone about this."

So the man ran to the elevator, and took it down to the bar on the first floor. He approached one of the patrons and said, "Hey buddy, do you know why they call this the Windy City?" The man just shrugged. Then the first man said," Because the wind here is so strong. Why you could even go up to the roof and jump off, and the wind would blow you back up to the top where you started."

"Are you on something?" the second man replied.

"I'll bet you $50 that I can do it," said the first man.

The bar patron agreed to the wager, and they both proceeded to the roof.

So the first guy jumps off, and like before, falls about 10 stories and drifts back up to the roof, landing right next to his doubting Thomas. Then the former sceptic said, "Holy smokes! so that's why they call this the Windy City." Then he paid his financial debt and asked, "That was the greatest thing I have ever seen, do you think I could try it?"

"Sure, said the first guy, and they both jumped off, arm-in-arm, falling about 11 floors this time, then suddenly they floated back up to the roof.

"That was unbelievable!" said the first time flyer. "Do you think I could try it solo?"

"Sure," said the first man, "Go for it."

So he jumped off, 10 stories, 11, 12 ... Splat! To the horror of onlookers below, the bar patron made his mark on the Chicago streets.

After this, the first man calmly returned to the bar downstairs and ordered a shot of whiskey.

The bartender obliged him and said, "You're a hard man Mr. Kent."

Butch Baxter Quote of the Week: "Of course I have an alibi for the night of the Jamison robbery, your honor. I couldn't possibly have been at the scene of the crime because I was with my buddy, Lefty "The Slug" Marcione robbing the Witherspoon place at 422 Margold Ave. Anyway, I would never hit the Jamison house on a Tuesday night, 'cause that's the night Mr. Jamison watches "Moonlighting." I mean, I may be many things, but I ain't stupid."

Advice from Butch Baxter is a new weekly addition to the Features section of the Villanovan. It is intended for entertainment purposes only. The characters and letters are purely fictitious, and any resemblance to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Campus Ministry

By MELISSA ESPOSITO
and
JIM LEONE
Coordinators: Balloon Day 1988

This year Balloon Day will be held April 19, from 11:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. in the Kennedy Mall area. Balloon Day is sponsored by Campus Ministry, and the proceeds will go to the St. Francis Inn Soup Kitchen in Philadelphia.

Balloon Day is a carnival-type charity event designed for students interested in helping the needy. Many organizations within the University volunteer their time and money in order to support this cause.

A major source of revenue for this event comes from the sale of balloon tags. These tags are attached to helium-filled balloons and are launched at about 3 p.m.

Throughout the day, mentally-handicapped children are entertained by huggers and clowns, while additional entertainment is provided by various acts and bands. Not only is Balloon Day a fun-filled event, it is also a rewarding experience for all who participate.

In recent months there has been an increasing awareness of the unfortunate plight of the homeless. Despite this concern, many people are still unaware of ways to attack this problem. By participating in Balloon Day, Villanova and surrounding communities have an opportunity to come one step closer towards alleviating this problem. We are asking for your full support during this charity event.

Trip to Chile

(Continued from page 22)

ford is keeping a close watch over the political situation in all the countries in case he has to reroute the trip.

Certain sites are definitely included on the trip. Specific trips have been mapped out. Tikal, Guatamala, Coper, Honduras and Palenque, Mexico all have Mayan ruins that Stafford wants to visit.

Stafford promises the trip to be a rough one, camping outdoors and sleeping in hotels when possible. Also, in order to bypass El Salvador, Stafford plans to go off the main highway and spend some time on the dirt back roads. However, Stafford recently purchased a four-wheel drive International Harvester Travelall. The vehicle is equipped to accommodate nine people, and will have a cog wheel attached to the front to prevent getting stuck in mud.

For people that are seriously interested in going, Stafford is asking for a $900 deposit. The total cost of the trip will be $2000. Additional information is available in the Villanovan office.

Word of the Week Solution

Vennootschap
D) Teamwork or partnership

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
SUMMER SESSIONS '88

GRADUATE and UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

BUSINESS
ENGINEERING
MATHEMATICS

COMPUTER SCIENCE
NATURAL SCIENCE
LIBRARY SCIENCE

LANGUAGES
COUNSELING
EDUCATION
HUMANITIES
THE ARTS

DAY and EVENING CLASSES

SESSION I — Wednesday, June 1 to Wednesday, June 29
SESSION II — Friday, July 1 to Monday, August 1
EVENING SESSION — Wednesday, June 1 to Monday, August 1

CONTINUOUS REGISTRATION
until the day before each session begins.
REGISTER NOW!

For summer Bulletin, write:
SUMMER SESSIONS OFFICE
Or, if you prefer, call:
(215) 645-4320

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

$400 REWARD

AND THE CREDIT YOU DESERVE!

$400 CASH FROM 'THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS' AND PRE-APPROVED CREDIT FROM 'THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS'

To qualify for pre-approved credit and $400 you need, 1. Verifiable future employment, 2. A salary sufficient to cover normal living expenses plus a car payment. 3. If you have a credit record, it must indicate payment made as agreed. 4. You must be graduating or already have graduated with a Bachelors or advanced degree. 5. Call for more details and vehicle eligibility.

BUICK FORD DODGE

THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS

OFFICIAL SPONSORS OF THE VILLANOVA WILDCATS

Rollie suggests you see the people at the Wayne Dealerships to take advantage of this special offer to Villanova graduates.

ANTHONY WAYNE BUICK
233 E. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
688-4800

WAYNE FORD
325 E. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
688-6100

WAYNE DODGE
291 W. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
687-4491

JUST ONE MILE WEST OF THE UNIVERSITY

INXS excites Spectrum crowd

By DIANE DRAGONETTE
Staff Reporter

On March 25, the Spectrum was charged up with a crowd suffering from strong cases of spring fever and INXS mania. Australian rockers INXS treated the sold-out crowd to an energetic, upbeat show.

INXS hit the stage at 9:30 p.m. with "Kick" and "Guns in the Sky," two tracks off their latest album Kick. The beginning was the only slow part of the concert, due to the band playing it a little too tight and predictable. Things changed when the sextet consisting of Michael Hutchence (lead vocals), the Farris brothers — Andrew (keyboards), Tim (guitar), Jon (drums), Kirk Pengilly (guitar, saxophone) and Garry Gary Beers (bass) launched into the third song "Tiny Daggers," which featured raunchy guitarwork from Farris and Pengilly.

And Hutchence? Yes, he looked and sounded sensational in his black jacket embroidered with the name "Hutch." For the majority of the show, Hutchence remained the center of attention with his Jagger-like antics and moves.

Relying heavily on material from Kick, INXS catered to newer fans, but this was not always a crutch. During a new song, "Mystify," the band proved their ability to experiment with a folk sound. Older fans were on their feet when the opening notes of "Original Sin" off the 1984 The Swing album began. A definite high point was during "Shine Like It Does." Pengilly sat on a platform playing acoustic guitar while Hutchence sang with his entire soul. It was one of the only touching moments of the very upbeat show.

During "Wild Life," Hutchence played with a bunny from the audience and returned the gesture by throwing out his tie to the crowd during "Listen Like Thieves." Things slowed down with "Never Tear Us Apart" as Pengilly's incredible sax solo aimed straight for the soul. "New Sensation" was a definite crowd pleaser thanks to the way Hutchence slithered and tossed his curly locks. Even the bassist, Beers, who hadd maintained the same pose for 45 minutes, could not resist bopping around.

Other songs performed from the 1985 album Listen Like Thieves were "Kiss The Dirt" and "This Time." They were followed by "Burn For You," during which Hutchence went all out in seducing the crowd with his gyrating. The Specrum went into a frenzy when INXS rocked with "The One Thing," a 1982 hit from Shabooh Shoobah. The final song before the encores was the popular dance hit "What You Need." At this point of the concert, nobody, including INXS, was ready to go home so encores were in order.

The first set of encores focused on INXS's three 1987 hits. "Need You Tonight" was a definite sing-a-long, and the band went straight into "Mediate," like they do on MTV. Hutchence even held a paper with the words on it to imitate the video perfectly, and this part really freaked the teeny-boppers out. The stage became mobbed with young girls, but was cleared in time for Hutchence to tear the paper into shreds during the word "liberate." Silly, Yes. Fun? Definitely. Hutchence then dedicated "Devil Inside" to Jimmy Swaggart and stripped down to little black shorts.

It was not over yet. INXS returned for "Good Times," a song they recorded for "The Lost Boys" soundtrack. By now, the rest of the band joined Hutchence in shorts. The final song was the first big hit that started it all for INXS 1982's "Don't Change" brought the concert to an explosive and satisfying conclusion. Even the lights were spectacular, flashing "INXS" on the curtains. "INXS" on the curtains.

Opening the show was Public Image Ltd., which features John Lydon a.k.a. Johnny Rotten. Lydon lived up to his image with his dreadlocks and spider-like dancing. PIL sounded strong and put on an exciting set. During the popular "We Want Your Body," Lydon shrieked, "Does anybody want my body?" as he raised his shirt and taunted the crowd. Lydon excited the stage shouting, "We are now obligated by contract to leave the stage. Goodbye. Y'all come back now." He then put on his little cap and left the stage. From start to finish, March 25 was a night to remember.

(Photo courtesy of Spectrum)
INXS played the Spectrum on Friday, March 25, before a sell-out crowd.

Michael J. Fox flops

By CHRISTINE A. WNUK
Staff Reporter

"Bright Lights, Big City" directed by James Bridges
United Artists
••

For those of you who do not want to dispel your image of Michael J. Fox as the squeaky-clean Alex P. Keaton from "Family Ties," do yourself a favor and stay away from "Bright Lights, Big City."

"Bright Lights, Big City" introduces us to Jaime Conway (sorry, no middle initial), a young man with a slew of problems. The most immediate of these is that at 11 a.m., he is not at his desk verifying information at Gotham magazine. Rather, he is still in bed recovering from a heavy cocaine binge of the night before.

Immediately, this sets the audience to believe that Jaime is a coke-snorting moron, but that description better suits his cohort, Allagash (Kieffer Sutherland). Jaime reveals himself to be, under the hard yuppie exterior, a quirky young man with great literary aspirations who describes his passion for the Coma Baby saga in the seedy New York Post as "one of my lesser vices."

Jaime's life incorporates two activities: failing at his job and clubbing with Allagash, where he must frequently explain the absence of his wife Amanda to acquaintances. Allagash, who finds the truth (that Amanda left Jaime to further her modeling career in Paris) unappealing, spins tales from describing innocent Amanda's death at the hands of Palestinian terrorists to glibly attributing her death to cancer. This provokes an angry response from Jaime and we discover later that this is because his mother died recently of leukemia.

The full explanation of his relationship with Amanda does not come until mid-flick in an emotional soliloquy during a dinner with his sympathetic colleague, Megan (Swoosie Kurtz). Although it is satisfying to get the full story on their relationship, it was mildly annoying to go through the first half of the movie not understanding the source of Jaime's anguish.

The impact of his mother's death on him is revealed "later" as well. In a particularly touching flashback, Jaime is seen as a compassionate, loving son reminiscing about his childhood with his ailing mother (Dianne Wiest). One wonders, was his inability to cope with grief the cause of his addiction?

Or was it the larger problem of growing up? In one of his dream

(Continued on page 28)

(Photo courtesy of United Artists)
Blythe Danner, Phoebe Cates, and Michael J. Fox star in "Bright Lights, Big City"

Irish rocker does it her way

By KATHRYN QUIGLEY
Entertainment Editor

Irish rocker Sinead O'Connor shaves her head and has worked with members of the band U2. However, at a press conference on March 30 held at the Palace Hotel in Philadelphia, reporters were told they could ask O'Connor any question except about those two things. The request fit in with O'Connor's strong-willed nature; she is determined to succeed because of her music and not because of what she looks like or who she knows.

O'Connor is a petite 21-year-old singer whose debut album, The Lion and the Cobra is rapidly climbing the college-music charts. She recently completed a string of dates opening for INXS and is now headlining a club tour. Her tour included a stop at the Chestnut Cabaret on March 30.

At the press conference last month, O'Connor said how surprised she was at the reaction to her tour and album. "It's a lot bigger than what I expected," she said. She thought that people would come to hear her sing more out of curiosity; she didn't expect so many audience members to know the words to her songs.

But they do. Music fans have taken notice of O'Connor because of her clear, sing-a-note-till-it-rattles-your-spine voice and her intensely personal songs about love, sex and disappointment on The Lion and the Cobra.

O'Connor's appeal is her integrity. She does not pretend to be anything but herself. At the press conference, she was asked to classify herself.

"I wouldn't," she replied. "I've never claimed to be doing a new style of music ... I don't want to be categorized."

There is the temptation to do that with O'Connor. One could classify her voice as Kate Bush-like, for its ethereal quality, but their voices are really too different to compare them. She first gained recognition for working with The Edge of U2 on the soundtrack of the Irish movie "The Captive," but she is not a U2 protogee. And because she is the mother of an eight-month baby boy and is headlining a successful club tour does not mean she feels older than the average 21-year-old.

"I like to go drinking," she claimed. "I get crushes on people."

Her most recent crush is on actor Mickey Rourke, a fact that her boyfriend and father of her baby, John Reynolds (he played drums on her album) is probably not entirely thrilled with.

O'Connor feels very strongly about being a woman and not being oppressed by men. Several songs on the album, especially the angry "Troy" and the straightfor-

(Continued on page 30)

(Photo courtesy of Chrysalis)

For What It's Worth . . . Commentary

By BILL CARR and MICHAEL AIMETTE
Staff Reporters

15 Reasons To Hate MTV

1) They play bad videos.
2) They have the power to promote any group in the world to instantaneous fame, no matter how bad they may be.
3) They heavily support George Michael.
4) "Downtown" Julie Brown.
5) Club MTV (see #4).
6) The incredibly obnoxious Skid Roper is now an MTV spokesman.
7) The Closet Classics segment is too repetitive — they have about 15 videos in that diminutive closet.
8) The Cool College Contestants on "Remote Control."
9) Randee of the Redwoods' election campaign.
10) Adam Curry.
11) They revived The Monkees.
12) The Top Ten Video Countdown (10 heavy-metal videos in a row — oh, boy!)
13) Kevin Seale, the only good VJ, is in one of the latest time slots.
14) They advise its viewers to "Get Wise To The Future" and cite R.E.M., The Cure, Squeeze, and Echo and The Bunnymen as such future bands. All of these bands are between seven and 12 years old, though. The Smiths are also included in that list of "future" groups; they broke up last August, however — not much of a future there.
15) They have annoyingly "artsy" promos between videos — "If I don't understand it . . . it must be cool!"

Smithereens album

The Smithereens are easily one of America's best bands. This they proved through their debut album Especially For You, a raw collection of straightforward Beatle-ish rock and roll tunes, which sold well and was highly praised by critics. The second album is the ultimate test for any well-received band, though; it proves whether or not a band is durable and long on talent. The GoGo's failed. Men At Work failed. Even the Bodeans had their problems. Good news! The Smithereens pass with ease on their second LP Green Thoughts. The Hoboken-based quartet dish out another excellent collection of blusey, no frills rock songs. Again, the themes are broken relationships and love gone sour. God, what is the story behind lead singer Pat DiNizio's love-life. On the first single "Only A Memory," has a new LP out called Children. Pat moans, "In a world of pain I have no peer." What's up with this guy? Are things really that bad, Pat? Don't worry, though, The Smithereens are not nearly as self-indulgent and narcissistic as Sting (the King of Pain himself), and they write great songs.

Musical Commentary

The Mission U.K., the hippest trend-band in England right now, The album debuted at No. 2 on the British chart and has also gone gold its first week in the U.S. The Mission will tour clubs in the states throughout May and will return again in the summer.

The new Tears For Fears album is reportedly close to completion (Didn't these guys break up? Oh, well. Robert Smith supposedly died, too . . .) Roland Orzabel and Curt Smith, known as perfectionists, are in the studio working on the follow-up to 1985's successful Songs From The Big Chair.

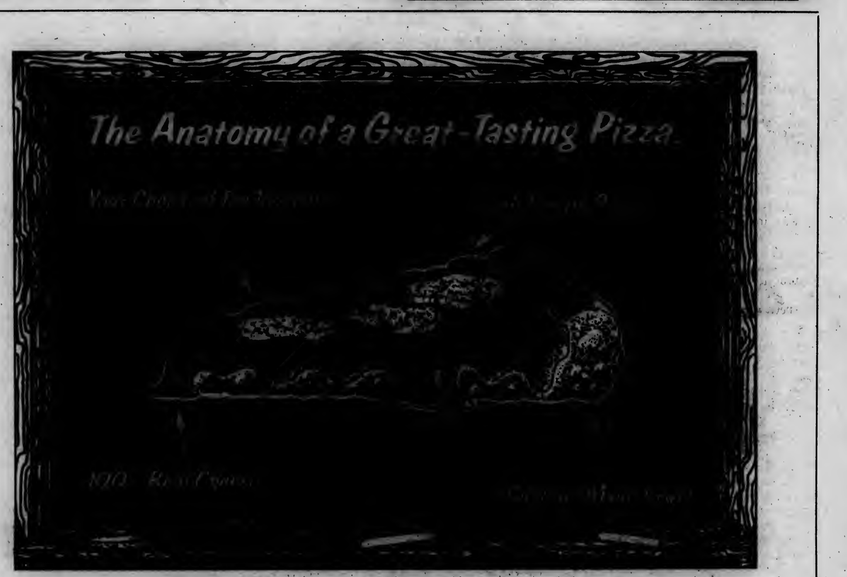
The beginning of spring usually coincides with the beginning of many tours, and this year is no different, offering shows of all types in the Philadelphia area. If you missed Billy Bragg and Ziggy Marley this week, you can see The Alarm at Penn this Saturday (April 16), which is timely since you will be there anyway for their Spring Fling. David Lee Roth, the consummate showman, will be in Philadelphia with Poison on April 17, while the critically acclaimed (deservedly so) BoDeans play on April 18. If you want to make the trip to New York, the Mighty Lemon Drops play that very same night at the Ritz. A little later this month, Icehouse will unfortunately visit us but . . . on the much brighter side — one of the best bands in rock music today, 10,000 Maniacs, will play somewhere on April 24. Don't miss it.

Curiosity Killed The Cat are busy writing their second album and playing to sell-out crowds in London . . . The Syle Council should have a new release out in late spring. Lead singer Paul Weller recently wed D.C. Lee, a backup singer who has appeared regularly on Council LPs and in their live shows . . . Pepsi & Shirlie recently befriended a Jordanian fan attending college in Britain, who turned out to be King Hussein's son. He invited the duo to perform at his palace in Jordan for his 25th birthday. But who cares? . . .

Next week: Gerry Woo's latest!

Fox film

(Continued from page 27)



sequences, Jaime has a conversation with the New York Post Coma Baby. "You have to come out sometime. She might die, you know," Jaime reasons. "No way, man," counters the hip Coma Baby. "I've got everything I need here, food, oxygen. Nope, if she goes, I go." There is an ironic parallel here with Jaime's own life, addressing the harsher side of adulthood — dealing with an inopportune marriage and resigning oneself to a less-than-spectacular literary career.

As you may have presumed from the title, a substantial portion of "Bright Lights, Big City" 's cinematography is devoted to stunning neon and pans of the New York City subway. But director James Bridges does not rely totally on such cliches for his visual images.

The scene with Jaime and his mother, set in a simple, "countrified" bedroom, complete with four-poster bed (indicative of a cozy Bucks County existence), reinforces the mental images of thoughts of home. Jaime's office at Gotham is dark and heavy, both with furniture and intellectual overtones, a place where a creative soul could choke on dust and attitudes.

McInerney and Bridges wisely include two snippets of comic relief, a scene with an infuriated wild ferret (I'll say no more) and a lunch encounter between Jaime and a seasoned, less-than-sober publishing executive (Jason Robards). After hearing Jaime express his desire to be the next Hemingway, he supports Jaime's quest for literary excellence. Unfortunately, there is a slight disparagement as to how one achieves this. "Write about making money," growls the executive, "that's what people want to know."

This film in its entirety, however, is disappointing because it is a teaser. There is a great deal of rich material here: a young man aspiring to write the "Great American Novel," struggling to follow a dream while basking in a materialistic reality, dealing with his mother's death, coping with a tumultuous marriage, but it is left virtually untapped because screenwriter McInerney chooses to focus too much of the movie on the mundane theatrics of a cocaine addict.

No one knows how to create a pizza like Domino's Pizza.® We use only the finest, freshest ingredients in every custom-made pizza. And we guarantee you'll love the taste. If not we'll bring you another pizza or a full refund.* We also guarantee to deliver your hot, delicious pizza in 30 minutes or less. If we're late, you get $3.00 off your order.

So what are you waiting for. Call Domino's Pizza today!

Call us.
Wayne
293-0980
128 W. Lancaster

Open for lunch
11 AM-1 AM Sun.-Thurs.
11 AM-2 AM Fri. & Sat.

*Check your local store for guarantee details. Our drivers carry less than $20.00. Limited delivery area. © 1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE.

99¢ six-pack

Present this coupon to receive a six-pack of Coke® for only 99¢ when you purchase any large pizza.

One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer. Includes rebate of sales tax if applicable.
Expires: 4/21/88

Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

Friendly Floppies . . . .

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

DARK CASTLE•••½ THREE-SIXTY PACIFIC C64/128, AMIGA, IBM, ST

Dark Castle is difficult to get used to; but, once this is accomplished, the rest flows easily. The castle of the title presents 14 danger zones, after which a battle with the Black Knight takes place. Do not expect to go through these dangers quickly, for myriads of foes are at every turn. From bats and rats to wizards and vultures, you never have time to stop and examine the beautiful graphics. Maneuvering your character involves jumping on vines, chains and ropes and throwing rocks at all of your foes. Learning how to control the direction of flight of the rocks is your toughest assignment.

The different screens of Dark Castle are all very creative. Many different types of obstacles await. Watch the demo to get a feel for what to do and collect as many rocks as possible. If you are lucky, you may find elixirs, maces and shields along the way — very useful items.

VYPER•••½ TOPDOWN DEVELOPMENT AMIGA

Vyper is one of the few games that is made exclusively for a home computer that truly captures the intensity, speed and excitement of an arcade game. This game is in the style of a classic shoot-em-up and offers 100 levels of play. The interesting point about Vyper is that the game takes place in real time, with the screen being updated 60 times every second. Also, you get to start the game on any of the first 50 levels that you would like.

Vyper places you against the Yarks in this battle to save the universe. Each wave of Yarks is different, both in graphics and the way in which the wave attacks and moves. Because the game is so fast, do not think that you will get very far quickly. Only through practice can you get better at Vyper, but the sound, graphics and speed of the game make it worth it.

HARRIER COMBAT SIMULATER•••• MINDSCAPE C64/128, ST, AMIGA

This combat simulator from Mindscape places you in one of the fastest planes in the world, the Harrier Jump-Jet. The plane can take off and land vertically, move at Mach 1.3 and use all types of weaponry. All of the power of the real jet is captured in this simulation. Your goal is to fly a mission solo against the enemy's key oil reserves in a desert command post. You have your work cut out for you.

The graphics in Harrier Combat Simulator are superb. The screen really does seem to slip by at super-fast speeds. The instrumentation includes radar and everything else you need to finish the mission. The manual describes all possible maneuvers of the aircraft in simple language and a command card shows all of the key commands at a glance. Harrier Combat Simulator will keep you going with its non-stop action.

SHERLOCK••••½ INFOCOM C64/128, AMIGA, ST, MAC, IBM, AP, IIGS

In this latest text adventure from Infocom, you take the role of Dr. Watson in solving an important mystery. The Queen's Golden Jubilee is coming up and the Crown Jewels have been stolen. Professor Moriarty has set a deadly trap for Holmes and, calling upon his advice, you must solve the mystery and defeat Moriarty. This adventure has many good puzzles in it and captures the atmosphere of Sherlock Holmes' times, Victorian England. But you only have 48 hours to solve the puzzle.

The package contains both a tourist map of Victorian London and a copy of a London newspaper from June 17, 1887, serving as copy protection and sources for hints. Sherlock is a great challenge and the Amiga and ST versions even have sound. Sherlock is definitely the best mystery game released in a long while and the best game that deals with Sherlock Holmes, an immortal legend.

EBONSTAR••• MICROILLUSIONS AMIGA

EbonStar places you as a gladiator in battle against enemy fighters in a futuristic outer space arena. The game is very tough to master, for you never know what the enemy is going to do next and the game relies on random events. The computerized referee is called Arch. Arch is responsible for creating the black hole-type pit called the EbonStar. The goal of the game is to use your energy bolts to push your opponents into the EbonStar and then destroy the EbonStar when Arch is creating it.

There are different types of enemies to bother you, as well as special weapons that emanate from Arch. The graphics are very well done and the sound is well-used throughout the game, both for music and effects. Up to four players can play. Practice controlling your ship, for it is tough to do.

GNOME RANGER•••• CONSTELLATION SOFTWARE AMIGA, ST, C64/128, AT, IBM, MAC

This is a challenging text-and-graphics adventure that should be an example to all such adventures. In Gnome Ranger, you are Ingrid the gnome, banished to the wilderness by your family — unfortunate for the wilderness. Gnome Ranger presents to you three adventures that you must solve, all as the title character. There are many puzzles to solve and a lot of descriptive text to create the atmosphere in which the game takes place.

Also included in Gnome Ranger is a 48-page diary of Ingrid to help in preparing you for the adventures ahead. Advanced commands are included and you can even have different characters doing different things at the same time. The graphics are beautiful and the whole presentation of the game is what makes it a success. The game is "imported" from England by Constellation and worth the overseas transfer.

WKVU Top 20

1.	1.	Sinéad O'Connor "Mandinka" (Chrysalis)
6.	2.	Woodentops "Maybe It Won't Last" (Columbia)
2.	3.	Midnight Oil "Beds Are Burning" (Columbia)
8.	4.	INXS "Devil Inside" (Atlantic)
3.	5.	Public Image Limited "Seattle" (Virgin)
11.	6.	Robyn Hitchcock and the Egyptians "Balloon Man" (A & M)
18.	7.	Cure "Hot, Hot, Hot" (Elektra)
31.	8.	Talking Heads "(Nothing But) Flowers" (Fly/Sire-WB)
28.	9.	Morrissey "Suede Head" (Sire-Reprise)
16.	10.	New Order "Touched by the Hand of God" (Qwest-WB/Giant)
5.	11.	Church "Under the Milky Way" (Arista)
4.	12.	Godfathers "Birth, School, Work, Death" (Epic)
17.	13.	David Sylvian "Orpheus" (Virgin)
7.	14.	Sonic Youth "Beat on the Brat" (SST)
--.	15.	Mighty Lemon Drops "Inside Out" (Sire-Reprise)
9.	16.	Firehose "Sometimes" (SST)
12.	17.	T-Bone Burnett "Killing Moon" (Columbia)
19.	18.	Crazy House "Burning Rain" (Chrysalis)
21.	19.	Pato Banton "Don't Sniff Coke" (Primitive Man)
14.	20.	Big Dipper "All Going Out Together" (Homestead)

Entertainment Calendar

Music

23 East Cabaret
23 E. Lancaster Ave.
Ardmore, Pa.
215-896-6420
April 15 — Bricklin with the Faction
April 16 — Screaming Blue Messiahs/Original Sins
April 19 — WKVU College Radio Night
April 20 — The Snap
April 21 — Dynagroove

Ambler Cabaret
43 E. Butler Pike
Ambler, Pa.
215-646-8117
April 15 — Beru Revue/the Skam
April 16 — Beru Revue/Blue Rodeo
April 19 — Stinger
April 20 — The Stand
April 21 — Hoi Polli

The Spectrum
Pattison Place
April 17 — David Lee Roth/Poison

Tower Theatre
Upper Darby, Pa.
April 16 — The Alarm

The Philadelphia Orchestra
1420 Locust St.
Philadelphia, Pa. 19102
April 15, 16 — Max Reger's Variations and Fugue for Orchestra

Theater

Annenberg Center
University of Pennsylvania
3680 Walnut St.
Philadelphia, Pa.
215-898-6791
April 20 — Molly's Not Dead
April 21 — Land's Edge
April 22 — Carmina Burana

Temple University
301 University Services Building
Philadelphia, Pa. 19122
215-787-7476
April 15, 16 — "Man of La Mancha"

Vasey Theater
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa.
215-645-7474
April 13-17, 19-24 — "Pippin"

On The Scene...Entertainment Tidbits

By STEPHEN POWERS
Staff Reporter

Monday night was the night of the year for the motion picture industry. The 60th annual Academy Awards were telecast on ABC, and the big winner turned out to be a foreign film that few people have seen.

"The Last Emperor" was nominated for nine Oscars and won every category in which it was nominated, including best picture, where it beat "Broadcast News," "Moonstruck," "Hope and Glory" and "Fatal Attraction." "Emperor" also picked up the statues for best director (Bernardo Bertolucci), adapted screenplay, art direction, cinematography, costume design, film editing, original music score and sound.

"Emperor's" impressive sweep did not leave much for the rest of the nominees; box-office winners "Broadcast News" and "Fatal Attraction" were shut out completely. The next big winner was "Moonstruck," receiving three awards. Cher won a richly-deserved Oscar for best actress, beating out Glenn Close and Holly Hunter, but was upstaged by her own outfit (She was clad in a glittery black version of the thing Barbara Eden used to wear on "I Dream of Jeannie.") Co-star Olympia Dukakis (Gov. Mike's cousin) won for best supporting actress and writer John Patrick Shanley won the award for best original screenplay.

Other winners Monday night included Michael Douglas, who won the best actor for his performance in "Wall Street," but really should have won for "Fatal Attraction." Ex-James Bond Sean Connery picked up his first Oscar for an outstanding supporting performance in "The Untouchables." The statue for best original song went to the over-played "(I've Had) The Time of My Life," from "Dirty Dancing."

As for the Oscar show itself, it was one of the less exciting events of the year. Most of the winners were the odds-on favorites before awards night, and "The Last Emperor's" dominance of the awards made for an unsuspenseful evening.

The program opened with a weak monologue by host Chevy Chase, and moved on to one of those tacky, gaudy production numbers which featured singers and dancers dressed like giant Oscar statues. Some of the special effects in the later segments, like Mickey Mouse presenting the award for animated short film, were pretty childish (Was that Pee Wee Herman-Robocop shootout really necessary?). Incidentally, the Mickey Mouse effect was botched when a human sat in Mickey's seat while the cartoon character was still being projected onto it.

The real presenters were a varied group of performers, ranging from veteran stars Gregory Peck and Audrey Hepburn to such current actors as Steve Guttenberg, Rob Lowe and a very pregnant Glenn Close (accompanied by her obstetrician, no less). Last year's Best Actress winner Marlee Matlin, who is deaf, spoke publicly for the first time when she presented the Best Actor award.

The presentations were spread out by some clips from past shows, in honor of the Academy's 60th anniversary, and by musical performances of the songs nominated this year. However, "Shakedown," from "Beverly Hills Cop II" was sung by Little Richard instead of Bob Seeger, and Grace Slick was noticeably absent from Starship when they performed "Nothing's Gonna Stop Us Now" from "Mannequin" (Miami Sound Machine's Gloria Estefan filled in admirably).

Aside from the musical numbers, the show was filled with the typical, overlong "Thank you, I love you all" speeches. Because the awards usually command high ratings, many sponsors broadcast new commercials, some of which were more interesting than the program itself. Coke premiered several new spots, featuring Whitney Houston, Demi Moore, Art Carney and "Family Ties' " Brian Bonsall.

Although the writers' strike threatened to shorten the Academy Awards presentation, it actually lengthened it, since many presenters ad-libbed quite a bit. The entire program ran for three and one-half hours — about two and one-half hours too long.

Sinead O'Connor

(Continued from page 27)

ward "I Want Your Hands on Me," reflect this. When questioned if she was a feminist, O'Connor replied, "Well, I'm independent and strong ... But I'm not a man-hating, baby-eating, bra-burning feminist."

O'Connor was independent enough to produce her album (the first in a contract of four for Chrysalis records) by herself. She found that it was impossible to explain to anyone else what she was thinking.

When questioned about how she learned the technical aspect of production, she replied that she did not. She claims that producers are over-rated and that all you need to do is say what you want and there are people in the studio to push the right buttons.

After the press conference, O'Connor and her manager, Fachtna, left to do the soundcheck for that night's performance at the Chestnut Cabaret.

O'Connor did a 50-minute set at the Chestnut on March 30. She did most of the songs from The Lion and the Cobra, starting with "Jackie." O'Connor also sang two new songs, including one whose title and lyrics are both unprintable. Suffice to say, it was about a girl who was not too happy with a guy. Since two of O'Connor's band members, Mike Joyce and Andy Rourke, were formerly of the Smiths, she sang "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle."

The performance was much too short, but O'Connor just doesn't have the material to lengthen it yet. She is a very mellow performer; she holds the microphone and sways or sort of bops on stage, but that is it.

Her voice is anything but mellow. It soars, dips, whispers and screams. It was never more inspired than on her encore, "Troy," which she performed with just her guitar for back-up. She sang the lyrics, "I will rise/ I will return ... " and when she does, on a larger tour or with a new album, it will most definitely be on her terms.

COLLEGE CARE BASKET
The Best Gift Yet
Phone our office to have free information sent to your parents.
We create baskettes for your special occasion
(215)544-2626

Ice Cream Fantasy
Sweet Tooth
Sweet Adventure
College Delight
Nibblers Feast
A Touch of Home
College Survival
Prices start at $12
WE SHIP • DELIVER • GIFT WRAP

GEORGETOWN UNIVERSITY

SUMMER SESSIONS 1988

Programs at Georgetown
- ☐ Over 200 graduate and undergraduate courses
- ☐ Approaches to Teaching Writing
- ☐ Public Affairs Internships
- ☐ High School Programs
- ☐ Intercultural Training
- ☐ Interpretation and Translation Institute
- ☐ Language Courses
- ☐ Theology Conference
- ☐ Literary Criticism Conference
- ☐ Parish Workshop
- ☐ Institute for H.S. Teachers
- ☐ Sacred Scripture Institute
- ☐ Alumni College
- ☐ English as a Foreign Language

Programs abroad
- ☐ Antwerp, Belgium—Int'l. Trade
- ☐ China—Chinese Language and Culture
- ☐ Tours, France—Language and Culture
- ☐ Fiesole, Italy—Italian
- ☐ Florence, Italy—Renaissance Culture
- ☐ Greece—Humanities
- ☐ Leningrad, U.S.S.R.—Russian
- ☐ Oxford, England—Comparative Business (undergraduate)
- ☐ Oxford, England—International Management (graduate)
- ☐ Quito, Ecuador—Spanish
- ☐ Trier, West Germany—German
- ☐ Dublin, Ireland—Irish Literature

Georgetown University is an equal opportunity/ affirmative action institution in employment and admissions.

Sessions
Pre—May 23-June 17
First—June 6-July 8
8-Week Cross Session—June 6-July 29
6-Week Cross Session—June 20-July 29
Second—July 11-August 12

Call (202) 687-6224 or mail to:
SSCE—Georgetown University
306 Intercultural Center
Washington, D.C. 20057

Send more information:
Name _____
Address _____
Zip _____

MONTANA'S
Beach Week Party
BEACH MOVIES • BEACH MUSIC • BEACHWEAR •
ALL WEEK • ALL WEEK

Shots $1 until Midnight
Pitchers $3.50 until Midnight

Rock veterans captivate the Tower crowd

By JEFF GILLIES
Assistant Entertainment Editor

Before a complete sell-out crowd at the Tower Theater on March 26, The Kinks played an impressive 20-song set of energetic rock and roll. The band performed nearly all of the material on their latest live album, Live: The Road, along with some of the classics that have become traditional in their concerts.

The opening act was a local band who call themselves The Original Sins. Lucky for us, they were not the original sin of Adam and Eve fame, or God would never have given man a second chance. Needless to say, they were simply awful. It was impossible to comprehend a single word out of the lead singer's mouth, and every song seemed to be an exact replica of the one before.

Finally, they finished their set, as the crowd chanted the familiar screams, of "Way-O," another Kinks tradition. The band took the stage in total darkness, and after the opening chords of "You Really Got Me" were played, the lights came on with a roar of thunderous applause from the crowd.

"Do It Again" was the opening song, a change from their usual choice of "Around the Dial," which was left out of the set. Right from the start, Ray Davies, The Kinks' frontman, had the crowd on their feet and singing along with enthusiasm.

For "Think Visual," "It," "Cliches of the World" and a few others, The Kinks had live dancers come out on the stage. They have not done this in recent years, and perhaps this reflects Davies' desire to return to the theatrical style the band employed in the '70s.

Lead guitarist Dave Davies received his share of the limelight, as he sang three songs during the concert. The highlight of which was a sizzling version of "Living On A Thin Line." The surprise song from Dave was "Bernadette," one of the best tracks from State Of Confusion, that is not usually played live. Hopefully, they will continue to include it in future performances.

"Apeman" and "A Well Respected Man" were welcome oldies in a mostly newer material set. The crowd responded wildly to both and even those who were not even born when these songs came out seemed to enjoy them.

Other standouts included a guitar dominated "Low Budget" and the song that had people dancing everywhere, "Come Dancing."

By far, the most memorable moment of the concert was the ever-popular "Lola." The opening chords were struck as the crowd let out a deafening wave of applause. The entire theater sprang to its feet, and at times it was hard to hear Davies above the crowd as they sang along. Pure excitement filled the air as the song came to a close.

The Kinks said goodnight, while Davies was smothered with kisses and roses from the fans. However, the Philadelphia crowd was not about to let The Kinks go home.

The noise level rose steadily and exploded in a frenzy when the band returned. "The Road" was slightly disappointing, as the band ran through it a bit hastily. However, The Kinks were continuously called back onstage for three encore sets until they finally realized nobody was going to leave until they played "You Really Got Me." There was little doubt they would, as Davies once stated that playing the song is like getting up in the morning. The version of "You Really Got Me" was incredible, as the entire band turned up the volume.

The crowd still wanted more, and the only complaints were pertaining to the absence of "Celuloid Heroes." However, the band was completely exhausted, as they never stopped moving and dancing about during the entire concert. Davies even did his favorite circus act of balancing a Heineken bottle on his head as he sang.

It was wonderful to see that, even after 24 years of life on the road, The Kinks still give everything they have to the audience, and the people keep coming back to see them. If you missed The Kinks this time around, be sure to catch them when they come around again, for they surely are a rock and roll legend.

Will Sexton displays his potential

By CYNTHIA B. BOSNIAN
Staff Reporter

Will and the Kill
Will Sexton
MCA Records
**

Already a veteran of the Texas club scene at age 17, Will Sexton's national debut album Will and the Kill rocks with a potential, note the word potential, that most new artists at his age will never know.

Sexton's childhood is rooted in rock and roll — he played his first on-stage gig when he was just eight, with his brother Charlie (also a young starter). A few years later, they were jamming with the likes of Stevie Ray Vaughan and the Fabulous Thunderbirds.

As frontrunner of the Kill while in his early teens, Sexton began touring and opened for such acts as Big Audio Dynamite, the BoDeans, Jason and the Scorchers and the Lords of the New Church. Last Fall, the Kill was one of four bands in a "Four Play" tour which hit 21 cities nationwide.

Sexton's Texas-based blues influence dominates Will and the Kill, to which Sexton has added a hard-edged driving guitar. As he puts it, "I like folk-singer type writing, but with loud guitars."

The Kill consists of guitarist/ lead vocalist Sexton, bassist Alex Napier, drummer Jeff Boaz and guitarist/backing vocalist David Grissom.

While Sexton demonstrates his true grit guitar playing and raspy voice (sometimes reminiscent of John Mellancamp), the music and lyrics are often lacking and seem repetitive at times. The album is disappointing if you are looking for deep meaning or distinctly original music. Most of the songs have a "Mellancampish" appeal, avowing the simple pleasure of a small-town boy (namely cars and girls), but without the spunk and danceability of Mellancamp.

Sexton's raw screeching guitar dominates the opening song, "No Sleep" which is probably the heaviest tune on the album. A chorus echoes Sexton as he repeats (and repeats), "No sleep. Dirt cheap," as the rest of the lyrics are so forgettable that the song bores you.

The tone softens a bit on the next track, "Heart of Steel." Although it is the album's first single, it fails to impress. It is just an o.k. song, not the quality material you would expect to find on a national debut single.

"Rocks in my Pillow" can be

(Continued on page 32)

Spring Break 1989
Chairperson Applications
Available in Union Office
DUE APRIL 22
Interviews Week of April 25

BLUE MOON
SURFWEAR
STONE HARBOR * AVALON
WILDWOOD CREST, NJ
NOW HIRING
MANAGERS & FULL-TIME & PART-TIME SUMMER JOBS
Call (215) 527-4188 for INFO

SAFERIDES
645-4455
THIS TIME OF YEAR IS FULL OF PARTIES...MAKE THE INTELLIGENT CHOICE AND CALL US INSTEAD OF DRIVING HOME DRUNK OR BEING THE PASSENGER OF A DRUNK DRIVER.
THANK YOU.

In the 1960's an actor/director went looking for America—and created a new kind of film. The man was Dennis Hopper. Easy Rider was the film that defined an era.

As an actor and director, he has always gone to the edge, taking us places we'd never seen before. Easy Rider, Blue Velvet, Rivers Edge.

Now, in 1988, we find director Dennis Hopper in the streets of Los Angeles. In a war zone where gang members and innocent people alike are killed over territorial emblems of red and blue. Over COLORS. And again, he takes us places we've never seen before with the first realistic motion picture about the war against street gangs.

To do it he has brought together an extraordinary cast and crew. All of them sharing a fierce devotion to the director's vision. And leading the cast, two motion picture actors of unparalleled intensity.

Sean Penn and Robert Duvall.

A ROBERT H. SOLO PRODUCTION A DENNIS HOPPER FILM
SEAN PENN ROBERT DUVALL "COLORS" MARIA CONCHITA ALONSO
Co-Producer PAUL LEWIS Music by HERBIE HANCOCK
Director of Photography HASKELL WEXLER, A.S.C. Screenplay by MICHAEL SCHIFFER
Story by MICHAEL SCHIFFER and RICHARD DILELLO Produced by ROBERT H. SOLO
Directed by DENNIS HOPPER

STARTS APRIL 16th AT THEATRES EVERYWHERE.

George Burns finds himself "18 Again"

By THERESA JONES
Staff Reporter

"18 Again!"
directed by Paul Flaherty
New World Pictures
★★★

Since many Villanova students are still a few months to a couple of years shy of what we consider that magical age, the desire to roll back to 18 is a notion foreign to probably all of us. But that does not mean that you will not enjoy a few good times from watching someone else fulfill that wish.

Especially when that someone is George Burns, that 92-year-old, cigar smoking American favorite who never seems to quit (cigar smoking, performing and chasing women, that is, and not necessarily in that order).

In "18 Again!" Burns plays an 81-year-old entrepreneur who has his birthday wish come true: Jack Watson wakes up in the body of his beloved grandson, David, after the two suffer an automobile accident (the accident was not part of the wish — the man may be old but he is far from crazy!).

Granted, the premise is corny. Apparently Hollywood thinks it has stumbled onto the new trend in entertainment, since this invasion of the body-switcher films is upon us in full force, with "Vice Versa" and "Like Father, Like Son" based on the same farcical idea. Seeing one of these three films will probably suffice; however, the advantage "18 Again!" has is Burns in its leading role.

For someone who has long been a Burns fan, seeing an adolescent mimic Burns' familiar mannerisms so well was entertaining in itself. How often do you see an 18-year-old puff on a cigar and soft-shoe to his own somewhat decadent version of "By the Light of the Silvery Moon?"

Without the Burns' charm, "18 Again!" would most surely be too trite to merit the ticket price. We get to know David, before we do Jack and before the accident. Jack appears as a typical, self-proclaimed dweeb — freshman in college, abused as a fraternity pledge, hopelessly eyeing the BMOC's girlfriend and a general misfit with no self-confidence.

Without the Burns' charm, "18 Again!" would most surely be too trite to merit the ticket price.

Jack's companion Madelyn, played by Anita Morris, is pulling the wool over grandpop's eyes, waiting for her inheritance.

Relationships between the Watson generations are strained in the middle. Arnold, Jack's son and David's father, seems to get no real respect from either side. But at the end of Jack's adventures being 18 again, everything is rosy for all involved, except, of course, Madelyn.

In that sense "18 Again!" is very predictable. Nevertheless, the road from point "A" to the inevitable point "B" is a pleasant journey, with some touching moments and good laughs along the way. Burns' humor, warmth and sarcasm set the tone for the film, even when revealed through David, played by up-and-coming Charlie Schlatter.

Though it is Jack who wishes to be the boy he used to be, through fulfilling his wish he helps both David and Arnold be the boy and man each wants to be. The relationship between grandfather and grandson is charming, and that is possibly the best word to describe "18 Again!"

For any Burns' fan, the film is a must. And for anyone who simply wants a light comedy without expecting the heights of theatrical originality, it is highly recommended.

By the way, as an added bonus you will get to see Burns perform his version of the song "I Wish I Was 18 Again" at his birthday party, which is what sets the ball of time rolling backwards.

Sexton's blues debut album

(Continued from page 31)

labeled the most boring song on the LP. The effects are interesting, if anything, since the nonsense lyrics completely lose you. The repetition is almost nerve-racking. I do not know about you, but "grits in my gravy, kinda sandin' down my mouth" does not make me want to rush out and buy this album. C'mon, guys, you could have helped him out a little more with this one.

In "Teach the Teacher" and "Breakin' All the Rules," Sexton maintains the image of a rebel who always gets things his way, the lyrics laden with obvious sexual connotation. Similarly, in "Restless to Reckless," we get the image of a troublemaker — "Well I ride alone on a horse of chrome. I go where I please and I get what I need." Sexton gives us his version of a Billy Idol rebel yell as revving cars/motorcycles are heard in the background.

"Thought I Heard a Heartbeat," with its ear-catching melody, is one of the better songs and probably should have been released as the first single. We hear the pain of a young man who does not ask for mercy, but only the chance to love again. But do not misunderstand, "Heartbeat" is not a mellow song by any means. This song and "Hard to Please" are arguably the two best songs. Both powerful musically, they also boast some of the more interesting lyrics.

The slowest song on the album (by Sexton's standards), "Hard to Please" is in some ways a typical country-boy-cries-the-blues ballad, but with the added bite of a crisp electric guitar. Sexton's charming Southwestern brogue accentuates his vulnerability as he croons "She's as faithful as a cross-town bus.

Another worthwhile tune is "All Just to Get You," in which Sexton paints a desolate picture of the hero who has "stumbled on plains, staggered in the wind, stood at a crossroad of two" to get his girl. He evokes the classical Western heo in our minds. The instrumental sections really grab your attention — and manage to keep it.

"Their Game" has Sexton talking in a more or less monotone as the lyrics often blur together, a departure from his usually clear, unsophisticated articulation. The brash guitar is back, accompanied by the rebel yells in this fast-paced number, which is the loudest song next to "No Sleep."

Despite his shortcomings, Sexton has the ability to improve — with his bad-to-the-bone guitar playing and boyish good looks, he most likely will not gain nationwide status but will develop a loyal following. One thing is for sure — you definitely will not find any teenage bubblegum-pop or Top-40 stuff here. But you will find an ambitious, if not entirely convincing, guitarist/songwriter anxious to spread his breed of down home rock and roll.

SUMMERTIME IS A GOOD TIME AT MUHLENBERG

To Move Ahead • To Expand • To Enrich
To Catch Up • To Enjoy

For Our New Summer Bulletin
Call 215-821-3300
Summer Sessions,
Muhlenberg College, Allentown, PA 18104

SNOW MAY BE WHITE - BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE

GOLDEN IMAGE TANNING CENTERS
566 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA
Located Next to Al E Gators
CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
525-7125

- Safe UVA Tanning
- Open 7 Days
- Complete Privacy
- Relaxing Atmosphere
- Trained Technicians
- Wolff/ Coppertone Products

ONE FREE TANNING SESSION! — New Customers Only, Limit One Per Person, With Coupon Only, Expires 3/31/88

SAVE $9.00 7 VISITS ONLY $35.00 — New Customers Only, Limit One Per Person, With Coupon Only, Expires 3/31/88

We feature:
Nuvalorium Lamps exclusively from patented SCA Wolff System
"The World's #1 Choice in Indoor Tanning"

COLLEGE DISCOUNT — 20% OFF ANY PACKAGE
Villanova Student I.D. Required
American Express Cards Accepted
Have FUN in the SUN Longer this Spring Break!

Discriminating people, you Liberal Arts graduates

You've learned how to distinguish between Ulysses (highly intelligent, but devious) and Hercules (full of drive, but no gray matter).

You can appreciate the differences between George Washington and Benedict Arnold. You know why Othello messed it all up, why Henry V got the girl and the money.

In short, you have a solid understanding of Homo sapiens: You know what kind of animal he is, and whether he's likely to succeed or not. You know about square pegs in round holes.

So why don't you join us. We're a New York management recruiting firm. The book says you've got to be extremely ambitious, highly motivated, enterprising, assertive and articulate—with impressive interpersonal skills. Not too liberal. Not too artsy.

Find out more at your placement center. And send your resume to Sharon Gilbert at our New York office.

Human Resource Management
535 Fifth Avenue, 32nd Floor, N.Y., NY 10017
(212) 867-2850
30 Vreeland Road, Florham Park, NJ 07932
(201) 966-0909

Way To Go
DIANE CARMAN
The Philadelphia
Opera Scene
will never be the same again!

Megadeth's Jeff Young interviewed

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

Megadeth has, since 1985's Killing is My Business ... and Business is Good!, always led the musical genre of speed metal. Recently, a lot of other bands have tried to imitate the style and image of Megadeth. Since the initial onslaught of the band, Dave Mustaine (vocals, guitars and songwriter) and Dave (Junior) Ellefson (bass) have had a relationship that formed the core of the band. With the recent addition of new members Jeff Young (guitars) and Chuck Behler (drums), as well as a major tour of medium-sized halls with Warlock and Sanctuary that touches down in Philadelphia's Tower Theater tonight, Megadeth is set to prove that they are the world's finest speed metal band. A recent interview with Young gave a good insight into the direction of Megadeth these days.

Of utmost importance in the metal arena was the relationship between Megadeth and Metallica and the alleged battle between the bands. Mustaine had been in the first lineup of Metallica and a lot of the controversy surrounded songs he wrote for them, his reasons for leaving and misquotes attributed to the bands' members. Young told me that "the feud is over. The press had created a good one. There are always some bad feelings when something like that happens, but it was blown all out of proportion to sell magazines. We both rule!"

The recent success of so far, so good ... so what! has brought the band's from-the-gut mentality to a lot more people than before. The title for the album reflects the lifestyle of Megadeth. As Young said, "The title would be better understood if you lived with the band. Life is like an emotional roller coaster. It's 'so far, so good' because you may be in a good mood this afternoon and 'so what' because by tonight that mood may be blown." Megadeth may be riding an emotional roller coaster, but the guys certainly have the stomach not to throw up.

Young and Behler have contributed a lot to the sound that comes out on the new album. Behler was an understudy for former drummer Gar Samuelson and Young made his way into the band because he was giving a friend of the band guitar lessons to "help him figure out Chris Poland's [former guitarist] solos. He was trying out for Megadeth and wanted me to help develop his technique and learn the music. Eventually, the band heard me giving him lessons and thought I could do a better job. Mustaine brought me down to the studio, asked me to join the band and gave me a tape of 'In My Darkest Hour' to add a solo. That solo got me the gig."

The recent success of so far, so good. . . so what! has brought the band's from the gut mentality to a lot more people than before.

With Behler and Young committed to the band, things fell together in the studio — the collection of the band as a real unit took place there. Young related that "what you hear on the album is the band in its newest, most unrefined form." The songs are very technical and well-written, stemming from a certain spontaneity that awakened in recording sessions. Young found that this type of recording "helped my style in that I was normally used to planning out my solos, making them stale, and I was forced to play from the heart in the studio."

That atmosphere has produced a lot of classics on the album. Young revealed that when Megadeth writes songs, they piece together a lot of different riffs written at various points in time to make a song. A lot of so far, so good ... so what! depends on the guitar work of Mustaine and Young. "I play the more classical, faster, pickier riffs, where Mustaine plays the more old-style, Jimmy Page-type solos." The time changes and musical variation are most evident in "Mary Jane" and "In My Darkest Hour." The future of Megadeth musically is unwritten at this point, but Young promised that "it's going to be wilder, especially with me writing really weird guitar parts. The songs will climax more and have more ups and downs. Successful music depends on building up and releasing energy."

Featured on so far, so good ... so what! are "Anarchy In The U.K." (a cover of the Sex Pistols' classic), "In My Darkest Hour" (a somber, reflective tune about loneliness) and "Hock in Mouth" (the greatest anti-PMRC song ever). However, I found "Mary Jane" to be the most enigmatic number on the record and the toughest to grasp, new things emerging with every listen. An interesting story surrounds "Mary Jane." Young said that "where Junior's from, there was this girl who was buried alive by her father for practicing witchcraft. Some college kids were in the cemetery and one of them turned over the gravestone of the girl and peed on it. They were all drunk and got in a car accident and the only one who was hurt, in fact killed, was the guy who did that to the grave."

With so far, so good ... so what!, Megadeth has knocked down the barrier that was holding them back from breaking into all areas that music can reach. The record breaks away from 1986's Peace Sells ... But Who's Buying?, one of the classic metal albums of all time, and goes in new directions that ultimately reek of Megadeth. A live setting captures Megadeth at their best. So go to the Tower Theater tonight to see the state-of-the-art metal band, for the foursome is prepared to set the world on fire.

Megadeth's latest album has propelled them to a new level of success.

Paul where are you?

(J.D.)²

Richard & Company
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
773 E. Lancaster Ave., Villanova
527-2080
Villanova Student Discounts
(On tanning, perming, coloring & more!)
Open Mon. thru Sat. (Wed. & Thurs. Evenings)
Appointments Requested

Personal and Classified Advertising

CLASSIFIEDS

Two-bedroom apartment, Radnor House Condo, available July 1. $785/mo.+ utilities. Call evenings. 446-7547.

Class Ring Found: Kutztown State, Class of '85. Inquire within Food Services, Dougherty Hall.

Eating Disorders Disrupt College Life. For individual and group therapy, call Woodmere Counseling Services at (215) 789-8292. New group starts April 26.

College Pro has summer full-time customer service positions available. Looking for reliable and hardworking people to work in our regional office. Must have good phone manner. For more information please contact Sue at 783-0902 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Camp Counselors — Excellent positions well-located boy's camp, Vermont — backpacking, canoeing trips — land and water sports, dramatics, ecology. Call A. Hare, (215) 642-6472.

Lifeguard Positions Summer 1988. Many Philadelphia area locations. Must be certified. Call Arrow Pool Co. at 834-0841.

Kennel staff needed for veterinary hospital in King of Prussia. Full or part-time considered. Call Anne at 265-8044.

Summer — get your perfect summer job! You can lie in the sun all day and still make great pay. Ideal for summer school students. Evening and weekend shifts available in our client-centered home health office. If you have good communication skills, love working with people, call Joyce for an immediate interview at 527-4004.

The Resident Advisor. Assist/train mentally retarded residents in apartment CLA in northeast Philadelphia. Excellent benefits. Full-time/part-time positions. Blue Cross, Blue Shield, HMO, paid leave time. Salary $4.80-5 per hour. Minimum requirements: two years of college or high school plus two years experience in human services. Call Pat at 831-2866.

Summer Day Camp, Sesame Day Camp, in major Montg. Co./Norristown, PA Day Camp, is looking for male/female staff. Join a team of fun, exciting, professional educators. Excellent salary. Call 215-275-CAMP.

Mustang II, 1974. 71K miles, automatic transmission, new battery; rear defroster, Radials, clean condition, December inspection, $800. 667-4207 evenings, weekends.

Working in New York City next year? Looking for roommate to share a house with in northern New Jersey starting July 1, 1988. Call (215) 430-0693.

Federal, State & Civil Service jobs. $18,400 to $69,861. Immediate openings! Call JOB LINE, 1-518-459-3811, Ext. F-6185, 24 hrs.

Money talks — Earn up to $10 per hour at American Future Systems. If you have good communication skills this is the job for you. We have evening, Saturday, and Sunday shifts to fit any busy schedule. For an immediate interview call 527-4004.

Homecoming cocktail Top Pool Cottage Industries, 121 24th Ave., N.W. Suite 222, Norman, Oklahoma 73069.

Chevrolet Camaro 1982 — 30,460 miles, V8, automatic, P/S, P/B, P/W, air conditioning, rear defogger, cassette, new 1988 inspection, mint, single owner. $5,600. Call 7-9 p.m. 642-0156.

The United States Marine Corps Judge Advocate Corps is looking for a few adventurous, physically, sound law students for a no-obligation summer internship leading to a commission as an Officer of Marines. Good pay, travel, promotion, and immediate courtroom experience in criminal, labor, contract, civil and environment law, plus the challenge of measuring up to the Corps' exacting standards. To learn more, call (215) 386-5558 and ask for Captain Farr.

United States Marine Corps Undergraduate Officer Programs Freshmen — The Marines are looking for a few highly qualified men who want to lead. This summer, at no obligation, you can find out if you have what it takes. We offer good pay, tuition assistance, loan deferments, aviation guarantees, and the most challenging and rewarding experience available to young men of adventure. To learn more, call 386-5558 and ask for Captain Farr.

Where will you live next year? WEICHERT REALTORS has the answer. Three affordable condominium units ranging from $75,000 to $95,000 now available. Convenience, character, pool and security. Call Maureen or Suzanne today. 642-8640.

Professional Resume Preparation — write, edit, update, print, copy, type. Same-day service. U.S. Typewriter and Resume Center, King of Prussia Plaza, King of Prussia. 265-7665. Hours: Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m.-9:30 p.m., Sunday 12-5 p.m. It is never too early!

Full-Time Summer child care job. Looking for energetic, experienced student to care for my five-month-old child in my home. Must have car, five days including Saturday. Great salary, great kid, and pool at home to boot. Call 647-0166 ask for Julie Goldman.

Talented singers wanted for work on Philadelphia's most exciting entertainment attraction, "The Spirit of Philadelphia." Full and part-time positions available. Call between 1 and 3 p.m. for auditions at 923-4996 and ask for Bill.

Girl student wanted weekly to help single lady with light housekeeping now through summer and fall term. Present helper graduates. Flexible, pleasant arrangements. 688-9113.

For Sale: 1982 Honda Accord LX, very good condition, power steering, AC, Blaupunkt Stereo. Price $2,000. Dan Collins, 971-0212

Part-time, evening, live-in-tutor, in exchange for room and board; junior/senior B.A. or graduate student: background in math, science or language helpful; 649-1858 Jeanne or Cindy.

Singers, dancers for telegrams. Must have car. Great job, flexible hours, full or part-time. 533-6440.

Government Homes from $1. "U Repair." Also tax delinquent property. Call 805-644-9533, ext. 1414 for information.

Red '83 Escort station wagon, automatic, PB, PS, good condition, smoke free. $2500. Please call 489-0750.

1981 Chevette, 51,000 miles, AM/FM cass., 4 sp. manual, new tires, no rust. Ask. $1400. 645-4939 days or 387-1895 nights.

Typing — Term Papers, Resumes, Cover Letters. If necessary, will pick up and deliver. Good rates. Call 353-7884 anytime.

Mechanic's Apprentice Wanted for high-quality foreign car repair shop in King of Prussia, full or part-time. Call Lisa at 277-6083.

Walk to school from two-bedroom fully furnished Radnor House Condo, air conditioned, balcony, completely renovated, 1½ years old, available for sale July 1. Inquirers call 201-462-7956.

National Camp Association Summer Camp job clearinghouse. Highest salaries paid — quick and efficient job placement — a free service. Call us for an interview at 1-800-752-CAMP.

Help Wanted — Part-time positions caring for infants, toddlers and preschoolers in private home. Short or long term. $5-7 per hr. Car helpful. 647-1150.

PERSONALS

SOS Team Members — You did a good job! We're proud of you. Don't forget — party at Kathy's, 8:30 p.m. Friday. Amy & Kathy.

Dear 31st finisher, we all miss you. Come out of hiding. Love, TRAMS.

Hey third floor St. Mary's: Do you have a third team? 2nd Floor Alumni.

Dear Hamster-Brain, hope you had a great 21st! We love ya! (sometimes)! Love your favorite eggheads, Lisa, Linda and Andrea.

B — Ya think?

Buttcheek, Boob — Get psyched to get psyched! I'm so pleased. We will have so much fun! I love you both. — Susan.

C.A.P., even Jake agrees, everybody's got a hungry heart! — R.M.B.

Dear Jeff, Happy 3-year anniversary! You're the best! I love you!! Love Always, Pam XOXO.

Delta Gamma congratulates Kerri Kelliher and Charise Mooney, winners of their recent contest.

Thriller puzzles all

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

"Bad Dreams"
directed by Andrew Fleming
Twentieth Century Fox
★★★★½

One popular technique in presenting a movie to an audience is to never let them know what is real or imaginary until the end of the film. Alfred Hitchcock was the master of fooling an audience and proved it in such films as "Psycho" and "North by Northwest." Another method is to disguise a horror movie in such a way so that it is not perceived as horror, but rather as a "thriller." This method was effectively used in "Fatal Attraction" and, more recently, in the excellent "The Seventh Sign."

A new release from Twentieth Century Fox, "Bad Dreams," utilizes both of these methods to offer a movie that is horrifying, character-intensive, thought-provoking, disturbing and ultimately captivating.

Jennifer Rubin stars as Cynthia, a child in an adult's body who has just woken up from a 13-year coma after escaping a mass suicide of a religious cult led by an evil, enigmatic man named Harris (Richard Lynch). After her arousal from the coma, Cynthia is put into the care of Dr. Alex Karmen (Bruce Abbott), a psychiatrist who watches over a group of people with borderline personality disorders. After joining the group to begin psychiatric therapy, Cynthia begins to see an undead Harris, who demands that Cynthia live up to her promise to die with the cult.

The real question here is whether Cynthia really sees Harris, dreams him or hallucinates him into existence. Cynthia refuses Harris' invitation and he tells her that members of the personality disorder group will die unless she joins him in death. This explanation thus far lasts about 15 minutes into the film. The remainder of "Bad Dreams" is an exploration of the disorders of the members of the group, attempts by Cynthia to prevent Harris from killing the group members, journeys back in time to the Unity Fields cult through Cynthia's unstable mind and a development in understanding of Cynthia and her problems.

"Bad Dreams" is a very well put together movie. The focus of the film lies in two places — the characterization, represented by the excellent cast, and the special effects, mostly gruesome and disturbing, but well-placed and functional. The cast is an assemblage of talents that work well together. Rubin was the drug addict in "A Nightmare On Elm Street 3: Dream Warriors." Abbott comes from that great underground classic of the gore movies, "Re-Animator," based on H.P. Lovecraft's story entitled "Herbert West: Reanimator." Lynch is a veteran of stage and screen and has appeared in such films as "The Sword and the Sorcerer" and "Savage Dawn."

Important to the movie also are the members of the disorder group. Their disorders and behavior are so varied that they offer a refreshing change to standard horror fare. The characters are so well-developed that the disorders they present were approved by a real psychiatrist and any members of that professional field who see "Bad Dreams" should have a challenge in trying to pick out their problems.

Dean Cameron plays Ralph, a man who cannot deal with living in the paradoxes of today's society. Cameron was recently seen in Rob Reiner's "Summer School." Damita Jo Freeman plays Gilda, a quiet-superstitious girl who likes to be in control of her own life. Louis Giambalvo is Ed, both a pussycat and a demon at the same time. E.G. Daily is Lana, an introvert who comes out of her shell when Cynthia joins the group. Susan Ruttan, of "L.A. Law," presents Miriam, a borderline psychotic who retreated from the world, unable to handle success. Finally, Susan Barnes is Connie, a perfectionist who is obsessed with Ed and the closest to "normal."

Believe it when I say that all of these personality disorders are clearly seen in the characters who portray the members of the psychiatric group. Watching them on the screen makes one try to analyze their actions and see whether they are reacting to reality or to their own version of it. Adding the group offers credence to Cynthia's problem, for after all, she is undergoing psychiatric treatment herself.

The effects are very well done and every one is disturbing, driving home even more the relentless will of Harris and Cynthia's anxiety. Michele Burke, noted for her work in "Quest For Fire," took care of the special effect makeup. Ralph's realistic self-mutilation is easily the most shocking scene in the film. Harris' baptism of the religious cult in gasoline and then igniting them all runs a close second. "Bad Dreams" contains other talent in producer Gale Anne Hurd ("Aliens" and "The Terminator") and first-time director Andrew Fleming, whose collaboration resulted in a well-structured film.

Cynthia is the focus of "Bad Dreams" and all of her problems get explained in the last 10 minutes of the film. Until then, she has only Dr. Karmen to help her battle Harris.

The key to keeping the movie lively is the various perspectives from which it is seen. Jumping in and out of the minds of the various patients and in and out of Cynthia's reality and visions is enough to play with a viewer's mind. When I left the theater, I felt as if I was losing touch with reality myself. "Bad Dreams" hits the spot with a climactic ending and surprise explanation for Cynthia's problem — a fitting conclusion to an excellent movie.

(Photo courtesy of Twentieth Century Fox)
Richard Lynch is Harris, who has returned from the dead to find new victims, including Miriam (Susan Ruttan).

OPPORTUNITY ALASKA
SUMMER JOBS
EVERY YEAR ALASKA OFFERS THOUSANDS OF WELL-PAYING SEASONAL POSITIONS IN TOURISM, SEAFOOD PROCESSING, PARKS AND RECREATION. FOR AN UP-TO-DATE GUIDE TO STATEWIDE SUMMER EMPLOYMENT; SEND $7 TO:
PROSPECTOR PUBLISHERS
P.O.BOX 1402
35910 FOREST LANE
SOLDOTNA, ALASKA 99669
SEND TODAY!

Give the kid some credit.

If you're smart, and you're going to be in New York this summer, you'll check out The New School.

The New School is an academic division of the New School for Social Research, one of this country's most distinctive universities.

This summer, more than 600 New School courses are on tap. They range from American History I to some of the best writing workshops around, from Stanley Kubrick in Perspective to Advanced Rock and Blues Guitar.

Courses can be taken for credit or noncredit and are scheduled so that there's plenty of vacation time before—or after—you finish. Some courses begin in late May, many start in early June, others get going in mid-July.

The New School's at home in Greenwich Village, close to every major subway line and the PATH train.

We would be happy to give you some credit (if you earn it). For your free copy of the New School Summer Bulletin, just call the toll-free number.

1·800·422·3900, Ext.4
For a free New School Summer Bulletin

The New School
A New York phenomenon.
66 West 12th Street, New York, N.Y. 10011

RSA

"CAMPUS HOTLINE"

RSA

Congratulations To
The 1988-89
Executive Board

John Horan	President
Monica Byrne	Vice President
Megan Seeds	Secretary
Karen Porta	Treasurer
Sheila Duffy	Social Awareness Officer
Pete Koureliotes	Environmental Officer
Pat Schmitt	Programming Officer
Jim Duffy	Communication Officer

Come on out and support your hall in the RSA. . .

ALMOST ANYTHING GOES COMPETITION

April 22
3:30-5:30 p.m.

See posters or your House Council Officers for further details.

RSA
RESIDENT STUDENT ASSOCIATION
215 DOUGHERTY • 645-7210

Runners shine in Florida

By MICHAEL E. JONES
Staff Reporter

Just when the women's track team thought they would have time to catch their breath and catch up with their schoolwork, they instead caught the next flight to Florida to launch their outdoor season at the Florida Relays on March 25 and 26.

Held at the University of Florida in Gainesville, the relays exposed some new faces on an already diverse and talented squad, as the team's second-place finish in the indoor NCAA's indicates.

Junior Meg Moisen captured her first individual collegiate race in the Collegiate 2500 meters, winning in an impressive 4:28.21, while freshman Sonia O'Sullivan was victorious in the 3000 meters with a time of 9:51.82, also her first major collegiate victory.

Juniors Kathy Franey and Vicki Huber again turned in splendid performances. Franey placed third in the Invitational 1500 meters with a time of 4:24.47, while Huber tried her hand in the 800 meters, a distance she had not run individually since high school. She won easily in 2:06.27, outdistancing the competition by over three seconds.

Freshman Michelle Bennett finished second in the 400 meters, smoking a 54.35 which was a personal best by a staggering two seconds — quite an accomplishment in a race often decided by hundredths of a second.

The following week the Wildcts headed over to the Colonial Relays at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Virginia. Juniors Celeste Halliday and Michelle DiMuro, absent from the Florida Relays to attend the wedding of all-American Villanova graduate Debbie Grant, joined their teammates and participated in three of Villanova's four victories.

Halliday won the 800 meters in a time of 2:05.52, while DiMuro was a member of both the 4 x 800 and distance medley relays, running times of 2:05.6 for 800 meters and 4:44.9 for 1600 meters in each respective relay.

Other members of the victorious 4 x 800 relay included O'Sullivan (2:15.8), junior Terri Smith (2:11.6) and freshman Carol Haux (2:14.4). Other distance medley relay members included Smith (3:34.6 — 1200 meters), freshman Marissa Maggio (60.9 — 400 meters) and Haux (2:15.2 — 800 meters).

Huber and Franey finished first and second, respectively, in the 1500 meters in times of 4:12.6 and 4:22.7. Senior Olive Burke grabbed fourth in the 100-meter hurdles in 14.65 seconds.

Baton Rouge, La. was the Cats' next stop for the Paper Tiger Invitational at Louisiana State University, the site of last year's NCAA's.

Louisianans had been so impressed with the Cats at last year's NCAA's, they wanted them back for this meet. Needless to say, these southerners were not disappointed, and were treated to a fine array of scorching performances.

Huber and Halliday each grabbed first in her respective specialty — Huber the 3000 in an NCAA qualifying 8:53.07, and Halliday the 800 in an ECAC qualifying 2:05.3. DiMuro was right on the shoulder of her 800 twin to finish second in an ECAC qualifying 2:05.6, and Franey moved down from the mile to join her teammates and finished seventh in 2:08.9, also under the ECAC standard.

The 4 x 400-meter relay team secured second place in 3:42.39, and consisted of Bennett (55.0), Burke (57.6), DiMuro (54.9) and Halliday (54.4). Bennett finished fourth in the 400 in 55.13,, and fifth-place finishes went to O'Sullivan in the 1500 (4:29.62) and 3000 (9:37.78), both times ECAC qualifiers, and the latter a world Junior Games Qualifier.

Sixth-place finishes went to Moisen in the 1500 (4:29.86), Maggio in the 100 meters (12.86) and Burke in the 100-meter hurdles (14.74). Burke also finished eighth in the 100 meters (11.91) and Smith finished ninth in the 1500 (4:39.45).

Head Coach Marty Stern was pleased with the performances of his athletes. "It was a great start for our outdoor campaign. It's positive momentum as we build towards the Penn Relays. It was neat to see Sonia and Meg win their first major races for Villanova, and good to see Vicki maintaining her form. Kathy continues to look strong and seems prepared for an outstanding season."

File Photo
Celeste Halliday won the 800-meter race in the Florida relays.

Golf starts spring hot

(Continued from page 40)

so we didn't do that bad."

Rogerson, Cappello and Rongaus were the three highest finishers for Villanova with two-day totals of 158, 158 and 159, respectively.

On April 4 and 5, the Cats returned home to Aronimink Golf Club and ran their season record to 7-0. In the home matches, the Cats captured wins over Drexel and Widener University in a triangular and Towson St. University in a dual meet.

In the April 4 wins over Drexel and Widener, Cappello took medalist honors with a season's best score of 73.

The next day was the highlight of the season from a team perspective, as the Cats placed six players under 80 in trouncing Towson St. Sophomore Jim Clarke had his best round of the spring with a team low 75. Rongaus followed at 77 and Rogerson and Dougherty both carded 78s. Cappello and senior Tony Corbo had 79s to finish out the impressive list of rounds.

The team is now preparing for tournaments at Indiana, Pa. and Princeton. The Eastern Invitational in Maryland May 7 and 8 will be the highlight of the season for Villanova.

Baseball

(Continued from page 40)

sophomore third basemen, who sparkled in the field, clubbed a three-run home run in the fifth inning that sealed the win.

Also playing well for the Wildcats was junior shortstop Bob McCreary. McCreary, who led the Cats to a win over Swarthmore earlier in the week with a four-for-five, two-RBI performance, hit safely in all three Seton Hall games to increase his hitting streak to nine.

Villanova now stands tall at 7-1 in Conference play, which earns them first place in the Big East's southern division.

In addition to fine team play, many individual honors were earned. Scott won the Big East Athlete of the Week, while Marc Adderly claimed the school record for at-bats with 463, most games with 144 and most doubles with 32. Corey Williamson set a new Villanova record for stolen bases with his 29th career theft.

Editor's Note:

Senior powerlifter Janis Rosenthal captured sixth place in a difficult field of 11 at the National Powerlifting Championships held March 20, at Temple University.

Rosenthal, who is the only female to represent Villanova at the National Championships for the past two years, recorded personal bests in all three of her events: the squat, the bench and the deadlift.

The Villanovan did not report Rosenthal's achievements in an article appearing in the March 25 issue. We regret the omission.

Before. After.

Before flying Virgin, these typical collegiate-types thought travelling to London was about as exciting as taking an 8 a.m. Trig exam with a hangover.

After flying with us, they were as happy as three rock stars on a world tour.

You'll feel the same way. Once you've flown on our roomy 747s. And experienced our great movies, music videos, BBC comedy shows, 8 different music programs, and all our other award-winning in-flight entertainment. All coming at you through a pair of serious electronic headsets.

Still not satisfied? How about a nice hot meal. In fact, a choice of 3 nice hot meals.

That's right, it's airplane food. With one major difference. It's actually edible. It's also followed by tea and pastries later on.

So you can munch out while you do a little extra studying. (Yeah, right!)

Want even more? Then let us remind you of our fares. As low as $219* from Newark. $249* from Miami.

Now what do you think?

Great. Then see your travel agent. Or call us at 1-800-862-8621.

Hey, if we could please these sourpusses, pleasing you will be a breeze.

Virgin Atlantic Airways. 747's To London.

Take us for all we've got.

*One way Late Saver Fare. Fees and taxes not included. Bookable within 7 days of departure and must be ticketed upon booking. Non-refundable. Valid in New York April 1 – June 30. In Miami, April 1 – May 31.

'Nova falls to 3-5

By JOHN X. SWIFT
Statistician

This season has been an up-and-down one for the Villanova men's lacrosse team. Through eight games, the team is presently posting a less than exciting 3-5 record.

After dropping two of their first three games, the Cats were visited by Kutztown and Bucknell for home games. The Cats blasted Kutztown 24-2 and pounded Bucknell 9-3 in the friendly confines of Villanova Stadium.

Against Kutztown, John Furlong, John McEvoy, David Hone and Chris Scaring paced the Cats with five points apiece. In total, 15 Wildcats scored at least one point in the contest.

During the victory over Bucknell, Chris Sullivan had four points while John McEvoy had three goals for Villanova. Joe Lingle played superbly in goal (stopping 18 of 30 Bucknell shots) for Villanova as well.

While many Villanovans went home to celebrate the Easter holiday, the Wildcats traveled to Colorado where they were scheduled to play a pair of games at the Air Force Academy.

The first game was to be against the Colorado School of Mines, but it was cancelled because of snow. The second, however, against the Air Force Academy, was not.

The Cats suffered a heartbreaking 6-5 loss at the hands of the Air Force. After Villanova had come back to tie the game with about a minute to go, the Air Force scored the winning goal with only 31 seconds remaining to notch the victory.

The team's luck did not change much after returning East. They promptly dropped successive barnburners to Drexel (7-6) and St. John's (9-5) to move their record to its present state.

The Cats will try to regain their winning ways when they host the Holy Cross Crusaders on April 16. The game will be played at Villanova Stadium at 2 p.m.

Rouse leads Wildcats

(Continued from page 40)

The Cats got back on the winning track the following day on the road in a 9-0 thrashing of the University of Scranton. The match was highlighted by a 6-2, 6-0 victory by Rouse over Scranton's No.1-seed Leo Gorel. Rouse's win started the ball rolling as the Cats improved to 9-1.

After a few hard-earned days of rest, the Cats returned to the St. Mary's courts on April 5 against Towson State University, but suffered another 7-2 setback.

Again, only Rouse and Loughman could manage victories. Rouse defeated Towson's Jim Shepard, 6-4 and 6-3. Loughman defeated Ron Kochinski, 6-1 and 6-2. Towson led only 4-2 after the singles matches, but then swept the three doubles matches.

The 'Nova men returned to their winning ways the next day when Drexel University visited. Rouse led off with a 6-3, 6-4 win. No. 2-seed Taylor Teresi was victorious by a 6-3, 6-1 tally.

Also winning their matches were No. 3-seed Pete Leonard, Loughman, No. 5-seed Mike Freedman and Ackerman as well as the teams of Ackerman-John O'Dwyer and Loughman-Jeff Gorsky in doubles competition. Mark Tully and Bill Shea took the lone loss in a tight match at No. 3 doubles.

The 10-2 Cats were 9-0 winners at Upsala on April 8. Rouse crushed Upsala's Joe Dement, 6-1 and 6-1. Teresi won 6-0, 6-3. Leonard won easily, 6-0 and 6-0, as did Loughman and Freedman, by scores of 6-0, 6-2 and 6-1, 6-1 respectively.

The No. 1 doubles team of Ackerman and O'Dwyer won 6-2, 6-0. The result was the same for Gorsky and Shea at No. 2 doubles by scores of 6-0 and 6-1. Ackerman and Freedman-Tully at No. 3 doubles won by default. The team's match with Montclair State was cancelled, but when Fairfield visited on April 9, the Wildcats trounced them 9-0. Rouse led off with a 6-2, 6-4 win followed by Teresi's 7-6, 7-5 victory.

Leonard, Loughman, Freedman and Ackerman all followed up with straight set victories. The three doubles teams also came away with big wins.

On April 10, New York University visited only to be thrashed soundly, 8-1. Teresi was the only casualty, the victim of a nailbiter, 6-4 and 6-4. Everyone else won fairly easily, highlighted by Rouse's 6-2, 6-2 win and Loughman's 6-0, 6-0 thumping over NYU's No. 7 and No. 4-seeds.

The 'Nova netters ended the week with a 14-2 record by trashing their guests from Chapman State University rather rudely, shutting them out 9-0. Rouse, No. 2 Leonard (stepping in for the injured Teresi) and No. 4-seed Freedman all won in 6-0, 6-0 whitewashes as each player moved up one singles seed. The teams of Leonard-Ackerman and Loughman-Tully also won 8-0 in doubles play.

VILLANOVA
INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

INTERNATIONAL DAY
CONNELLY CENTER — APRIL 22

The Office of International Studies is hosting the first International Day at Villanova University!

- Table displays by the Arab & Islamic Club

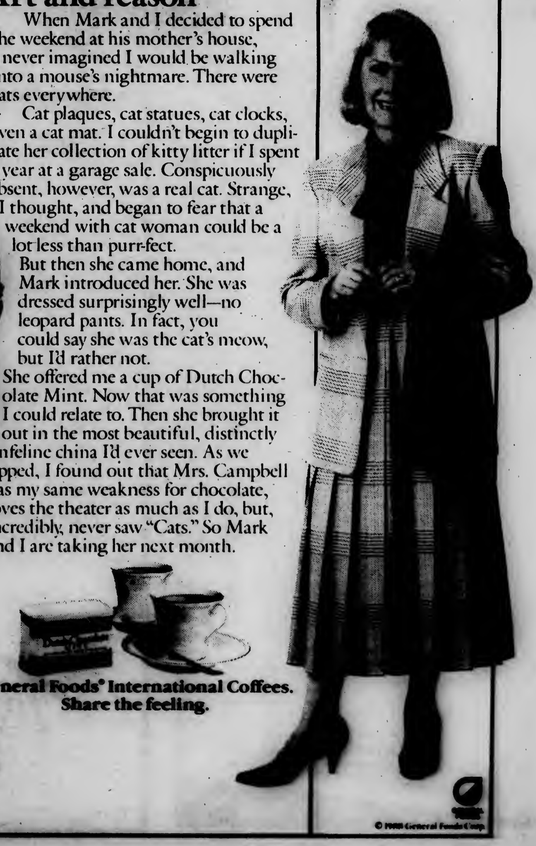
Chinese Club — India Club
French Club — Italian Club

Spanish Club

- All-day international music inside and outside the Connelly Center
- International menu at the Connelly Center Cafeteria
- Overseas study advisor from Beaver College Center for Education Abroad to discuss study in Britain, Ireland and Vienna at a table in the foyer and in the Haverford Room at 4:30 p.m.

Come one and all to participate and to enjoy the international music, food and displays at the Connelly Center on April 22 — Friday!

A103
Art and reason



When Mark and I decided to spend the weekend at his mother's house, I never imagined I would be walking into a mouse's nightmare. There were cats everywhere.

Cat plaques, cat statues, cat clocks, even a cat mat. I couldn't begin to duplicate her collection of kitty litter if I spent a year at a garage sale. Conspicuously absent, however, was a real cat. Strange, I thought, and began to fear that a weekend with cat woman could be a lot less than purr-fect.

But then she came home, and Mark introduced her. She was dressed surprisingly well—no leopard pants. In fact, you could say she was the cat's meow, but I'd rather not.

She offered me a cup of Dutch Chocolate Mint. Now that was something I could relate to. Then she brought it out in the most beautiful, distinctly unfeline china I'd ever seen. As we sipped, I found out that Mrs. Campbell has my same weakness for chocolate, loves the theater as much as I do, but, incredibly, never saw "Cats." So Mark and I are taking her next month.

General Foods® International Coffees.
Share the feeling.

© 1988 General Foods Corp.

Softball splits

By AMY C. SPENCER
Staff Reporter

The Villanova women's softball team posted two wins and two losses this week, bringing their season record to 5-7.

The Cats split two doubleheaders as they charted a win and a loss against West Chester University and Lafayette College. Both were away games, raising their record on the road to 3-5. The Cats now begin an 11-game homestand hoping to improve their home record of 2-2.

Against West Chester on April 6, the team dropped the first game by a score of 2-1, but rallied in the second game to collect seven hits and a 9-4 victory. Four players had two RBI's each, including sophomore pitcher Karyn Lodise. Lodise logged the win with relief help from freshman Janet Chow.

The series at Lafayette also began with a loss, this time by a score of 4-0 with the Cats lone hit a single in the fourth inning by freshman Anne Bunin. Pitcher Kris Branca gave up six hits including a home run on the way to the loss.

The team never gave up hope, and responded with ten runs on eight hits as they won the second game by a score of 10-4. The offense was led by freshmen Tracy Dale, who went three for three, including a triple and an RBI, and Cheryl Regan, who had three RBI's. Branca achieved a complete game victory.

Fourth year Head Coach Maria DiBernardi is optimistic about this year's team. She hopes to better last year's 13-13 record with her six returning regulars, including three starting pitchers.

"It should be the year we go over the .500 mark," DiBernardi said. "If we lack anything it's offense, and the loss of (Mindy) Kahn (last year's leading hitter) won't help the cause."

Kahn (.483, nine doubles, three triples, 22 RBI) will miss the season due to injury.

File Photo

Karyn Lodise (pictured above) led the Villanova softball team to a 9-4 victory over highly touted West Chester last Saturday.

Men's basketball final statistics

	PTS	AVG	REB	AVG	AST	BLK	STL
Doug West	583	15.8	181	4.9	82	10	36
Mark Plansky	490	13.2	209	5.6	136	4	38
Tom Greis	458	12.4	224	6.1	42	88	10
Kenny Wilson	398	11.4	58	1.7	170	2	37
Gary Massey	291	7.9	120	3.2	48	15	67
Rodney Taylor	282	7.8	214	5.9	17	9	8
Barry Bekkedam	82	2.3	57	1.6	4	19	6
Pat Enright	59	1.7	19	0.5	40	2	7
Rob Tribuiani	10	0.7	7	0.5	2	0	1
Chris Masotti	4	0.3	7	0.5	5	0	1
Tim Muller	2	0.2	6	0.5	0	0	0
Greg Downs	1	0.1	2	0.2	3	2	1

Students celebrate NCAA

Kenny Wilson (far right) celebrates the final 16 win over Kentucky with a few of his good friends shortly after the game, in Birmingham, Al.

AFRICAN SUMMER SAFARI

TARANGIRE NATIONAL PARK • GREAT RIFT VALLEY • SERENGETI PLAINS • NGORONGORO VOLCANO CRATER • LAKE MANYARA • MOUNT KILIMANJARO • ARUSHA PARK • MASAI TRIBESMEN • RARE BIRDS AND WILDLIFE AND MORE.

PRIVATE CAMP WITH THATCHED ROOF TENTS • SWIMMING POOL • ALL AMENITIES AND MEALS • PRIVATE LAND ROVERS WITH OVERHEAD HATCHES • GUIDES AND DRIVERS • GROUPS OR INDIVIDUALS • JULY AND AUGUST 1988

for more information call or write to:

MUTTONTOWN TRAVEL CORP.

Vicki Lazarus 516-921-5840
6800 JERICHO TURNPIKE • SYOSSET, NY 11791

Aubrey Thomas Temporaries'
4th Annual Student Scholarship Program

This Summer
Work & Win $500.

Put your general office skills to work this summer as an Aubrey Thomas Temp and be eligible to win one of twelve scholarships. Gain valuable experience, high pay rates and a chance for financial assistance.

REGISTER NOW
TO WORK AND WIN THIS SUMMER

Midtown Manhattan 212-486-7808
Wall Street, Manhattan 212-732-6100
Office Automation 212-753-8585
Accounting Div., NY 212-751-1166
White Plains, NY 914-683-5200
New City, NY 914-634-0909
East Meadow, LI 516-794-5700
Melville, LI 515-673-0040
Paramus, NJ 201-967-8900
Bloomfield, NJ 201-429-2400
Union, NJ 201-686-2500
Morristown, NJ 201-644-0400
Stamford, CT 203-356-1111
Norwalk, CT 203-846-0390
Philadelphia, PA 215-665-9100
King of Prussia, PA 215-962-0100

Aubrey Thomas

TUNE INTO

WKVU 640AM

Your alternative music station
WKVU will be coming to YOU in your dorm
on APRIL 19
(That's TUESDAY NIGHT)
If we hear YOU listening to us we'll give you a FREE HAIRCUT

Courtesy of:

Talent Jamaica Co.

AND RICHARD & CO.

Relay teams cruise to victory

By TERRY KELLY
Staff Reporter

Over the weekend of April 2 and 3 the Wildcats' men's track team continued on its path to proving their indoor title in the 4 x 800-meter relay was no fluke. The most recent evidence of this was provided by the team at the 26th annual Colonial Relays at William and Mary in Virginia.

At the Colonials, the quartet of Jan Friedli, Aidan O'Regan, Howard Jackson and Mark Sullivan ran away from a strong field to win by eight seconds. Their splits of 1:52.2, 1:50.6, 1:50.6 and 1:51.3 gave them the 4 x 800 victory over New York Tech with a time of 7:25.2.

To further demonstrate the team's strength in the distance events, the team of Sullivan, Tony Valentine, Jackson and Finn Kelly combined splits of 3:00.5, 47.3, 1:58.8 and 4:13.4 to win the distance medley relay with a large nine second margin.

The team's time of 9:54.0 placed them well ahead of the second-place host William and Mary team.

Besides the team's two victories in the distance relays, the team took the runner-up spot in both of the sprint relays they entered.

The sprint medley relay team of Marc Jones, Mark Rainey, Jackson and Kelly ran to second with a combined time of 3:21.0 (splits 21.7, 21.6, 47.9, 1:49.7). In the 4 x 400-meter relay the team of Grant Davis, Jones, Rainey and Valentine combined splits of 48.1, 47.4, 46.8 and 46.7 for their second-place finish. In both relays the margin of defeat was one-tenth of a second, showing just how close the team is to being an all-around powerhouse.

In the individual events, O'Regan had the best individual results. Running in the 800-meter race, the freshman put in a strong performance to take second place just off the pace set by Tom Noble of the New York Athletic Club. The freshman's time also placed him ahead of teammate Mike Seeger, who finished seventh in 1:53.52.

The team's only other results came from Paul DiPersio in the 110-meter high hurdles and the 100-meter dash. He finished fourth in both of his qualifying heats and failed to make it to the finals.

Head Coach Dr. Charles Jenkins had good things to say about the team's efforts, "We had a pretty good showing in Williamsburg, and I'm pleased with the way we are moving in an upward direction. We still have a lot of work to do. Everyone needs to be running faster, and learn to run better as a unit."

Though young, this season is fast approaching its prime, and the Cats' next test will come this week at the Howard University Invitational in Washington, D.C.

Crew teams race to first, second

By KARLA BECKNER
Staff Reporter

The Villanova crew teams rowed crews from Connecticut College and the University of Rochester April 9 on the Schuylkill River.

Connecticut took the men's varsity heavyweight eight race with a 6:02.6 clocking. Villanova's lightweight eight rowed against them, placing second by a length and a half with a 6:08.4 time. Rochester came in third with a 6:10.0.

In the men's varsity heavyweight four with coxswain, Connecticut again crossed the finish line first in 6:51.0 with Villanova close behind in 6:52.7. Rochester was disqualified for fouling the other two boats.

In the lightweight four Rochester was first followed by Villanova in second, Connecticut in third and Villanova's second boat in fourth. 'Nova's novice four outrowed the other crews by a length.

"The team rowed decent races," said Coach Jack St. Claire. "We're on the right track for the season."

Villanova's men's team will row teams from Princeton University and Columbia College tomorrow on Lake Carnegie in Princeton.

Charlie Ryan and Bill McKernan are expected to be a surprise in the pair, while the heavyweight four should fair well as well. The lightweight eight will face some stiff competition rowing Princeton's heavyweight eight.

"There are two different schedules, the Ivy League and Dad Vails," St. Claire said. "One is more difficult than the other. I'd like to see the team race well this weekend."

In the women's race Villanova's varsity eight outrowed Connecticut by nearly two lengths. Villanova finished in 7:00 while Connecticut clocked a 7:07.9. The varsity lightweight four brought in another first-place finish. Nova's novice eight placed third behind Connecticut and Rochester while the Vilanova novice four outrowed Rochester by over 30 seconds.

The women's team is now scheduled to scrimmage Drexel University on the Schuylkill River tomorrow.

Athlete of the Week

GARY SCOTT

This week's Saco East Athlete of the Week is Gary Scott.

Scott, the third basemen for the Wildcats, led 'Nova to two wins over Seton Hall this past week. On Saturday, Scott belted two home runs to help the Cats secure a 12-10 victory. Scott also accounted for three runs and six RBI's in the contest.

The next day Villanova split a double header with Seton Hall. In the loss Scott went two four three from the plate.

In the win, Scott hit his fifth home run of the '88 season. Scott set the record last year for most home runs in a season with 17, and it looks like he is on that pace once again.

Saco East University Sportswear

JACKETS • CAPS • T-SHIRTS • PROMOTIONAL ITEMS
1045 LANCASTER AVE., BRYN MAWR 527-4188

HOMELESS AWARENESS DAY

April 28

EVENT	TIME	PLACE
Toiletry Drive	All Day	Quad
Can Food Drive	All Day	Quad, Dougherty, Connelly
Special Liturgy	12 p.m.	Corr Chapel
Documentaries	All Day	Cinema - Connelly * free admission *
Cook-Out	11 a.m.-2 p.m.	In front of KENNEDY

B-ball surprises many, finishes 24-13

Photo by Nunes

Gary Massey was a major factor in the Wildcats 24-13 season. He will be one of the three returning seniors next year.

By JOHN RICCO
Sports Editor

Heading into the 1987-88 season, doubts about the Villanova men's basketball team abounded. Fans and media alike wondered if the Wildcats, a team which had lost sharpshooter Harold Jensen and had no major recruits, could compete in the very talented Big East and improve on its mediocre 1986-87 mark of 15-16. For Head Coach Roland V. Massimino and the rest of the Wildcats, however, there were no doubts.

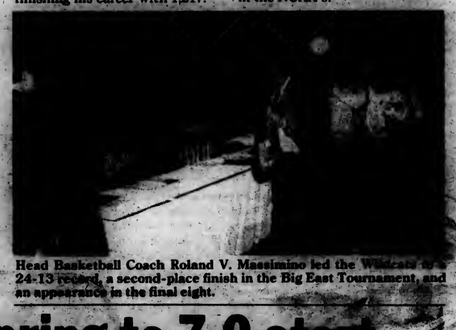
In spite of a tough out-of-conference schedule, and the normal Big East-type competition found within the conference, Villanova was able to quiet all doubters and post some impressive numbers. The Cats amassed a 24-13 overall record, and finished tied for third in the Big East at 9-7.

In tournment action, Villanova won the Josten's Philadelphia Classic and finished runner-up in both the Big East Tournament and the Hawaiian Airlines Maui Classic.

Most impressive, however, was the squad's showing in the season-ending NCAA Tournament where the Cats advanced to the Final Eight before bowing down to the "run and gun" Oklahoma Sooners. 'Nova, expected by most to be quickly eliminated from "March Madness," simply would not die, thanks mostly to the off-court wizardry of Massimino and the on-court heroics of senior Mark Plansky.

"This was without a doubt his (Massimino's) best season," said senior co-captain Pat Enright. "He had only nine scholarship players and he got the most out of their potential."

Surviving more on brains and hustle than anything else, the team posted tournament victories over Arkansas, Illinois and Kentucky. Nicknamed "the Beasts of the East," Villanova advanced farther than any of the other five Big East squads receiving bids in the NCAA's. In addition, the Cats were the only Big East team to defeat all eight other conference foes at least once.



"It was a very successful season," said Plansky. "We had a bunch of overachievers that blended together well under Coach Massimino."

Individually, almost every Wildcat enjoyed a career year in 1988. Plansky, the Big East's basketball Scholar-Athlete of the Year, averaged 13.2 ppg. and 5.6 rpg. for the season. The senior co-captain was also named third team all-conference and became the 31st Wildcat to score 1,000 points, finishing his career with 1,217.

Junior guard Doug West, who became V.U.'s 30th 1000 point-scorer in 1987-88, was named second team all-conference. West was the Wildcats' leading scorer through most of the season averaging 15.8 ppg.

Fellow juniors Gary Massey (7.9 ppg.) and Kenny Wilson (11.4 ppg.) each performed exceptionally this year as well. Wilson became the 32nd Cat to score his 1000th career point, while Massey was honored as the Big East's Defensive Player of the Year.

Villanova's sophomore big men, Tom Greis and Rodney Taylor, both rebounded from disappointing freshman seasons to grab numerous headlines in 1987-88. Greis (12.4 ppg., 6.1 rpg.), a third team All-Big East selection led the conference in blocked shots with 2.7 per game. Taylor (7.8 ppg., 5.9 rpg.) played well despite the continual pain from last season's foot injury, and gave V.U. much needed rebounding help, especially in the NCAA's.

Head Basketball Coach Roland V. Massimino led the Wildcats to a 24-13 record, a second-place finish in the Big East Tournament, and an appearance in the final eight.

Tennis rolls along

By STEVE KIRSCH
Staff Reporter

The Villanova men's tennis team has quietly run their record to a sparkling 14-2 slate over the last three weeks.

The week before Easter Break, the Cats ran their record to 8-0 with a 6-3 win over LaSalle University on March 22, another 6-3 win at Franklin and Marshall the following day, a 6-0 whitewash at Lehigh University on March 24 and a 7-2 win at C.W. Post on Long Island on March 25.

The singles players were key during this streak as No. 1-seed Mike Rouse, No. 4-seed Mike Loughman and No. 5/6-seed Greg Ackerman all ran their singles records to 8-0. Matches at St. John's University and Fordham University were cancelled.

In beating LaSalle, the Cats won all six singles matches. They captured five of six at F&M, then again won all six singles matches at Lehigh. No doubles matches were played at Lehigh.

The following week, 'Nova suffered their first defeat at the hands of rival Temple University. They took a 7-2 defeat at the Owls' courts on March 28 with only Rouse and Loughman able to pull off victories. They remained undefeated by scores of 6-2, 6-4 and 1-6, 6-3, 6-2, respectively.

(Continued on page 37)

Golfers spring to 7-0 start

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

After a fall season filled with inconsistency and ultimately disappointment, the Villanova golf team could only go one direction in this new spring season — up.

Right now, the Cats are soaring.

In the first two weeks of the season, Villanova has won three triangulars, as well as a dual meet, for an impressive 7-0 record through April 10. The Cats also placed 10th in a strong field of 27 teams at the Navy Invitational. According to senior captain Chris Cappello, it was just a matter of time and experience.

"This fall, we had a lot of young players who did not have a lot of experience. It was a trial and error period and it took time for the young players to emerge. Now, they've added a new dimension to the team," said Cappello. "Everyone is playing great golf and we expect to do really well at Princeton (the Princeton Invitational) and Easterns (the Eastern Invitational)."

In their first match of the year, a triangular hosted by St. Joseph's University March 28, Villanova defeated a pair of Big Five rivals, St. Joe's and LaSalle University. Their unusually high team score of 420 was indicative of the cold and windy playing conditions. Sophomore Todd Rongaus led 'Nova with a 79.

Two days later at Edgemont Country Club, the Cats easily outdistanced host Drexel University and Philadelphia Textile with a fantastic score of 383. Again, Rongaus grabbed medalist honors with an even par round of 70. Freshmen Kevin Rogerson and Mark Dougherty were close behind with rounds of 72 and 74, respectively.

On April 1, 'Nova traveled south to Annapolis, Md. for the Navy Invitational. The Cats finished a respectable tenth in the 27-team field, despite the unfamiliar surroundings.

"We didn't know the course and we putted poorly," explained Cappello. "The greens were slick and true, but we were used to shaggy, slow greens. There were a lot of really good teams there,

(Continued on page 36)

Cats belt Seton Hall

By DOUG SCANCARELLA
Sports Editor

The first two weeks of the 1988 baseball season were disastrous at best. The Cats, who placed second in the Big East in 1987, could do no better than 6-11 in the first couple of weeks of '88. The team was flat and was not playing consistently, but the Big East games had not begun so there was plenty time for improvement.

Head Coach George Bennett said, "Nobody on the team was playing up to their potential and we knew we had to improve before the league games." And improve they did.

As soon as the league games began the Wildcats took off, winning seven out of eight Big East contests and improving their overall record to 18-14.

The Cats cruised past Pittsburgh twice, 10-3 and 23-0, and then swept three straight from Georgetown. The biggest wins came this past weekend when Villanova took two out of three games from the 1987 Big East champs, Seton Hall. Villanova had not won a three-game series against Seton Hall since 1984, but this Gary Scott-led Wildcat team took care of that.

Scott carried 'Nova past the Pirates in the series opener with two hits, three runs and six RBI's. Scott's two hits were back-to-back home runs, one of which was a sixth inning grand slam. Junior pitcher Rafeal Novoa collected the victory as Villanova won, 12-10.

The following day, 'Nova split a twin bill with the Pirates. 'Nova stumbled in the first game as Seton Hall ran off 13 runs while V.U. could only muster three. Maurice Vaughn belted two home runs for the Pirates.

The Wildcats finished up the series with a 16-11 triumph. Once again Scott paced the Cats. The Sophomore third baseman Gary Scott led Villanova's baseball team to two wins over Seton Hall this weekend.

(Continued on page 36)

Photo by Nunes

the Villanovan

Vol. 63, No. 20 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | April 22, 1988

Election nullified

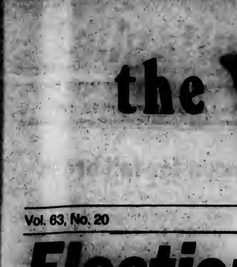
New election to be held in September

By E.H. McELDOWNEY
Staff Reporter

The April 12 elections for Student Government president have been declared null and void. New elections are to be scheduled for the fall of 1988, according to the report of the Elections Commission and Dr. Richard A. Neville, vice president for Student Life.

The report also stated that presidential candidates Sean Closkey and Terise Fusco will be eligible to run in the fall election.

Phil Brach, Student Government president, will remain in his position until a new president is elected.



The Elections Commission, which is made up of representatives from student organizations, submitted its recommendation to Neville and found "that the electoral process was irreparably damaged with regard to fairness."

The report also stated that "it is our [the election commission's] principal desire, however, that this decision send a clear message regarding the importance of ethical behavior in all facets of Villanova life."

Neville accepted the recommendation of the commission in its entirety.

According to Mike Delzotti, elections commissioner, there will be a new Elections Commission established for the election which will take place in the fall.

The presidential election results, which were impounded on April 12, will not be released and have been destroyed. "This election was ruled void, therefore the numbers were ruled void," Delzotti said.

(Photo by Corcoran)

Dr. Richard A. Neville accepted the Election Commission's recommendation that the elections for Student Goverament president be declared null and void.

Closkey expressed frustration with the decision. "We promised these so-called apathetic people [Villanova students] that if you fought the system and worked within the system, results would happen. There would be a change, and we had them believing our message. We came out of this election and instead we are believing in their message, which is 'nothing changes in this school,'" he said.

Closkey said he did not know if he would run again in the fall.

Fusco appeared satisfied with the decision of the commission. "They made a good decision. If they would let the election pass, then it would say that anything goes in elections. We can't have that," she commented.

Fusco said that she would "most likely" run again in the fall election.

Brach also said he is "seriously considering running" for president in September.

(Continued on page 7)

(Photo by Shafie)

April showers bring May flowers ... and final exams, as Villanova students will soon realize.

Cabinet regroups after turmoil

By MAUREEN STAPLETON
Staff Reporter

As a result of the recent nullification of the presidential election, current Student Government President Phil Brach is "seriously considering running" for re-election in September.

The Student Government executive cabinet met Monday to "reconcile the differences and come to an agreement for the good of the organization," according to Mark Holobetz, secretary of Student Government's department of academic affairs.

Brach said that he was "pleased at the cooperation and concern" shown at the cabinet meeting. He admitted there have been "interpersonal conflicts between my cabinet members."

Brach took responsibility for not taking care of the problems but also commented, "The rest of the cabinet is equally responsible."

He later added, "To some extent it shows that we're human ... it reflects poorly on the Student Government, but I think we can easily change that."

In response to the election and the events surrounding it, Brach said, "As far as the election was concerned, it was unfortunate how things happened."

Michelle Ciccolo, secretary of the department of internal affairs, responded, "There was a lot of sadness about the whole thing [the campaign] on both sides." Ciccolo was a high-ranking member of presidential candidate Sean Closkey's campaign.

Holobetz also said that the election and the events surrounding it were "unfortunate." He said, "The fact that two cabinet members ran against each other is not wrong ... we [the cabinet] failed to come to an agreement on perspective."

The perspective concerns the credit a leader may or may not take concerning projects. Brach asserted, "Everyone in Student

(Continued on page 7)

PEC critiques academics

Report calls for cutbacks in Graduate School

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

Editor's note: The scope and depth of the Program Evaluation Committee's report has made coverage of the document itself a large task. As a result, comments and reactions from the University community will mostly be reported during next week's edition of the Villanovan. Coverage of other areas of the report, such as recommendations for the University's support programs, will also be done next week. All are invited to send comments on the report as "letters to the editor."

The Program Evaluation Committee [PEC] recommended in its final report that 15 academic programs, mostly from the Graduate School, be terminated.

The program cutbacks illustrated the committee's belief that the University's main purpose is undergraduate education. The PEC also said that some graduate programs have weak admission standards and are not challenging enough.

The committee's decisions stemmed mainly from the University's Mission Statement and Planning Assumptions, which the PEC was charged to follow by the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president.

The two documents "clearly stipulate that undergraduate education is the primary mission of the University," in the view of the PEC.

"Equally clear, in PEC's view, is that these documents [the Mission Statement and Planning Assumptions] view graduate study as secondary to undergraduate study," stated the committee's report.

The PEC also concluded that, according to the two documents, "teaching is the primary duty" of the University's faculty and

(Continued on page 6)

Intellectual climate suffering

By JENNIFER REIDY
Assistant News Editor

"PEC [Program Evaluation Committee] has concerns about the quality of the intellectual climate on campus as evidenced by ... a noisy library, noisy dormitories, the cutting of classes by students and faculty before and after holidays [and] serious grade inflation," according to the final PEC report released earlier this month.

The report continues to cite "less than challenging courses, syllabi, assignments and tests" as factors which reflect poorly on the University's intellectual environment.

The PEC calls these concerns "hardly unique to Villanova."

However, the report maintains that "PEC feels very strongly that the lack of uniformly high standards and expectations coupled with substantial grade inflation represent serious academic threats to Villanova and that the University must move vigorously to address them."

The PEC emphasized their concerns with a statement from the National Commission on Excellence in Education. "The average graduate of our schools and colleges today is not as well-educated as the average graduate of 25 or 35 years ago," stated the commission.

Dr. Charles L. Cherry, associate vice president for Academic Affairs, commented that the intellectual atmosphere at Villanova has gotten better, but could still use improvement.

"It's a question of the students themselves to generate interest with a good kind of peer pressure," said Cherry. There is enough opportunity in forms such as lectures and speakers for the students to pursue thoughtful activities," Cherry explained.

In order to improve the quality of the intellectual climate, the PEC suggests that the University

(Continued on page 6)

(Photo by Shafie)

Dr. Angelo Armenti, chairperson of the Program Evaluation Committee.

Villanovan wins first-place award

The Villanovan has been awarded, for the sixth year in a row, First Place with Special Merit by the American Scholastic Press Association.

Best sports coverage was presented to the 1987 sports editors Stephen Schlager, John Ricco and Doug Scancarella for the Nov. 6, 1987 issue of the Villanovan.

The Villanovan was also awarded best editorial for "Kennedy Situation — Appease Computers" by the 1987 Editorial Board of Mary Charest, Joanne Cimbal and Susan Toye.

The Villanovan competed with other newspapers at institutions throughout the nation with enrollments of at least 2,500 students. Congratulations to the entire 1987 newspaper staff for their talents, hard work and dedication.

INSIDE

EDITORIALS: Responsibilities of college newspapers....p. 11

FEATURES: Students see reality of prison .....p. 15

ENTERTAINMENT: "Pippin" plays at Vasey .....p. 21

SPORTS: Baseball team clinches tournament berth .....p. 32

F.Y.I.

April 23

Gospel ensemble

The Villanova Gospel Ensemble will present its 2nd Annual Spring Concert. The concert will be held in the Main Chapel at 8 p.m. Guest choirs include Overbrook High School, Central High School and Widener University. All Villanova University students and faculty members are invited to attend.

April 25

Clothing drive

Army R.O.T.C. will hold a clothing drive to benefit the civilians of Honduras. Please be generous with your donations. All clothing from winter coats to shorts is needed. It will be in the Connelly Center Main Lobby from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Chi Alpha

Chi Alpha, the Communication Arts Honor Society, will elect new officers for the 1988-89 school year in Bartley Hall, Room 107 from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m. All members are eligible to run for office. An informal "intern night" will also be held during the meeting.

April 28

Marketing Society

The Marketing Society will hold its annual dinner at the Mile Post Inn. Sign up in Bartley Cafeteria next to the Marketing Society Board before Wed. Any questions or problems, contact any officer. The price is $5 with a cash bar.

Prayer service

There will be a prayer service for the victims of Apartheid at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Chapel. Dr. Meghan Kheita will be speaking. Everyone is welcome to attend.

April 29

Anti-Apartheid march

There will be an anti-Apartheid march starting at 1 p.m. in the Center for Peace and Justice. Please join this march for justice and show your concern.

April 30

Pledge of Resistance

Members of the Pledge of Resistance and the Coalition in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador (CISPES) will fan out across Philadelphia and its suburbs to talk to Philadelphians about United States military activity in Central America.

As part of a "Reach Out to Our Neighbors" campaign, anti-intervention activists will distribute information packets on Central America and collect signatures on petitions at tables marked by brightly colored balloons and banners. They will be in shopping malls and public areas in the North, Kensington, the Northwest, the Northeast, South and West Philadelphia, and in Center City.

"We hope to make Central America a human issue for people in the United States," said Sharer, "and to demonstrate that political activism on Central America saves lives."

For information on the "Reaching Out to Our Neighbors" day, contact the Pledge of Resistance office at 438-9656 or the Coalition in Solidarity with the Peoples of El Salvador at 546-9258.

Ski Club

Damage deposits from the Killington Ski Trip can be collected from the Student Activities Office in Dougherty Hall. Anyone interested in organizing a Villanova Ski Team can contact Stephen Eid at 941-0609.

Cancun for fall break

Students, faculty and staff are invited to join the trip to Cancun during fall break, October 17 to 21. Sponsored by the Graduate School Alumni Association, this trip includes roundtrip air transportation from Philadelphia, accommodations at Tucan Cun Beach (a beachfront hotel), daily breakfast, roundtrip transfers, hotel taxes and tips. The cost is $469. To obtain a flyer about reservations, call Dr. Joseph Kinney, in the English department, at 645-4799.

Photo contest

The Association of Commuting Students is holding a contest for a photo which best represents some aspect of commuting life. The winning photo will receive $25 and the picture will appear in the 1988-89, first, edition of the commuter wall calendar. All photos must be in black and white and should be dropped off at the A.C.S. office in 215 Dougherty Hall by May 5.

Football managers needed

Football managers are needed for spring football from April 22 to 30, and for fall football from Aug. 15 through Nov. 19 to cover practices, home games and away games. For information contact Bob Lambert, Equipment Room at 645-4124.

HOMELESS AWARENESS DAY

* Sponsored by The Villanova Committee for the Philadelphia Homeless *

April 28

EVENT	TIME	PLACE
Toiletry Drive	All Day	Quad
Can Food Drive	All Day	Quad, Dougherty, Connelly
Special Liturgy	12 p.m.	Corr Chapel
Documentaries	All Day	Cinema - Connelly
		* free admission *
Cook-Out	11 a.m.-2 p.m.	In front of KENNEDY
Speaker — Mr. Ferrell: 'Trevor's Father'	8 p.m.	Villanova Rm. Free Admission

Raffle — 1st Prize: 1988-1989 Basketball Tickets
2nd Prize: A Porsche Jacket

Kennedy, Dougherty, Connelly

Tailgating change possible

Kegs may be banned from pre-game festivities

By LAURA STEVENS
Staff Reporter

The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, is considering a change in University tailgating policy by prohibiting kegs for alcohol consumption during the pre-game party.

"I don't want students to perceive this as a heavy-handed clamping down on the fun," Stack explained. "We just want to keep the pre-game events as calm and controlled as possible."

Stack explained that tailgating evolved on its own after football was revived. "There was no parking organization and in a crisis no emergency vehicle could get through," he said.

The "pre-game party" also continued after the game and defeated the purpose of tailgating. "It seemed crazy to have the game at all when people weren't coming," Stack said.

Also, the University administration and the Radnor Township police have met in the past to discuss the "question of tailgating." The problems discussed included the crisis potential of the congested parking lots and of intoxicated people crossing Lancaster Avenue, the litter in the parking lots and the image of the University, according to Stack.

"One option was to not have tailgating at all," Stack recalled. "But tailgating is part of our football culture, and we decided to give it a chance. So we moved the tailgate to Sheehan Beach and encouraged the party to end by game time."

Stack judged the present situation to be an improvement over the past, but is still not at ease. "I never feel good about a tailgate until 24 hours later, when I get no accident reports," he said.

(File photo)
The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, is considering prohibiting kegs of alcohol consumption at University pre-game tailgates.

Gary Bonas, assistant director of Student Activities and advisor to the tailgate management team, agreed. "I'm not happy with the alcohol abuse. We'd like to encourage responsible behavior even while the students are having fun," he said.

John Price, head of the tailgate management team, also recognized the flaws in the present situation. "I admit there is too much alcohol on the field. We would all like to make it more of a social time than an occasion for people just to get drunk," he commented.

Stack justified his plans to prohibit kegs at the tailgates by saying, "One of the main problems was that even Manny, Moe and Jack could sign for a keg. Some groups were very loosely organized, and they couldn't really be held accountable for what they did."

The change in policy will probably lower the amount of alcohol on the field, according to Stack. He said, "Theoretically people can buy just as much beer in cans as in kegs, but the laws of economics predict that it will not happen.

"There is also a different mentality about cans. You can take cans home and save them, but people feel obliged to 'kill the keg' and not waste beer, so they often drink more than they really want to," he concluded.

"This [the change in policy] won't make my job any easier. With the kegs, you only have to remove the tap to end the tailgate. There will be a lot more litter and people will probably be upset at paying two and a half times as much money for the same amount of beer," he explained.

Price said, however, that the University as a whole will benefit in the long run from the change. "I'm willing to try it," he said.

"I'm optimistic that the students will cooperate with the school," Bonas commented.

Presidential committee begins interview process

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

Interviews of applicants for University president began Thursday, according to Student Government President Phil Brach, a member of the University president recommendations committee.

Brach said that so far the committee has written a letter to solicit resumes and applications, but that after the interviews, committee meetings will increase. The committee has met three times so far, according to Brach.

Brach said the interviews are basically the first step in the selection process. Recommendations made by the committee will be referred by the Provincial to the Board of Trustees, which will most likely make a decision at its summer meeting in July.

Thomas F. Devine, Esq., chairperson of the recommendation committee, said the committee received "a reassuring number" of applicants. He said the interviews will be conducted by the committee as a whole.

Devine did not know how long it would take for the interviews to be completed, as he did not know if there would be "a desire for re-interviews."

While Devine admitted the goal of the Board of Trustees is to make a decision at the July meeting, he explained that the committee reports directly to the Provincial, who will report to the Board of Trustees in turn.

"We will report [to the Provincial] when we have finished deliberations," said Devine.

He added that while the committee hoped to reach a decision "quickly," this would only be done "consummate with a complete and careful search."

Brach said he felt that the presence of six Board of Trustees members on the committee would have "a significant influence" on the Board's decision, as these members would be able to relay the committee's discussions.

Devine, however, said one would have "to draw one's own conclusions" about what effect the six Board members would have.

Brach also said that discussion has not arisen yet as to whether the committee's recommendations will be listed in order of preference. "It is just a recommendation, I know that much, but how we word our recommendation, I think, will be an interesting discussion," he said. Devine reiterated that this discussion has not yet been broached.

Brach added, "There's one thing I would say [about] all this talk about predetermined [selection of president] ... in my experience with the committee there has been no notion whatsoever of any predetermined outcome."

(File photo)
Student Government President Phi Brach

Sigma Nu implements strict alcohol policy

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

Sigma Nu fraternity was cited for violations by their national office early in the semester, according to Chris Listo, the fraternity's president.

According to Listo, the violations occurred the first weekend after Christmas break when the fraternity held an open party which more than 100 people attended. Aside from the initial admission charge for non-members, the fraternity offered both tequila shots and keg beer. A local band also played that evening; part of the admissions charge covered this entertainment.

Listo said problems arose when two non-fraternity members had to be taken to Bryn Mawr Hospital emergency room by their St. Mary's Hall resident assistant because they had consumed too much alcohol.

Both students had been taken home by Listo, a member of the 10-person sober committee provided by the fraternity for rides home.

"From what I've heard now — I wasn't at Bryn Mawr Hospital — while the one gentleman was being taken care of by the doctors, the one who hadn't drunk as much started getting rowdy with the nurses and the doctors, cursing at them and bicking," said Listo.

Chris Sperduto, a brother of Sigma Nu, added, "I think they wanted to take a blood test and he didn't want it. He thought it would get him in trouble."

Listo said he was "notified of problems with the University about a week and a half afterwards," as well as being contacted by the national chapter.

"A fraternity function is more than just having a good time. It's watching out for everyone's welfare."
Chris Listo, Sigma Nu fraternity president

"The entire party is basically in violation of the Sigma Nu 'Risk Reduction' policy, which was fairly unclear to all the officers at the time of the party ... [because] it's a new policy," he explained.

Sperduto continued, "Most of the fraternities on campus have the same types of parties, but since nothing serious ever happened, no one has taken notice. Now that our national fraternity notices, now they're strictly implementing [the policy] and now it's a necessary piece of our fraternity instead of an additional piece of our fraternity."

Listo said the national office has placed Sigma Nu under an advisory board of alumni officers. The new "Risk Reduction" policy is "strictly followed" for liability purposes.

Sperduto explained, "We're not under suspension, we're under an advisory board of alumni, but we still have our own charter. We haven't gotten our charter taken away."

According to Listo, Sigma Nu is on indefinite probation until "early fall" [his prediction] or "until the alumni board feels we're responsible enough.

"Any infraction and we'll lose our charter immediately," he said.

Listo said of any University sanction, "Basically the University's attitude was to give the responsibility of punishing us to national." He said he could not

(Continued on page 7)

In the News

Sunshine Day tomorrow

Approximately 130 underprivileged children will come to campus for a mini-carnival on Sunshine Day, scheduled for tomorrow from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The annual event will take place in the St. Mary's Hall gymnasium and the surrounding grounds.

Sunshine Day is sponsored by Project Sunshine, an organization of about 175 student volunteers who visit children, the disabled, elderly and needy in the community on a regular basis.

Under the auspices of the University's office for Social Action, Project Sunshine sends out vans daily filled with student volunteers who travel to 12 different agencies around the Delaware Valley. They visit hospitals, nursing homes, schools for troubled youths and centers for the handicapped.

The event will feature a ferris wheel and other rides, a magician, a performance by the Villanova Pep band, a caricature artist, face-painting and spin-art booths, a visit from "Care Bear" and the Villanova Wildcat, Sunshine Day T-shirts and games and prizes.

For more information, call 645-4079.

K.C.H.

Business students win awards

Four Villanova students won first prize in the International Business Competition at Hofstra University March 26, according to Dr. Adolph Butkys, marketing professor.

The winning students were Kerri Turano in advertising, Mike Attiani in sales management, and Steven Brocchini and Bill Horvath in the marketing research division.

Villanova competed against other colleges such as Hofstra University, Long Island University and St. John's University.

Butkys, moderator and coach of the teams, commented that he was "very proud of the students." He added that this is the second year in a row that Villanova students have won first prize.

D.R.

Abzug to speak on politics

Former New York Congresswoman Bella Abzug will speak on "Women in Politics" Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Villanova Room of Connelly Center.

Abzug is known for her civil rights and peace movement efforts. A graduate of Columbia Law School, she helped to draft the Civil Rights Act of 1964. In the late 1970s, she was co-chairperson of the National Advisory Committee on Women. She later founded the nonpartisan National Women's Political Caucus, which supports women running for office.

The lecture is sponsored by the Villanova Student Union's lectures committee. Tickets are $2. For more information, call 645-7280.

K.C.H.

Open house held for minorities

By E.H. McELDOWNEY
Staff Reporter

The third annual Villanova University minority student open house was held April 16 in the Connelly Center Cinema.

The open house was attended by about 215 people, including 68 families, as well as members of the Villanova community.

Minority and non-minority undergraduates, faculty members, Dr. Richard A. Neville, vice-president for Student Life, and the Rev. Harry J. Erdlen, O.S.A., dean of admissions, also attended.

Denise Houser, Villanova's minority recruiter, said that the cinema was "more than filled with people interested in seeing the school become a more diversified place."

According to Houser, this year's open house had the best response of the three she has presented. "No one would believe the number of people who came," she commented.

"The open house is a chance to acquaint accepted minority students to Villanova, for them to see Villanova for what it is. It's a chance for them to catch the Villanova fever," she said.

The open house activities included presentations from both faculty and students, a reception and campus tours.

The presentations were given by students from different majors and different schools. It reflected a balance of minority and non-minority, as well as male and female, students.

These presentations were followed by a reception where the families had an opportunity to

(Continued on page 4)

Professors speak on presidential race

Agree that November's election vote is currently too close to call

By THOMAS BRUGGER
Staff Reporter

Three political science professors recently interviewed agreed that the national presidential race will be close and that it is too early to predict an outcome.

Dr. Colleen Sheehan commented, "I don't think either party right now is clearly stronger. It depends partly upon who the Democrats choose as [a] running mate ... They've got to bring in the more moderate element of their party."

She also commented on the influence that President Ronald Reagan's popularity might have in helping Vice President George Bush win the election. She said that there is some disillusionment among Reagan's supporters. These supporters do not necessarily see Bush as any stronger than Reagan.

In general, she summarized that "[Reagan's popularity] will help Bush more than it will hurt [Democratic presidential hopeful Gov. Michael] Dukakis." She suspects that Bush will be victorious, but she qualifies this opinion by emphasizing the importance of the candidates' running mate selections.

Dr. Justin J. Green, speaking of the characteristics of a normal election, said that individual issues and vice presidential choices have "little to do" with the outcome.

He noted that "leaders are saying as little about specific policies as possible ... the winner will be the one who said the least."

Green claimed that the crucial element in this election, as has been seen in the past, will be the contribution of independents. These Americans account for less than 15 percent of the total vote, but, according to Green, "explain almost always the winning and losing."

In discussing this presidential race, Green acknowledged that Reagan's popularity may have assisted Bush in the party primaries, but not in the general elections. He added, "It is very rare for a sitting vice president to win an election."

Dukakis' success so far in the Democratic circle is explained by Green, in part, by his "tendency to move toward the center of the electorate," an important asset for the candidate. All in all, though, he concluded that "it looks like it'll be a close election."

Dr. Robert W. Langran also devalued most issues as having any effect on the outcome in November. If anything beyond personality plays a part, it will be the economy, because "things aren't really that great," he said.

Langran said that the "Democrats are not putting up the best candidate they could have." He added that New York Gov. Mario Cuomo could have "breezed in," if he had run.

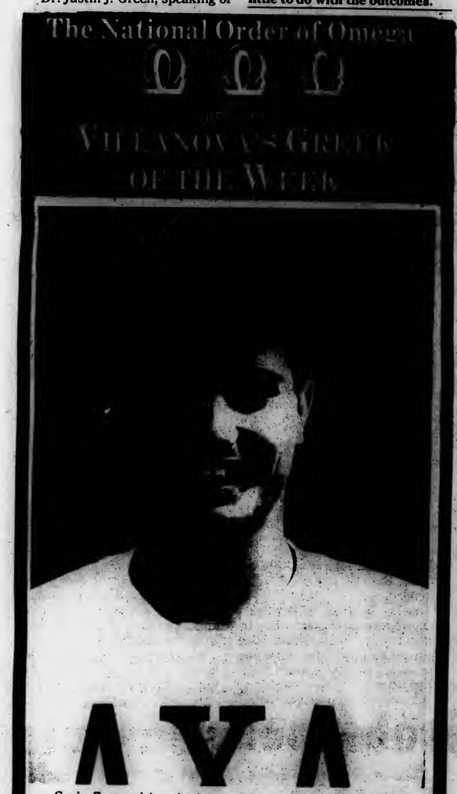
In viewing the Republicans, he surmised that "people loyal to Reagan may throw their support to Bush," but that the vice president was only the "most electable" candidate of the party.

He said he feels that "it's time for the pendulum to swing ... for the Democrats to take power." He predicted a close election, with Dukakis emerging triumphant.

(File photo)
Dr. Justin J. Green, political science professor, said that normally in national presidential elections individual issues have little to do with the outcomes.

Minority open house

(Continued from page 3)



speak to current students on a one-to-one basis and ask questions about Villanova.

Michelle Jackson, a high school senior from Chester, Pa., said the open house was "very informative and interesting. It answered all my questions. I left feeling very positive."

Houser said, "The open house is an effective tool for recruitment. It challenges the stereotypes the new students might have and lets them ask important questions and get answers."

She commended the students who helped with the open house.

She concluded, "Many new students said they would be definitely coming."

Craig Zappetti is a junior working toward a dual degree in accounting and communications, and comes to Villanova from Port Washington, N.Y. A brother of the Lamda Chi Alpha fraternity since his freshman year, Craig has held a variety of positions within his fraternity including IFC representative for two years and secretary.

Craig currently serves as the president of Lambda Chi Alpha. In addition to being a representative to the Interfraternity Council, Craig headed up the Greek Study Commission for the IFC and is a member of the order of Omega.

Outside of Greek life, Craig has a wide variety of activities and interests from Balloon Day to hang gliding. Recently Craig organized Lambda Chi's "Battle of the Bands," which raised between $1,500 and $2,000 for the Center for Early Childhood Services.

In recognition of all of his contributions to the Villanova community, the Order of Omega chooses Craig Zappetti as Greek of the Week.

Honor society inducts new Villanova members

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

The Villanova Chapter of the Honor Society of Phi Kappa Phi inducted 186 new members Sunday in the Connelly Center.

The society's new officers were also installed. They include Dr. Helen K. Lafferty, assistant to the dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, as president, Dr. Theresa Valiga, nursing professor, as president-elect, and Dr. Margaret T. Clark, commerce and finance professor, as secretary-treasurer.

The society's eligibility requirements include being in the top 10 percent of the senior class and the top 5 percent of the junior class. Law and graduate students were nominated by their colleges for scholastic achievement.

Inductees from the school of arts include Cynthia J. Agresta, Christian J. Alfonsi, Peter T. Bauer, Joseph T. Black, Timothy C. Bloom, Jennifer A. Brekhus, Patricia A. Brown, R. Michael Bullotta, Joanne Caccavale, Ines B. Calderon, Diane P. Carman, Maria E. Chiappetta, Christine A. Cooney, Pamela B. Coyle and Theresa M. Cresanti.

Others include Virginia L. Davis, Maria R. De Santo, Thomas DeMarco, Moira H. Devlin, Wade D. DiCosmo, Kathy S. Diesl, Maureen A. Doherty, Marybeth G. Donahue, Heidi M. Donziger, Susan M. Dougherty, Robert A. Duggan, Heidi M. Egner, Paul L. Fitzgerald, Rae A. Force, Catherine A. France, Christina M. Frankino, Tamar Fruchtman, Julie K. Gargula, Jacqueline Gentile, Andrea B. Granitz, Kevin A. Hecht and Nancy F. Hensler.

Also inducted were Theresa C. Jones, Sheila L. Kearns, Alice I. Kelley, Margaret A. Klucsarits, R. Brad Koerner, Katherine J. Krackeler, Jon E. Lemole, Nancy L. McGrath, Mary L. McHale, Ellen G. Minzner, John M. Misselwitz, Janeen Olsen, April Peterson, Lisa J. Pezzano, Mark A. Pirritano, Joseph C. Polach, Janet M. Rothenhoefer, Christina M. Sadorf, Michelle M. Shanahan and Maureen C. Suwalski.

More inductees include Joseph C. Tenaglia Jr., Susan E. Tolve, Mary K. Toner, Marina C. Tsatalis, Mark C. Voelker, Lynn C. Watts, Christine A. Wnuk and Nancy A. Ziganto.

Inductees from the College of Commerce and Finance include Laura M. Adornetto, Jeanette P. Bove, Gregory A. Caione, Alfred J. Carlson III, Mark A. Cuthbertson, Diane M. D'Amico, Nancy K. Duncan, Michael C. Dyson, Jeffrey W. Farkas, Linda C. Ferrara, Elizabeth A. Franke, Glenn A. Gabris, Patricia A. Geisel, Teresa Giancristofaro, Carolyn R. Giunco, Geralyn A. Henry, Cynthia Jelinek and Stephen Kogut.

Others include Matthew T. Lawrence, Peter J. Licastro, Brian F. McCaffrey, Eileen C. McGinley, Anthony M. Medori, Karen E. Mikush, Alice Morrissey, Lisa N. Orrson, Denise E. Pelliciari, Kevin M. Rulis, Christopher P. Sapsis, Patricia Lea Schaeffer, Karen M. Schweiger, David P. Scott, Mark E. Sieb, Paul J. Stroud, Michael J. Thancred, Lisa J. VanQuekelberg, Daniel A. Walker, J. David Walsh, Mari E. Wright and Jennifer M. Zack.

Engineering majors inducted include Eric D. Aho, Michael J. Bonella, Michael J. Brace, Peter M. Carney, Charles J. Catania Jr., Russell J. Ceccola, Peter S. Clerico, Kevin P. Conroy Jr., Paul J. Crann Jr., Mark J. Delp, Dennis J. Greene, F. Gregory Guerra, David A. Huffman, Gustavo A. Lopez Perez, Sheila M. McGlynn, Venkatapathi R. Nallapa, Mark A. Oberholzer, Ellen C. Pensick, Christopher M. Perrotto and Anthony M. Pisciotti.

Faculty members inducted were Elaine E. Beletz, nursing professor, Sterling F. Delano, chairperson of the English department, John H. Durnin of the education department and John Ih-Sen Hsu of the management department.

Graduate students inducted into the society are Eileen R. Cassidy, Barbara A. Colantuono, Martin F. Connell, Kenneth J.G. DeCarlo, Barbara A. Giuffrida, Francis P. Hertzog, Linda B. Maxwell, Marianne E. Monaco, Karen L. Reynolds, Melanie D. Rittenhouse, Melody A. Templeton, Ravindra P. Tetambe and Lynne B. Van Zandt.

Law students include Jennifer L. Hilliard, Thomas H. Kukowski, Kristine Y. Schmidt and Thomas M. Smith.

Nursing students include Westley W. Byrne, Michelle M. DeSanctis, Nancy L. Dzwonczyk, Karen E. Larsen, Jean D. Moore, Mary L. Nagle, Nancy Chui-Wah Pang, Agnes M. Rast, Stacey H. Rubin and Regina M. Scharle.

Science students include Rita E. Ciccariello, Donna M. Cicirello, David J. Echeverria, David A. Hinkle, Joseph K. Hofmeister, Paul J. Kiesel, Guy S. Millin, Catherine J. Musike, Melinda S. New, Juliette K. Orr and Michele C. Varano.

University College students are Beverly A. Bonhage, Barbara A. Cawley, Jane B. Ellis, Ernest P. Frederick Jr., Kenneth R. Knobloch, Annette M. Magruder, Robert J. McAveney, Irena B. Merluzzi and Glenn R. Nunemaker.

Nursing student awarded

By DEBBIE GROSS
Staff Reporter

Cindy Rich, a junior nursing major, was elected president of the National Student Nursing Association [NSNA] last week.

She was selected during a NSNA convention, which was held April 4-10 in Pittsburgh, Pa. There were 1,500 student nurses from various parts of the nation in attendance.

Rich has been involved in the Villanova chapter of SNAP [Student Nursing Association of Pennsylvania] for the past three years. She was the SNAP freshman representative during 1985-86 and was SNAP's state level vice president and convention planning chairperson during 1986-87.

Rich was also NSNA's National Level Nominations Committee chairperson in 1986 as well as its Resolution Committee chairperson in 1987.

In addition to her nursing positions, Rich has been actively involved in Villanova's New Student Orientation Program for three years. She was an administrative assistant in 1985 and an orientation counselor in 1987, and will be one in 1988.

Rich said of her election, "When I am asked 20 years from now, when I was the most terrified, I will say it was the day I ran for president of NSNA, but when I am asked about the greatest, most wonderful day of my life, my answer will be the same."

In the future, Rich plans for a career as a nurse in an oncology unit, in which she will work with terminally ill children.

In addition to her national candidacy, Rich is the recipient of the Helene Fuld Fellowship for Oncological Nursing.

For this award, the top 100 nursing students nationwide were selected after a rigorous application process and a nomination from the college's dean.

These students will be attending the International Conference on Cancer Nursing in London, England from Sept. 1-10. Rich will be representing Villanova on this all-expense-paid trip.

Ticket sales cause chaos

By CAROLYN R. MIRABILE
Staff Reporter

On March 24, misinformation concerning the sale of Senior Dinner Dance tickets caused a "panic" among students in the Connelly Center, according to the assistant director of the Connelly Center.

At 6:30 a.m., students were waiting outside the Connelly Center for tickets. "The tickets were supposed to go on sale at 10 a.m. but since there were so many people waiting in line, we decided to start selling them around 9 a.m.," said John Price, president of the Villanova Union.

Students in line were given tickets with numbers on them so that the line would be orderly. But after the ticket window opened, students began pushing forward in the line.

According to the assistant director of Connelly Center, "students heard rumors that there would only be 300 sets of tickets sold.

The assistant director later announced to the crowd that one person from each table of five couples could purchase the tickets for the entire table.

Although this broke up some of the crowd, some students still feared that they would not get any tickets.

Around 11:30 a.m., the line was so uncontrollable, the ticket window had to be closed. The assistant director said, "For the last eight years there has never been a problem like this before." According to Price, "Father Stack told us to just stop selling the tickets before someone got hurt."

While the window was closed, the Union discussed what should be done about the crowd. It ultimately decided to straighten the line out by blocking the sides off so that no one could push forward in the line, and it handed out more tickets with numbers on them to keep the students in order.

After the initial 510 sets of tickets were sold, more students were put on a waiting list. The Union decided that it would sell an additional 90 sets of tickets between April 6 to 8 to those who were on the waiting list. But as of April 18, there were still a few more sets of tickets left.

Price said, "The Adams Mark [Hotel] initially would only give us a room big enough for 1,020 people. But since there was such an overwhelming demand for tickets, they agreed to give us an additional room for 90 more couples."

Those who were on the waiting list will be seated in another room adjacent to the main dining room while dinner is served. After the dinner, they will be allowed to enter the main dining room.

Several students complained that they waited in line for over six hours and did not get tickets.

One senior said, "The lack of publicity concerning ticket prices and availability caused a panic among the students." He said he felt that the Union should have sent letters to the seniors to find out how many people were interested in attending the dance. He recommended that the lines should have been blocked off so that people would have been unable to push forward.

Price added, "The Union will definitely be looking into alternative ticket sale methods next year." The Senior Dinner Dance will be held Saturday April 23.

Older students flock to college campuses

By JOHN M. CHEPEGA
Staff Reporter

"Forty-five percent of the people now enrolled in college are older than the age of 25," according to a recent College Board report.

The report also predicted that 50 percent of U.S. college populations will be composed of "nontraditional" students by 1998, according to a recent College Press Service article.

Although its percentage estimates are not as high, Villanova has its share of "nontraditionals" also. All but a fraction of the 2,000 University College students plus a number of undergraduates are "older" students, according to James R. Johnson, director of Admissions for University College.

"It might be a cliche, but learning is a lifelong experience, and all kinds of people will continue to go back to school," Johnson predicted.

Schools originally targeted "suburban housewives" with "money to spend," but instead "poorer women aiming to train themselves for clerical jobs" registered, according to the article.

Johnson agreed that this may be the case for some schools in the country, but not at Villanova.

"The size of the University College rose through the 1980s and stabilized over the past five years, in large part becuse of the size of the physical plant of the school. In fact, last semester the registrar did not have a single extra classroom available [while evening programs were in session]," Johnson said.

He also said that the University's "nontraditional" students return to school "due to the mobility of today's society and industry."

Unlike the group of "welfare mothers or students who wanted to be secretaries" described by a college official in the article, older-generation Villanovans' reasons for continuing education range from career retraining and the sharpening of current career skills to keeping busy and personal satisfaction, said Johnson.

Another discrepancy Johnson pointed out between Villanova and colleges typified by the College Board report is the schools' failure to meet the needs of this type of student.

Johnson said Villanova is sensitive to older students. This concern is shown by a special orientation session every semester, a financial aid forum, a special walk-in registration and extended hours at the Bursar's office and the University Shop to assist individuals who work during the day. Day workers make up the bulk of the "nontraditionals."

Graduation ceremonies to remain divided

By SHARON A. WATERS
Assistant News Editor

Graduation for the class of 1988 will still consist of two divided indoor ceremonies, according to Christine Lysionek, assistant to the dean of students.

According to a letter to prospective graduates from the dean of students' office, the first commencement ceremony will be May 22 at 10 a.m. for the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Nursing. The College of Commerce and Finance and the College of Engineering will graduate the same day at 2 p.m.

All Graduate School and University College students will graduate with their respective colleges.

Both ceremonies will take place in the duPont Pavilion. Tickets will not be required for the ceremonies and graduates will be allowed to have as many guests as they want.

Lysionek said the administration "understands the benefits of a unified ceremony" and that the execution of one uniform ceremony is easier for the administration than two. It is "difficult," however, to come up with a solid rain plan," she said.

She said, "If we could handle the rain, we would go back to a unified ceremony."

Two separate indoor ceremonies were deemed the best alternatives by the administration, University security and the Radnor Township Police Department.

According to Lysionek, bad weather affects the outdoor ceremony itself and the comfort of the graduates and guest. Also, rain limits parking facilities because the rugby field is then rendered unusable for that purpose.

Concerning parking, Lysionek said that attendees of the first ceremony should have left the campus by 1 p.m. to 1:15 p.m. for other activities such as lunch or parties, thus leaving parking facilities open for the second ceremony.

Lysionek said, "We've had two combined ceremonies like this before with no problems."

A Baccalaureate Mass, which will be held for all colleges in the duPont Pavilion May 21 at 5 p.m., can accommodate all students because "attendance at the Mass is traditionally less" than for the graduation ceremony, according to Lysionek.

Speakers announced

According to Lysionek, the following students have been selected to serve as commencement speakers for their colleges. Alternate speakers who will act as student marshalls for their colleges are listed in parentheses.

The speakers are Kathleen Toner (Donna Mastrangelo) from the College of Arts and Sciences, Mark Cuthberson (Hugo Kostelni) from the College of Commerce and Finance, Terrie Hopkins (Sheila McGlynn) from the College of Engineering and Sharon Blais (Stacey Rubin) from the College of Nursing.

According to the office of the University President, honorary degrees will be presented to the following people: the Rev. Lawrence Bohnen, S.D.B., a missionary priest in Haiti; Vernice Ferguson, chief nurse of the Veterans Administration; and James A. Ream, president emeritus of Pennsylvania Association of Colleges and Universities, at the first ceremony.

John J. McEntee, president of Universal Sentinel, Inc., the Hon. Katherine Davalos Ortega, treasurer of the United States, and Xavier Suarez, Esq., mayor of Miami, will receive honorary degrees at the second ceremony.

Each recipient will make a speech of approximately three to four minutes.

National News Notes

Compiled from the College Press Service

Students to be tested for AIDS

About 20,000 students on more than 20 still-unnamed campuses will be tested for AIDS [acquired immune deficiency syndrome] during the next 12 months, the Centers for Disease Control [CDC] in Atlanta announced last week.

The students, however, may not even know their blood has been tested.

Under the plan, the campuses will forward to the CDC the 1,000 blood samples they take from students as a matter of course during a school year.

Students will not be informed of the test results.

Keeling, who also heads the AIDS task force of the American College Health Association, explained that the results would produce "the first actual data about the frequency of H.I.V. infection among students, who are increasingly considered a high-risk population."

Courses spark controversy

In what had become a national debate about the future of liberal arts in U.S. colleges, Stanford University's faculty voted March 31 to replace a Western culture course requirement, branded as racist by some black students, with another one which was branded as trendy and shallow by some conservative scholars that includes the study of women and minority writers.

At issue was a two-year-old proposal to change Stanford's traditional freshman "great books" course — which examined mostly European philosophies that helped spawn "western civilization" — to one that included non-European philosophies.

"We're fighting against the white male establishment that's been here for years," said David Brown, a member of Students United for Democratic Education.

Critics like Brown contended the old course's emphasis on the likes of Homer, Plato and Shakespeare, was racist because it ignored cultural contributions from non-European intellectuals.

Fraternities battle at Indiana U.

A running war between two fraternities has convinced Indiana University [IU] to cancel all dorm social events for the rest of the school year.

IU Dean of Students Michael Gordon last week said scuffles and rumors of planned future fights between members of Kappa Alpha Psi and Omega Psi Phi at some scheduled mixers and dances led him to distribute a memo to dorm advisers saying that "all activities are to be cancelled in order to preserve the safety of others."

Two cars collide

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

No one was injured in a two-car accident which occurred at the intersection of Lancaster and Ithan avenues April 15 at 7:47 p.m., according to Radnor Township police.

A police report said that it was raining and roads were wet at the time of the accident.

One vehicle, driven by Charles J. Mooney III of West Caldwell, N.J., was traveling west at 30 miles per hour on Lancaster Avenue, according to the report.

At Ithan Avenue, he made a left turn in front of the second vehicle, driven by Clarence O. Peterson of Fairfield, Conn., which was traveling east on Lancaster Avenue at 30 miles per hour in the curb lane of traffic, the report said.

"All at once [Mooney's vehicle] was turning left in front of him. He tried to avoid hitting [it], but the road was wet and he couldn't stop," the report stated.

Two Villanova students, Ann Mooney and Virginia Williams, were in Mooney's car at the time of the accident.

Mooney was cited for a violation.

(File photo)
Graduation for the class of 1988 will still consist of two divided indoor ceremonies.

PEC studies V.U.'s academic environment

Cutbacks recommended for Graduate School

(Continued from page 1)

"research and scholarship are seen as corollary, i.e. important but secondary, duties of Villanova faculty."

Program cutbacks

"The bulk of the academic programs recommended for termination were graduate programs having no compelling connection with the University's Mission," stated the PEC.

"When choices had to be made between graduate and undergraduate programs, PEC invariably opted to save or to commit additional resources to the undergraduate programs," the report continued.

The programs recommended for termination include:

--master of arts programs in classical studies, education and human services, teaching of English, liberal studies, modern languages and theatre

--master of science programs in biology, library science, nursing and secondary school science

--the doctorate program in chemistry, the sole program the University possesses at that level

--the bachelor of arts program in fine arts

Although reasons varied for each recommendation of termination, some of the common ones included low enrollment, insufficient academic standards and lack of focus. The doctoral program in chemistry was slated for cancellation partially because its continuation would cost too much of the University's resources.

The PEC also recommended that the degree and designation bachelor of arts in modern languages be dropped, and that the department should only offer undergraduate degrees in two areas, French and Spanish.

The committee also said that undergraduate programs in classical studies, communication arts, human services and theatre need improvement, and should be considered for termination in the near future if the improvements are not made.

Also, the PEC recommended that acceptances to master of arts programs in English and political science be suspended until certain improvements are made.

In addition, a proposed master of science program in physics and proposed doctoral programs in electrical engineering, philosophy and psychology were rejected.

"While the four proposed programs ... were quite distinct and offered many different strengths and weaknesses, they nevertheless had one thing in common: none of the proposed programs was judged to have a special or compelling connection to the University's mission ... " stated the report.

However, the PEC did recommend the "creation of four endowed chairs ... devoted to the thought and writing of St. Augustine."

The PEC aimed at "bringing ... reality into harmony with the ideal of the Mission Statement by affirming the University's commitment to undergraduate education.

It also said that the departments of religious studies and philosophy should "develop proposals for small, high quality Ph.D. programs of a tutorial type."

Uneven standards for programs

The PEC also found that "a disturbing number" of graduate programs "impose minimal admissions standards" and "do not clearly demand a high level of scholarship."

It also stated that some programs "require neither a comprehensive examination nor an equivalent comprehensive evaluation process." The committee recommended that the University "impose a standards threshold in an effort to establish sufficiently high minimum standards for all graduate programs."

Specifically, the PEC stated that applicants to graduate programs in arts and sciences should be required to meet a certain level of scholastic achievement. It recommended that all students seeking admission to graduate study should be required to take the Graduate Record Examination [GRE] or a suitable equivalent.

Also, the committee suggested that the applicant's grade point average, multiplied by 200, plus the applicant's GRE score, should be greater than 1,100. It recommended leaving the establishment of exact standards to program faculty and their deans.

Mission and facts contradict

Despite its belief in the primacy of undergraduate education at the University, the PEC did recognize that "there might appear to be a contradiction between the University's words and its actions regarding graduate study."

For instance, the PEC noted that the University offered as many graduate programs as undergraduate programs during the current academic year. "It is also a fact the one-third of all Villanova degrees awarded each year are graduate degrees," it added.

The PEC indicated, however, that most of the graduate programs had begun before the Mission Statement was promulgated in 1979. "Consequently, PEC concluded that ... the apparent contradiction could only be resolved by bringing the reality into harmony with the ideal, as defined by the current Mission Statement," according to the report.

However, the PEC expressed sympathy to the "many faculty" who feel that graduate study should be increased. Thus, it recommended "that the Board of Trustees reevaluate the roles of research, scholarly work and graduate study when the Mission Statement is next reviewed for possible revision."

The PEC noted, however, that research, scholarship and graduate study must not be viewed as inseparable. It pointed to Swarthmore and Haverford colleges as examples of "undergraduate institutions that emphasize scholarship and research by their faculty."

Intellectual climate

(Continued from page 1)

implement a "blue-ribbon committee" to regulate all courses and promote academic uniformity in regards to difficulty of syllabi, tests and assignments, as well as "insure that grades will be more indicative of authentic student accomplishment."

Furthermore, the PEC recommends that an academic dormitory be established on campus. The committee suggests the use of Delurey or Moriarty halls for this purpose, and that an academic committee be created "to screen applicants, to set the intellectual tone for the dormitory and to arrange in-house seminars, etc."

In accordance with this proposal, the PEC also advises the University to "develop and rigorously enforce" quiet hours in all dormitories after 8 p.m. Dormitories near academic buildings should also be sufficiently quiet during classroom periods, according to the report, and total quiet must be enforced in Falvey Memorial Library at all times.

The PEC called these measures "a compromise" between the extremes of either no quiet hours in dormitories or all-day quiet hours. "Fairness to all requires consideration and toleration," the report concluded.

Awards granted

The following five faculty members received nominations for the 1988 Lindback Awards for distinguished teaching: James M. Emig, accounting professor; Dr. James N. Giordano, economics professor; Daniel J. O'Mara, accounting professor; James C. O'Brien, mechanical engineering professor; and Dr. Michael W. Varano, management professor.

They were selected by 767 sophomores, juniors, seniors and faculty members in voting which recently concluded.

The Rev. John M. Driscoll, University president, will select two winners from this list of nominees and present $1,000 cash prizes to each at commencement exercises in May. Funds for the awards are made available by the Christian R. and Mary F. Lindback Foundation.

Named to the honorable mention category in this year's voting are the following, listed alphabetically: Dr. Martin A. Asher, economics professor; Dr. Joseph R. Desjardins, philosophy professor; Dr. Gerard F. Jones, mechanical engineering professor; Martin J. Manley, political science professor; Dr. Philip McLaughlin, Jr., mechanical engineering professor; Dr. Barbara E. Wall, philosophy professor; and Burke T. Ward, business law professor.

The committee in charge of the voting for the nominees is comprised of members of the Blue Key Society, directed by Karen Chiappone and John Stadtler. Joseph George, Jr., history professor, served as committee chairperson.

New anti-apartheid group forms

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

A new social action group, the Student Coalition Against Apartheid, is currently forming, according to Kim Howze, a student involved in the group.

Howze said the coalition is currently "going through paperwork" but will be a permanent organization affiliated with the Center for Peace and Justice Education. Ed Sullivan, coordinator of the center, will be the advisor.

The first event the group will sponsor is a prayer service for victims of apartheid at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in the Main Chapel.

The group will also hold a march on Friday, starting at 1 p.m. in front of the Center for Peace and Justice Education. Howze said the destination of the march will be the office of the University President the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A.

527-4330

FAST FREE DELIVERY!!
WITH $6.00 MINIMUM ORDER

LA NOVA PIZZA COMPANY

789 Lancaster Ave. • Villanova, PA

Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 11 a.m.-1 a.m. • Fri. & Sat. 11 a.m.-3 a.m.

Owned and operated by Vincent Amendola, former owner of Vincent's Pizza in Overbrook
Considered the best Pizzeria in West Philadelphia

NOW HIRING

PIZZA	Large	Medium	Small
Cheese	6.15	4.75	3.75
Pepperoni	7.45	5.75	4.55
Mushrooms	7.45	5.75	4.55
Sausage	7.45	5.75	4.55
Ground Beef	7.45	5.75	4.55
Green Peppers	7.45	5.75	4.55
Onions	7.45	5.75	4.55
Anchovies	7.45	5.75	4.55
2nd topping	1.10	.80	.65
3rd topping	.90	.60	.50
Special	10.50	8.50	7.30
White Pizza w/ch.	6.15	4.75	3.75
Broccoli Cheese	7.45	5.75	4.55

	Lg.	Sm.
Stromboli Italian	8.85	5.75
Pepperoni	7.50	5.00

Sicilian
(one size only)
$10.50

Steaks Available Soon!!

HOAGIES

ITALIAN SPECIAL	3.30
(imported ham, genoa salami, capicolla, provolone cheese and prosciutto, topped with pure olive oil and spices)
ITALIAN HOAGIE	2.95
HAM & CHEESE	2.80
PROVOLONE & SALAMI	2.80
TUNA	3.10
TURKEY	3.30
ROAST BEEF	3.60
CHEESE	2.60

(All our meats are delicatessen quality!)
Sandwiches also available HOT!!

Tax is not included

MONDAY & WEDNESDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 pizza any size
Get 2 toppings for the price of 1!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

TUESDAY & THURSDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 large pizza
get two 16oz. sodas FREE!!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

WITH THIS COUPON
$1.50 OFF
SICILIAN PIZZA!

FRIDAY, SATURDAY & SUNDAY
Buy a large pizza
with one topping
Get one FREE liter of soda
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

Election controversy has dual impact

Election voided, rescheduled for fall

(Continued from page 1)

Closkey also disagreed with many of the findings of the Elections Commission. "The administration ran this election. They [the administration] said, 'it doesn't matter what the students feel, we are going to make the ultimate decision. We didn't like the way this was done. It was run by students, we're going to clean the whole thing up.' "

The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, denied this charge. "Dr. Neville didn't reach the decision. The Election Commission, which is all students, made the decision. Dr. Neville agreed to go along with it. When you look at the whole picture, I think the Elections Commission's decision was reasonable."

"This is what we've been fighting for all along. We are adults. This isn't what happens in the real world," Closkey added. "The point is, Villanova has apathy because it creates it for itself. And this is just the proof of that."

The Student Government that will come into office [in the fall of 1988] will be the most ineffective government we have seen in a while because they will only have the middle of October through late March or late April to work," he added.

Stack commented, "That depends on what Phil [Brach] does or doesn't do in the meantime, because the other senators have been elected. If the students are really interested in working for the students, they'll find a way to put something together. If they're only in it for themselves, they don't deserve the opportunity to put it together."

Closkey also alleged that there were campaign violations by the Fusco campaign that were not considered by the commission. "Campaigning in Bartley [Hall] on the election day, campaigning in the Law School. These are serious violations that were unaddressed. Why is that?"

Delzotti responded, "These allegations were addressed. He [Closkey] is confusing the allegations being addressed and him [not] receiving a response."

Delzotti added that the issue of whether next year's freshmen will be allowed to vote has not yet been addressed.

The following are members of the elections commission: Michael Delzotti [chairperson], John Horan, Mary Johnson, Ernie Manuel, Jennifer Reidy, Jim Rizzo, Kevin Rose, Mary Jo Yannacone and Joe Zaller.

Elections Commission statement

There have been many questions regarding last week's presidential election. The following is the official report of the Elections Commission and Dr. Richard A. Neville, Vice President for Student Life.

After much deliberation the Elections Commission put forth a recommendation that:

1) the presidential election held on April 12th be declared null and void,

2) a new fall election be held in the fall of 1988,

3) Phil Brach remain in office until the time of said election, and,

4) Terise Fusco and Sean Closkey will both be eligible to run in said election.

This recommendation was accepted in its entirety by Dr. Neville.

The events of Tuesday, April 12th, led the Commission to reevalute the election and

Whereas the Villanovan published a controversial election supplement on election day containing material of questionable validity that may have unjustly affected the electoral process.

Whereas Terise Fusco personally disposed of approximately eight-hundred supplements,

Whereas Sean Closkey used said supplements as campaign material, and

Whereas the editorial staff of the Villanovan distributed the said supplement in Connelly Square.

It is the decision of the Elections Commission that the electoral process was irreparably damaged with regard to fairness.

The Commission acknowledges the candidates' commendable desire to serve the student body, as well as the Villanovan's efforts to assist the students in making an informed decision. It is our principal desire, however, that this decision send a clear message regarding the importance of ethical behavior in all facets of Villanova life.

This decision may not be appealed.

Student Government responds

(Continued from page 1)

Government can take credit for what the Student Government does."

Holobetz stated that it was, " ... a difference in perspective that the president and cabinet did not iron out before the election."

John Lewis, student senator, said of the election, "I am distraught. I wish it had been handled in a more ethical and professional manner ... I've never seen an election like that in my life, and I've been in politics for some time."

Lewis added that he felt it should have been handled more like a public office election. He added, "Don't run to the administration. There should be an appeal process."

Holobetz said that Student Government is now working to put the election behind them and work as a "unified force."

Brach added, "We're looking for the best thing to do. In that result, Student Government maintains its respect and strength, and students continue to get support on the issues."

Brach now holds the responsibility of overseeing the work of Student Government until September. He said he feels "confident" that the work will be done effectively.

Ciccolo holds "great hope for next year." She said, "it would be a shame to see the Student Government weakened by the election."

Lewis asserted, "The Villanova Student Government actually has an impact ... we have a distant responsibility to the students. If we don't have the forcefulness to use it all, we're cheating the students."

Brach will decide within the next couple of weeks whether he will pursue the re-election bid. He said, "If that is the option that is best for the University and the students, then I will run again."

Senate results

Student senator election results

College of Liberal Arts:
Diane Carman 103
Christopher Sperduto 103
Christine Wnuk 100
Richard W. Johnson 74
Debbie Gross 59
College of Commerce and Finance:
Claudine Liss 173
Ken Fahrman 110
Gregg Bowler 83
College of Sciences:
Philip Kousoubris 47
University College:
Jonathan Zahn 42

All Senate candidates except for those in the College of Liberal Arts ran uncontested.

Sigma Nu

(Continued from page 3)

speak on behalf of the University, though.

Listo explained the "Risk Reduction" policy as "basically ... for those who are 21, B.Y.O.B. [bring your own bottle], no kegs at all, no tap can be present in the house."

He continued, "There must be a desirable alternative to alcohol present. Substantial food must be present — not potato chips and pretzels, but something with more substance.

"Each brother is under the obligation to watch out for any brother or anyone else that might be present at the party. If someone is intoxicated, the responsibility includes escorting them out of the party and seeing they get safely home, or just cut off their alcohol," said Listo.

He added, "If it's brought to someone's attention that a brother let someone go, he can be brought up on trial in the fraternity and expelled."

The policy also states there can be no open parties at all. Each brother is entitled to only one or two guests maximum, and these guests must be on the guest list. If, by chance, someone does get overly intoxicated, it is the responsibility of everyone in Sigma Nu to see this person does get taken to the hospital, Listo said.

Listo expanded that Sigma Nu has responsibilities to the University as well. The first is to try to get the "Risk Reduction" policy implemented within the University for all organizations.

The second is to sponsor alcohol awareness programs for the non-Greek as well as the Greek community. Listo said events have already been planned for the fall.

Thirdly, each member of the alumni board has been currently assigned to each individual officer in order to strengthen the positions and make sure duties are fulfilled.

Listo said he thought the policy was valuable "because right now the future of all fraternities is at stake, [with] the general anti-fraternity feelings that are spreading across the country."

Listo said Sigma Nu has submitted the policy to the Interfraternity Council in response to a request for a standardized University alcohol policy. He explained that not much action has been taken because of concerns with Greek Week and the Spring Festival.

Listo said the policy has helped the fraternity in working together and in "realizing that a fraternity function is more than just having a good time. It's watching out for everyone's welfare."

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
SUMMER SESSIONS '88

GRADUATE and UNDERGRADUATE COURSES

BUSINESS
ENGINEERING
MATHEMATICS

COMPUTER SCIENCE
NATURAL SCIENCE
LIBRARY SCIENCE

LANGUAGES
COUNSELING
EDUCATION
HUMANITIES
THE ARTS

DAY and EVENING CLASSES

SESSION I — Wednesday, June 1 to Wednesday, June 29

SESSION II — Friday, July 1 to Monday, August 1

EVENING SESSION — Wednesday, June 1 to Monday, August 1

CONTINUOUS REGISTRATION
until the day before each session begins.

REGISTER NOW!

For summer Bulletin, write:
SUMMER SESSIONS OFFICE
Or, if you prefer, call:
(215) 645-4320

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY

WHAT'S A DEGREE GOOD FOR?

( ) PRE-APPROVED CREDIT FROM THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS
( ) $400 CASH BONUS FROM THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS
(✓) ALL OF THE ABOVE AT
THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS

To qualify for pre-approved credit, 1. Verifiable future employment. 2. A salary sufficient to cover normal living expenses plus a car payment. 3. If you have a credit record, it must indicate payment made as agreed. 4. You must be graduating or already have graduated with a Bachelors or advanced degree. 5. Call for more details and vehicle eligibility.

* LEASING AVAILABLE
* PREFERRED INTEREST RATE
* EXTENDED TERM FINANCING
* MINIMAL DOWN PAYMENT

BUICK FORD DODGE

THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS

OFFICIAL SPONSORS OF THE VILLANOVA WILDCATS

COURTESY WAYNE COMPETENCE

Rollie suggests you see the people at the Wayne Dealerships to take advantage of this special offer to Villanova graduates.

ANTHONY WAYNE BUICK
233 E. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
688-4800

WAYNE FORD
325 E. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
964-9100

WAYNE DODGE
201 W. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
687-4491

JUST ONE MILE WEST OF THE UNIVERSITY

THE STUDENT UNION PRESENTS . . .

BELLA ABZUG

SPEAKS ON WOMEN IN POLITICS

April 26 Villanova Room

ADMISSION $2 8 p.m.

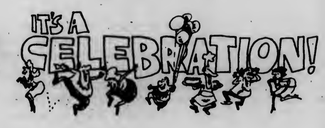
TICKETS ON SALE NOW
C.C. TICKET OFFICE

Campus Films

CULTURAL FILMS

Stanley Kubrick's
FULL METAL JACKET
R

April 21, 22
6:30-9 p.m.
C.C. Cinema $2



NEXT WEEK
La Bamba
April 28, 29

I'VE HEARD THE MERMAIDS SINGING
April 23, 24, 25 C.C. Cinema
7 p.m. Sunday 3:30-7 p.m.

DON'T FORGET - FATAL ATTRACTION - MAY 1

WE NEED WORKERS!
for Senior Week and Commencement
May 13 through 18

Sign Up NOW in Union Office

"Watch" For Our Vendors
This Week In Connelly Center

WATCHES
April 25, 26

JEWELRY
April 27, 28, 29

Do you know what the UNION does?

- Spring Break Trips
- Sibling Weekend
- Campus Films Thurs. and Fri.
- Senior Dinner Dance
- Ice Cream Giveaways
- Concerts & Lectures
- Much, Much More

Sibling Weekend '89

Wanted: Chairpeople
Must Be:
Creative, Enthusiastic Workers
Apply Now:
In the Student Union Office
Applications Due: April 25

the Villanovan

201 Dougherty Hall
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa. 19085

Johanne C. Sharp
Editor in Chief

Janet Diefenbach
Managing Editor

Natalie McKenna
Associate Editor

Tailgate policy — don't scrap

While the reduction of alcohol at Villanova tailgates is necessary, the elimination of kegs is not the answer to the problem. A limit to the number of kegs in proportion to the size of the group is a solution to the current dilemma.

The Rev. John P. Stack, O.S.A., dean of students, is considering the prohibition of kegs at next year's football tailgates in order to improve control. His rationale is that there will be less alcohol on the field because of the higher cost of bottled and canned beer. Although the litter will increase, Stack said he would rather have physical waste than "human waste."

More control is needed during tailgating. But the elimination of kegs only encourages a wider spread consumption of hard alcohol, more kegs in the dormitories and throughout campus and much less control.

The Tailgate Management Team has the job of stopping tailgates at 1:15 p.m. It is much easier to halt the flow of one keg than control the drinking from cans of an entire group.

The elimination of kegs encourages cans of beer, which are easily transported and concealed. Students will be more likely to bring beer into the stadium as well as to other parts of campus.

Additional hard alcohol is perhaps the most devastating effect of the elimination of kegs. Students do not know how to handle grain alcohol and sometimes do not realize the potent effects of other hard liquors.

We would like to see the reduction of "human waste" as much as Stack. But the elimination of kegs would only increase the amount of hard liquor on the field and decrease the amount of control at tailgates. Let's develop a reasonable system where the number of kegs is limited according to the size of the organization or group.

Revise, don't scrap, the established system.

Applaud minority recruitment efforts

The words of the Mission Statement are clear: "Villanova attempts to enroll students with diverse social, geographic, economic and educational backgrounds. Furthermore, in utilizing its financial aid resources to help achieve this student body, Villanova recognizes its responsibility to use part of those resources to assist the economically and educationally disadvantaged."

The reality of Villanova is far from this ideal.

Steps are being taken, however slow they may be, to bring Villanova closer to that ideal.

The minority recruitment open house held April 12 was a positive sign of the results of several steps.

Denise Houser, Villanova's minority recruiter, is to be congratulated. In the three years she has been here, minority applications and enrollment have increased, this year more dramatically than the past.

She is responsible for helping attract not only more minority students, but more quality applicants as well, assuring the standards of academic excellence are maintained. And she remains a friend and counselor to many students at Villanova.

She has also succeeded in uniting the Villanova community as illustrated by the high successful open house. Faculty, administrators, minority and non-minority students alike came together and contributed time and effort.

The results were obvious in the faces of the many parents and students attending. They were impressed. For some, the open house helped make the decision for them.

Yes, change does come to Villanova. No, it is not possible without combined student support and understanding. It is possible, we have seen it around us. It is now up to us to strive for it.

Letters to the Editor

Ignorance needs correction

To the Editor:

I am writing in response to the remark that Terise Fusco is quoted as making in the special campaign issue of the Villanovan. Fusco, when asked to comment on minority students here at Villanova, referred to them as a 'burden for the nation.' She also stated, "We're going to have to pay for them later in welfare — now we are going to have to pay for them in college."

It is this kind of ignorance that impedes our nation from fulfilling its maximum potential. Black slaves carried this nation on their shoulders before the Civil War, and they continue to make invaluable contributions to society today.

Other minorities came to America and worked to make this nation what it is today, always having to work twice as hard as their Anglo Saxon brothers and sisters. This brings me to another point; women are minorities also, or did Fusco forget how women have fought for the right to vote now granted them in the 19th amendment; and how women fight today to get the Equal Rights Amendment passed?

Fusco has in fact insulted herself and other minorities by implying that minorities are all on welfare and are useless, dead weight for this nation. There are white Anglo Saxons who are on welfare also; and whites need financial aid to go to college just as minorities do. When are we going to stop saying 'us' and 'them'?

We are all people, brothers and sisters, and we must all work together to make sure this ignorance is not perpetuated.

America is a melting pot, as it was meant to be. We are nearly bilingual with English and Spanish. This condescending attitude between fellow Americans must stop if we are to become the even greater nation that we can be.

Michelle Olivia Young
Class of 1991

EDITORS
News: Noel E. Falco, Dante J. Scala
Features: R. Michael Bullotta, Susan E. Corcoran
Entertainment: Kathryn Quigley
Sports: John Ricco, Doug Scancarella

ASSISTANT EDITORS
News: Kevin C. Heil, Jennifer Reidy, Sharon A. Waters
Features: Jacqueline Gentile
Entertainment: Allen Ambrosino, Jeff Gillies
Sports: Jim Bowman, John F. Swift
Managing Editor: Andrea LoCascio

Layout Director: Eileen McGinley
Art Editor: Andrew Bullion
Interns: Cynthia B. Bosnian, Kathleen Reichner
Photography: Dana Shafie
Greek Page: Jill DeForte, Steve DelDuco
Advertising Director: Jim Duffy
Subscriptions/Billing: Pam Salter
F.Y.I. Coordinator: Colette Mitchell
Personals/Classified: Paul Iacovoni
Advisor: June W. Lytel-Murphy

Staff: Richard Abraham, Michael Aimette, Lucinda Alfieri, John Baker, Karla Beckner, Tom Brugger, Monica Byrne, Diane P. Carman, Bill Carr, Russ Ceccola, Mary E. Charest, John Chepega, Diane A. Cillone, Andrea Cinelli, Joanne L. Conrad, Wayne Creskill, Jim Crossan, Steve D'Angelo, Tim Daniels, Joe DeFulvio, Michael Denison, G.J. Donnelly, Diane Dragonette, Bob Duggan, Chris Eigen, Kristen Fallan, Paul Fratamico, Debbie Gross, Kevin A. Hecht, Karen Iovino, Luci Jankowski, Michael Jones, Theresa Jones, Bridget Kellecher, Terry Kelly, Barbara Kresch, Irene V. Langran, Jackie Lanza, Andrew Mathis, Dave Maylish, Elliott McEldowney, Joe McGowan, Carolyn Mirabile, Steve Montresor, Coleen Moore, Dan Moriarty, Sharon Neubauer, Mary O'Neill, Christopher Pepe, Stephen Powers, Dana Rao, Siobhan Roder, Kristine Ryan, Stephen J. Schlager, Michelle Shanahan, Steve Shillekki, Tara Silligato, Amy Spenser, Maureen Stapleton, Laura Stevens, Elana Rose Starr, Amgad Subougni, T. Patton Trimble, Christine A. Wnuk.

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the administration, faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors.

The Villanovan is published Fridays, 10 issues a semester. Circulation: 8,500. Subscriptions are available at $17.50 per year. For advertising information contact the office 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, 215-645-7207.

The Villanovan reserves the right to refuse any ad insertions due to questionable content and space limitations. The deadline to place advertising is 12 p.m. the Tuesday prior to publication.

The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

Op-ed

Do not tolerate ignorance

By JOHANNE C. SHARP
Editor in Chief

Villanova University is an excellent institution of higher academic learning. Unfortunately many students here lack a clear understanding of what a newspaper's functions are. The recent Student Government presidential election, campaigns and complications helped reveal this prevailing ignorance of a college paper's role, rights and responsibilities in the minds of the students.

The primary function of a newspaper, national, local or college, is to inform the public. A newspaper completes this goal through many methods, including straight news, editorials, open op-ed and letters to the editor and advertising.

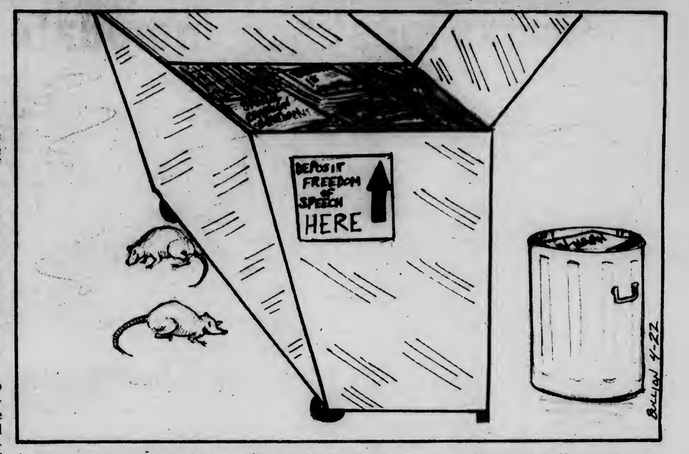
Straight news consists of objective reporting of stories of interest and importance to the newspaper's audience. The Villanovan has the right to cover events and incidents that deal with the University.

The Villanovan has the right and obligation to the public to publish police incident reports including names of individuals if they are 18 years of age or over. To keep incidents in perspective, the Editorial Board weighs each situation that deals with police incident reports and decides the importance of the publication of names.

For instance, the Villanovan decided to print the names of three students who were arrested for stealing a flag because the Editorial Board felt Villanova students should know who has been charged with theft. The newspaper recently opted not to publish the names of over 40 students arrested at local bars because the violations were minor and space was limited.

Editorials, op-eds and letters to the editor are opinions. An editorial is a subjective story that is the opinion of the Editorial Board based upon research and reporting. The decision of the angle of a Villanovan editorial rests with the Editorial Board and is ultimately the final decision of the Editor in Chief. Section editors, while they may help write or research, are not responsible for the opinions of the Editorial Board.

The authors of op-ed and letters to the editor printed in the Villanovan are held responsible for their words. This section of the newspaper is a public forum and is open to any member of the paper's audience. All op-ed and letters to the editor must be factually accurate, abide by the University Mission Statement, signed and in accordance to the Villanovan letters policy. The paper has the right to edit for length and to withhold the author's name under sensitive circumstances.



Many students at Villanova were incorrectly under the impression that the Villanovan did not have the right to endorse Sean Closkey for Student Government president. The Editorial Board not only had the right to support the best candidate in its view, it also had the right to point out why the other candidate, Terise Fusco, was not the best choice.

The editorial addressed issues, not personal characteristics, and effectively presented an accurate, sound argument. The editorial was researched and supported by many sources, including several editors' reactions to the presidential debate and to the work produced by both candidates over their years at Villanova.

Advertisements in a newspaper are usually paid for and are not the opinions of the Editorial Board or staff. Advertising in the Villanovan must conform to the newspaper's policy and the Mission statement of the university. The paper has the right to refuse advertisements if content is questionable or not appropriate for the Villanovan.

The Villanovan is the publication of record of Villanova University. We have an advisor who is employed by the University. Our advisor, June Lytel-Murphy, effectively advises and allows the Editor in Chief to make decisions. In her role, Lytel-Murphy promotes the best learning atmosphere with real life situations. She forces the Editor in Chief to realize the importance of decisions.

Johanne C. Sharp is an English/ Communication Arts major and the Editor in Chief of the Villanovan.

What election?

By DANTE J. SCALA

It was Monday night, the eve of student elections, at Villanova. As the campaign neared its supposed climax, a videotape of the Student Government presidential candidate debate was played in the Belle Air Terrace of the Connelly Center, before an excited crowd of — almost no one. The images flashed for over an hour on rows of empty seats before workers attempted to turn off the show.

The scene that night illustrates the languid atmosphere which surrounded this year's student campaign until election day. Instead of charging the air with conflict and intensity, the campaign generally was so low-key that several of its events came and went with little notice from potential student voters.

The blame for this poor exercise of democracy lies mainly with the Elections Commission. Rather than taking steps to attract student attention toward the election, the commission simply went through the motions. As a result, an opportunity to take steps toward reducing student apathy may have been wasted.

One of the commission's first missteps was its poor scheduling of the campaign. The commission failed to consider the publishing dates of the Villanovan, the sole newspaper on campus, when it set up the election schedule. The Villanovan could have publicized the election through articles and heightened interest in the campaign. Instead, election scheduling prohibited the Villanovan from covering the campaign during one of its regular Friday issues. The newspaper's editors had to work overtime to publish information for the voters by election day.

The commission also failed to publicize key events during the campaign. The gubernatorial and senatorial debates were two of the best-kept secrets on campus the week they took place. Besides word of mouth, there was virtually no publicity, and candidates discussed the issues in front of sparse audiences. Lack of publicity also explains the empty seats in Connelly Center on the night of the televised debate.

Apparently the commission felt that it was the candidates' responsibility to advertise the debates. But candidates had their own campaigns to run, and it was unreasonable to expect them to take on this additional burden when the commission had several staff members to perform these duties. In addition, when the commission's members saw that candidates were not publicizing the debates, they could have taken steps to do it themselves.

After all, the powers and duties of the Elections Commission include the "insurance of proper promotion of all election and campaign affairs pertaining to the candidates and/or the Student Body," according to the election laws.

It is too late now to try to correct flaws in the commission, whether they were lacks of funding, direction or commitment. When next semester's elections approach, however, the mistakes made during this campaign must be remembered.

For at its best, a student election can spark interest in Student Government, provide enlightening information about University issues and unite students for a common purpose: the election of their leaders. At its worst, however, it is only another sign of the student apathy which pervades the campus. Next year's Elections Commission must do its best to make the former a reality.

Dante J. Scala is a sophomore honors/philosophy major and news editor of the Villanovan.

Support Central America

By LOU MESHON

As a freedom-loving Republican, I must ask you to listen to President Ronald Reagan. The president is desperately trying all possible solutions to protect the American people from the threat of communist conquest in Central America. Right now, Reagan is trying to ensure America's national security by securing a peace initiative and stopping the spread of communism in Central America.

Even as you read this, the Soviet Union is preparing to turn all of Central America into another Cuba, complete with Soviet military air fields and nuclear submarines.

But for reasons of their own, the liberal Democrats in Congress oppose every solution our president suggests. They seem not to care if Central America is turned into a communist dagger pointed at the heart of America.

Fellow Villanovans, you and Reagan know that a communist Central America would mean an unbroken chain of Soviet tanks, planes, nuclear submarines and war missiles encircling America from California to Florida!

Right now, Reagan faces the battle of his administration to continue supporting freedom, securing Democracy and stopping communism. The Soviet Union is using Nicaragua as a base for bringing communism to every country on America's southern border. In communist Nicaragua, over 3,500 trained Cuban "military advisors" have been made a part of the Nicaraguan military.

American intelligence has now learned that the communist plans for Nicaragua are very clear. Right now, a complete squadron of deadly Soviet MI-HIND attack helicopters is being kept attack-ready in communist Nicaragua.

The Soviets are supplying the Sandinistas with a sophisticated and deadly military arsenal. In 1986 alone, the Soviet Union shipped over 25,300 tons of arms tohelp fortify the bloody Sandinista war.

The Soviet Union is turning Nicaragua into another Cuba; and the Soviet Union wants even more. The Soviets want to turn every country in Central America into another Cuban satellite!

I cannot think of anything more terrifying. Reagan is working as hard as he can to save Central America from the Communists. But the liberals in Congress have stood in his way at every step. The liberals want to forever cut off all U.S. aid to help the Nicaraguan Freedom Fighters combat the Communists in Central America.

Worst of all, the liberal Democrats ignore Reagan's peace attempts and seem intent upon making it easy for the Nicaraguan Communists to spread their Soviet-Cuban style of communism into other Central American countries, like nearby El-Salvador, a friend of the United States.

You see now that the Communists have their toehold in Nicaragua, they want to spread the poison of communism through Central America and into Mexico by using Nicaragua as their base of operation.

Can you imagine what it will be like when every single country on our southern border is like a loaded gun aimed at the heart of America? You know it could be the end of our way of life.

We cannot allow American to fall into Soviet hands because of our lack of interest. With this I ask all of you to continue the support against communism which Reagan is so strongly fighting for!

Lou Meshon
Class of 1988
College Republicans

Letters

Villanova must accommodate the handicapped

To the Editor:

Does Villanova University have a moral obligation to provide its mobility-impaired employees and clients (students) with safe, reliable and functional means of movement assistance?

Does the University receive federal funds for this purpose? If it does, aren't there legal obligations as well?

These questions have occurred to me many times over the last weeks, as I climbed the four flights of steps to the electrical engineering department while the ancient Tolentine Hall elevator sat idle and broken once again.

Dozens of diseases and injuries exact mobility impairment as a penalty. For most sufferers no outward sign of impediment exists (a mixed blessing).

The staircase provides as formidable a barrier for these people as it does for those who are required to rely on an appliance for basic locomotion.

To someone with limited cardiovascular capacity a flight of stairs can invite disaster. To another with arthritis the same steps trigger pain and can effectively end work for the day. To the wheelchair bound, the steps might as well be the High Sierras.

"Curb cuts" and lifts help some, but the elevator serves many more. All are affected by the uncountable number of "down days" for this elevator.

Why do I care? I am a disabled veteran, and have had arthritis for over 15 years as a result of my injuries. It is not a picnic.

I am a registered nurse who has felt the agony of others with limitations many times more severe than my own. I am horrified to think of what some must go through just to get to an office or a classroom.

I am an electrical engineering graduate student who needs to climb those four wretched flights of stairs every day, many times a day, when the elevator is out of service. I feel I must speak out against this outrage.

This is not something new. I was an undergrad here and the elevator was obsolete then. What is it going to take to get the administration and the Maintenance Department "off the dime" to replace that wheezy contraption?

Use your noggins folks ... it is much easier, and cheaper, to replace the elevator than it is to spend weeks in court reconciling a preventable injury or death. Less dramatic but more likely is the payout of tens of thousands of dollars by the University in sick days, benefits and lost work. Wake up now.

John F. O'Rourke graduate student

Fusco apologizes to students

To the Editor:

The human condition plagues all of us. Unfortunately, mine has been public this past week and my ignorance about a very sensitive issue was revealed. Explanation and clarification are my top priorities to rectify my unknowingly offensive statements about minorities.

Never before experiencing any situation such as the one I now face, I am somewhat groping my way through it. Minorities are in no way, shape or form a burden or a problem to society. The diversity they bring is wholly positive. I now realize that the real burden, the problem, is the majority of society.

The majority includes myself. By inaccurately lumping all minorities into one stereotypical portion of society, as quoted from the presidential debate in the newspaper, my ignorance was revealed. This is unfortunately exemplary of what minorities consistently face, whether it is subtle or blatant.

My ignorance stems honestly. I thought I was an expert about Villanova's apparent neglect of our mission to enroll people of diverse economic and social backgrounds. I have met with Admissions Counselor Denise Houser to discuss this very situation, especially in relation to financial aid, and read a few related articles.

I spoke out strongly with good intentions yet with inaccurate, insensitive words. The problem is exemplified through my words, but it is representative of how minorities perceive society views them. While my intentions were credible, the situation lent to the problem.

My goal at present is to take the first step in apology. The Black Cultural Society and I have gathered already to share our feelings, and I appreciate that opportunity. Now we must address the problem of the majority. There are many more people just like me — ignorant to the histories, the culture, the lives, the attitudes and the feelings of minorities.

Allowing myself to be an example, I retract those statements and publicly commit myself to a greater awareness of this sensitive situation. This will not be the last word. Student Government will follow as leaders in raising this awareness. Thank you to Cynthia Glover and her friends, sometimes things like this must happen to make a crucial ignorance known.

Terise Fusco
Class of 1989
Student Body vice president

Do not stereotype

To the Editor:

I write in response to Terise Fusco's comment on financial aid being the most important issue facing Villanova students. I can not begin to explain how outraged I became after reading such a blatant display of racism. In Fusco's statement, "If we don't provide for them (minorities) they will not be educated so later on we're going to have to pay for them through welfare."

She does a great job of not only manifesting her ignorance, but in the process enlightens myself, as well as other minority students, to the current situation at this highly acclaimed Catholic institution. It is remarkable that at such a highly recognized, prestigous school such as Villanova, we have such uninformed bigots running for Student Government president.

When I caught up with Fusco and asked her if she had made these remarks her reply was that what she had said was taken out of context and that she did not know if this was what she really meant.

However, the crux of my complaint does not depend on whether her statements were taken out of context or even if she hit a mental block during the debate in which these remarks were quoted; this is not relevant, because if Fusco is such the do-gooder that she portrays, these remarks would have never been uttered.

Never would I, a black student, insinuate that all minorities are on welfare nor would I ever imply that minorities are a burden at Villanova. My point is, Fusco must have believed what she said because if these thoughts are as foreign to her as she would like the minority population to believe, these ideas would have never formulated.

The bad thing about Fusco's statements is not that they are racist statements, but that they are ignorant statements; an ignorance that runs rampant throughout our campus.

Students at Villanova live on stereotypes instead of facts. Little do Villanova students know the majority of people on welfare are white, but then again, how can I expect students here to know that, a few of them still think black people have tails. I do not think it improper to ask Fusco for a formal apology.

Damon T. Green
Class of 1991

Be considerate

To the Editor:

Where is the hottest place on campus to go and shoot the breeze with your friends (acquaintances, people you do not know)? Connelly? The wall? A dorm? Wrong. It is the library. Preferably under one of those blue "quiet study area" signs. That way you would not be disturbed, right?

This is what many people on this campus seem to think — that Falvey Memorial Library is the hot social spot on Villanova's campus (open seven days a week!).

You can see all of your friends and catch up on everything that has happened in the last seven years. Prime topics are: your/their weekend adventures, your/their love lives and summer plans, how your favorite intramural team is doing, and, of course, your life goals and ambitions.

All of these are good — the subject does not seem to matter as long as you get a big group together and, most important of all, be loud so that the rest of the floor can hear you! Surely everyone must be interested .

Surprise, we were not interested. Most of us are in the library for one reason — it is supposed to be a quiet study area. If you want to rehash the "big game," or discuss how banana prices affect your life, fine. Do it somewhere else. When you are in the library, shut up!

Joe Cubbage
Class of 1989

Refuse to support Dukakis' candidacy

To the Editor:

This editorial is written as a direct rebuttal to the letter written by Mark Cuthberson and John Lewis in last week's Villanovan entitled "Student defends Dukakis." Being a resident of the state of Massachusetts, I would like to address the generalities presented in Cuthberson and Lewis' article with facts.

I must agree with them on the point that Michael Dukakis was the benefactor of economic circumstances in the state of Massachusetts. By the time that Dukakis retook the state house in 1983, the economy, the nation's third worst when he left office, was among the nation's 10 best.

I also agree with their statement that "the true test of economic leadership for a state governor is how he can channel the benefits of an upswing in the national economy into policies that will sustain his state in the future."

However, I fail to see how Dukakis has done this. In the past 5 years "The Duke" has added 10,000 state employees, raising the state payroll 65 percent corresponding to a whopping $900 million, making Massachusetts No. 1 in the nation in growth state government from fiscal year 1983 to 1988. This, as you can well imagine, puts a huge strain on the already floundering state pension fund creates a huge deficit which will ultimately be made up by increased taxation.

On top of that, Massachusetts, holding only 3.1 percent of the nation's manufacturing jobs, lost 41 percent of all manufacturing jobs lost in the United States between 1984 and 1987, corresponding to over 74,000 jobs. This, however, did not show up in the unemployment data because of the influx of new jobs in construction, real estate and retail sales. These jobs were made available as a direct result of the high property values created as a result of Proposition 2 1/2, a measure that "The Duke" strongly opposed. I can hardly call creating a fragile service based economy meeting the challenge with "solid results."

The Wall Street Journal has attributed the good state of the Massachusetts' economy to the 1980 tax cut, which "The Duke" opposed, and to heavy defense spending, which averages $15,000 per capita over 2 times over the national average of $625 per capita. The Journal also saw the state's low unemployment as a result of Reagan's defense buildup and stagnant growth in the state's labor force. I would hardly call this "aggressive regional development."

Regarding the "Massachusetts Miracle," political economist Craig Roberts said in a recent Business Week article: "Sure the Democratic front runner worked miracles in Massachusetts/ if you see television in higher taxes and stepped up government spending."

I do not know about you but if this is the type of "innovation" that Cuthberson and Lewis refer to I would just as soon say 'No, Thank You!'

In closing I would like to paraphrase Cuthberson and Lewis by saying that their article proves beyond doubt that there is nobody less informed or arrogant then a Bay State Democrat. Permanent majority status has left this breed with a penchant for uninformed ranting.

Michael J. Persson
Class of 1990
Coordinator of Villanovans Against Dukakis

Letters policy

The Villanovan will print "Letters to the Editor" received at its offices in 201 Dougherty prior to the weekly deadline, Tuesday at 2 p.m. All letters must be typed and double spaced. The editors will withhold a name upon request, but all letters must be signed and should include the writer's telephone number. Because of limited space, not all letters can be printed. Others may be edited. Letters may be sent by mail to: the Villanovan, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. 19085.

Candidate thanks supporters

To the Editor:

I am compelled to thank all those who supported my candidacy. I can only hope that this letter will not do you an injustice.

The people who endorsed, supported and worked for me have instilled a tremendous pride in me. You have demonstrated your faith and belief in my abilities. The belief in a person is the greatest compliment one can bestow upon another.

I lack the skill to adequately show my appreciation for you, my supporters. I must express that I am proud to be one among you. You are the sole reason I believe in Villanova. You are what makes Villanova. Although the results of the election have been silenced, your support is loud and resounding.

I thank you for the victory you have given me.

Sean Closkey
Class of 1989

1989 class plan now

To the Editor:

Graduation is our final activity as Villanovans and our last union as a class. Student input is necessary if we are to have a voice in planning the format of our commencement.

Now is the time for the class of 1989 to join together to ensure that we are part of the decision making process.

The Student Government is currently forming a committee to work on plans for next year's graduation. This is your chance to be influential in the decision process.

Any interested persons wishing to participate are invited to stop by the Student Government Office, 204 Dougherty Hall, or call 645-7203 and leave a message for Vicki or Sean.

Sean Closkey
Class of 1989
Assistant Secretary of Internal Affairs

Vicki DiStefano
Class of 1989
Chairperson of the 1989 graduation committee

Fusco is competent

To the Editor:

As an active member of the Student Government, I feel it is necessary to reply to Michelle Ciccolo's article in the April 12 issue of the Villanovan. I have been on the coed dorms committee and have worked under Terise Fusco last year and supposedly under Sean Closkey this year.

I strongly disagree with Ciccolo's inaccurate statement about Fusco's leadership style. In the position of assistant secretary of internal affairs last year, Fusco led every coed dorms meeting. She telephoned students with the rest of the committee for the student survey. She initiated the coed dorms report that was submitted to the Senate this year. Fusco proved to be very thorough in the planning process for this report and did not submit it to the Senate last year for this very reason.

Interestingly enough, Closkey held the same position this year but did not attend a single coed dorms meeting. I can attest that he deserves no credit for work on this report. It angers me that anyone would try to give it to him. This is especially true since Ciccolo has been on this committee for two years.

In my opinion, it is obvious that Fusco is an active leader. I have worked below her for two years. She was chosen to become vice president because of her qualifications. Fusco's leadership abilities should never have been questioned as a ploy to better Closkey's campaign.

Ann Margaret Donnelly
Class of 1989

Ethics questioned

To the Editor:

After reading both the April 12 and 15 issues of the Villanovan, I now realize the ignorance and unprofessionalsim of its editorial staff. It is true that they have a right to endorse a candidate running for a political office, however, this does not justify the libelous and untruthful statements they used against the opposing candidate. This type of journalism is not only unethical, but also nauseating.

It is also sad to see that the Villanovan staff cannot realize their mistakes and poor judgement. They defended their endorsement only by stating that "anyone who disagrees with the Villanovan opinion has the right to write a letter to the editor voicing their own views."

However, this was not possible for Fusco and her supporters, because the election edition of the Villanovan came out on the day of elections. This obviously biased and untruthful issue then became a large donation to the Sean Closkey campaign, and he gratefully used these papers as his campaign material.

The most distressing result of both these Villanovan issues is that the student body has yet to learn the entire truth about both candidates and the entire 1988 presidential elections.

The Villanovan may believe that Fusco, by throwing away some of the Villanovans issued on election day, denied the rights of the students to receive knowledgable information on the elections "behind closed doors." However, the election issue did not provide such information, but, instead, concentrated on cutting up Fusco with unfounded statements on her work in Student Government. The Villanovan failed to discuss Closkey's qualifications and attributes and proceeded to mudsling against his opposing candidate.

This type of unethical journalism deserves and demands the attention of the Villanova student body and administration. I recommend that the paper's values be reviewed and the editorial staff be reprimanded for their mistakes.

Patricia A. Scudder 1989
Corrine E. Kohl
Cathy Coyne
Ann Margaret Donnelly
Vickie Sala
Megan Sullivan
Sharon Varga
Nancy Duncan
Diane Grey
Naomi Karan 1988
Rita Heedham 1990
Claudine Lise

Editor's note: The portions erroneously referred to in this letter as quotes from the April 15 editorial are actually from an op-ed published that same week.

On Campus

By DANA SHAFIE
Photography Editor

This week the Villanovan asks: What is your opinion regarding the Villanova presidential election scandal?

I think we should allow both candidates to share the presidency so that they can get twice as nothing accomplished!

Todd Schaeffer
junior
geography/history

It looks like the candidates are ready for big time politics.

Vince Donohue
senior
B.S.G.

Greed, for lack of a better word ... is good!

Jim Perdue
sophomore
John Guaragna
sophomore political science

I'm one of those apathetic students. I didn't care enough about either candidate to vote. I couldn't go wrong.

Greg Becker
senior operations management

I'll read about it in the Villanovan next week, if I can find one!

Ron Habecker
sophomore psychology

First Gary Hart ... Now this! What's the world of politics coming to? Maybe I'll run next year.

Rob Koelmel
sophomore

Greek Page

Greek awards presented

By STEVE DELDUCO
Greek Page Editor

On April 16, the IFC/PANHEL held their annual Greek Week awards banquet. The banquet held at the Holiday Inn in King of Prussia was the culmination of a week long of events in which Villanova fraternities and sororities vied for the coveted Greek Week trophies (one for the fraternity champion and one for the sorority champion).

The evening's festivities kicked off with opening addresses by IFC president Rob Colton and Panhellic president Miche Veix. After dinner had been served, the awards presentations for the evening commenced.

The first set of awards were presented by Martin McGahan of Pi Kappa Alpha. (Martin organized Greek Week along with Christie Bonesch of Kappa Alpha Theta and Melissa Mourtzanakis of Alpha Chi Omega). These awards were for excellence in Greek Week. Certificates were given to the first-place finishers for each Greek Week event for both fraternities and sororities. Following the certificate presentation, came the presentation of the Greek Week trophies for the overall champions. Third-place finishers, Tau Kappa Omega and Kappa Kappa Gamma and second-place finishers, Sigma Pi and Delta Delta Delta, were announced previously to the final presentation of the trophies to the Greek Week champions, Lambda Chi Alpha and Kappa Alpha Theta.

Next came the presentation by Joe Critelli of Sigma Nu of the year end awards for Greek excellence in various areas. The awards, in the form of plaques, went to Pi Kappa Alpha and Delta Gamma for social, Pi Kappa Alpha and Alpha Chi Omega for pledge programming, Pi Kappa Alpha for rush (sororities, since they all rush the same, did not have an award for rush), Lambda Kappa Delta (now FIJI) for athletics (there was no athletic award for sororities), and Zeta Psi and Alpha Phi for philanthropy.

The two biggest awards of the evening were Outstanding Greek and Overall Chapter Excellence. Outstanding Greek went to Joe Zaller of Sigma Phi Epsilon and Maureen Dannemiller of Kappa Kappa Gamma.

The Overall Chapter Excellence Awards were presented to Pi Kappa Alpha and Delta Delta Delta. As of this year, the overall Chapter Excellence Awards are in the form of cups, which will be displayed in a trophy case in Dougherty Hall. The winners will have their chapter name and year of winning engraved on the cups.

After the awards had been presented, Gary Bonas Jr., Greek advisor, gave a short speech. In his speech, Bonas stressed that in light of all the negative publicity that Greeks have been receiving lately, greeks should concentrate on the positives that they can offer, which is what tfe whole evening was about.

The evening concluded with a slide show of the Greek Week events that took place over the past week. Overall, the evening was a great time for all, winners and losers alike. The Greek community is stronger than ever at Villanova, and on this evening, the feeling in the room was evidence enough of this.

The Greek Week banquet was held this past Saturday. Pictured above, members of LXA display the Greek Week championship trophy which was theirs for another year.

Zeta Psi tees off for McDonald's House of Kids

By TOM MARRON
Staff Writer

On May 2, Zeta Psi fraternity will hold their Fourth Annual Invitational Golf Tournament to benefit the Ronald McDonald House of Kids. Each year, money is raised for the House of Kids through area business sponsorship, donations and entrance fees from players in the tournament. The tournament has been growing over the years, and with last year's field of 75 golfers, Zeta Psi donated close to $1,500 to the House of Kids.

The Ronald McDonald House of Kids is a home away from home for families of children being treated for leukemia, other cancers, severe blood disorders and other serious illnesses. These houses are located near hospitals so that families can stay close by, and ease the fears of children staying in hospitals for treatment. This non-profit organization cannot survive without donations of both time and money from willing individuals.

Through the Zeta Psi Golf Tournament, individuals and organizations can help in several ways. A small donation of $60, entitles an individual to 18 holes of golf, a golf cart, lunch, a banquet dinner, a three-hour beer bar, many prizes and lots of fun.

Most importantly, a worthwhile donation will be made to the House of Kids. If you are not a golfer, you can still make a contribution by attending the banquet following the tournament.

Campus organizations can get into the act by sponsoring a hole. For $40, a sign displaying your organization's name will be posted at the tee of your choice. It is this kind of support, especially from other Greek organizations, that has made the tournament such a success in the past. For more information concerning the tournament, and how you can help, contact Tom Marron at 354-9048.

New laws affect Greeks

By HOOPS FERRARO
Staff Reporter

The General Assembly of Pennsylvania recently revised the sections of the crimes code pertaining to minors with alcohol. The legislature has significantly upgraded the penalties associated with the offenses. The offenses are the standard ones that go with underage drinking. The typical you can not use, make or carry false identification, and you can not purchase, consume, possess or transport alcohol.

The monetary fines have been raised for these violations to upwards of $300 for the first violation and $500 for subsequent violations. When a minor violates one of these sections, the courts are required to notify PennDot. PennDot will then lift driving privileges as follows: (A) 90 days for the first violation; (B) one year for the second; and (C) two years for the third.

Underage individuals, attending parties, should be careful, and aware of these consequences, should their party be raided by police.

These offenses are more for individuals, not Greek chapters. Greek chapters, however, should pay close attention to one civil liability that is now also considered part of the criminal code. It is furnishing alcohol to minors.

Tenants of houses and apartments where minors are served liquor (i.e. TG) are held responsible for any civil liabilities, and now a criminal penalty as well. The fines for this are $1,000 for the first offense and $2,500 for subsequent offenses. Social chairpeople, pledge masters and party hosts should be aware of this new twist in the law and be even more careful.

Tri-Delta Centenial

By AMY OKONSKI
Staff Reporter

Eighteen hundred and eighty eight was a year of much innovation that today we take for granted. As the Kodak Corporation invented the first "box" camera, amateurs became able to take pictures for the first time. With invention of the electric motor, the first electric trolley began operation in Richmond, Virginia, and the Washington monument that we all tour on those "fun" family vacations was finally completed after 40 years of sporadic construction. Although college life was far from what it is today, sororities were becoming a vital part of many campuses.

It was Thanksgiving Day in 1888 at Boston College when Delta Delta Delta was founded by Sara Ida Shaw. The sorority that she began 100 years ago went on to become the first national sorority in the United States. This year Tri-Delta sisters all over the country and in Canada are celebrating the centennial anniversary of the organization.

The culmination of a year of local chapter celebrations is taking place from July 1 to 6 in Boston, where it all began. The week's activities of receptions, presentations and appearances by well known Delta Delta Delta sisters, such as Elizabeth Dole, will serve as a reunion and a meeting place for Tri-Delta sisters everywhere.

Many Villanova Delta Delta Delta sisters are planning to make the trip to Boston to experience a part of Tri-Delta history. One contribution from the Villanova chapter will be a specially designed banner to represent Villanova in the opening banner ceremony at the convention. However, the best representation any chapter can offer is its sisters. With thousands of Delta Delta Delta alumni and active sisters offering their individual experiences and sharing the common bond of Tri-Delta sisterhood, the week will most likely be a celebration that produces many fun times and good memories.

In a time when sororities and fraternities are abundant and highly publicized, it is almost impossible to imagine a time when they were relatively obscure.

This centennial celebration makes every Delta Delta Delta sister feel proud of the history and stability of her sorority. But more importantly, the anniversary offers a chance for all Greek members to look back to the original intentions of the founders of Greek organizations: fellowship and service to the community and to each other.

Greek tournament proposed

By RICH DePIANO
Staff Reporter

Earlier this semester Sigma Pi fraternity proposed to the I.F.C. and Panhellenic Council, an I.F.C.-Panhellenic Plaque/Cup, which was to be a recognizable symbol to the winners of a series sports and events. What developed from this proposal was a joint I.F.C.-Panhellenic Committee which was formed to investigate the possibility of having sports and events on campus with each fraternity and sorority competing.

After several meetings and discussions, the committee is presenting a proposal which hopefully encompasses what each fraternity and sorority wants. The proposal is for a one day Ultimate Frisbee Tournament to take place on a Saturday in September, when there is no football game.

The objective of this proposal is to make more visible and enhance the Greek Community at Villanova. The proposal is to have each fraternity play against one another with the winning teams moving on to specific fields, and the losing teams moving on to other fields.

The winning teams will continue to play with single elimination until lunch, which would be a barbeque, while the sororities having been assigned to certain fields would play a mixed game with the losing teams. After lunch, the games would continue until the finals were played, possibly in the stadium.

The committee has formulated these plans but it would need the help of every fraternity and sorority. It would need two referees for each fraternity game. They could be just two people there who would be briefed on the rules and would make certain calls. For, the intent is friendly competition, not dog-eat-dog play.

There are only advantages to this proposal. The advantages are positive exposure, good press, and it would greatly aid rush. By having it early in the year, incoming freshmen and student interest in the Greek community at Villanova is set in motion.

The list of advantages is endless, the committee is proposing this tournament at the next I.F.C. and Panhellenic meetings. If you have any questions, comments or would like to help with this tournament please attend the I.F.C. or Panhellenic meeting or call Rich DePiano at 527-9244.

Look for Greek Week Collage . . .

Features

Echoes from inside the prison walls

By R. MICHAEL BULLOTTA
Features Editor

The day that I was eagerly, almost nervously awaiting, had come. I was late arriving to my 11:30 a.m. criminology class last Wednesday. I guess I just took a little longer than usual getting showered and dressed. After all, I had to look nice for the 2,700 convicted murderers and other felons.

Dr. James J. McKenna, professor of criminology, handed out directions to the prison in class that morning. And, within minutes following the conclusion of class, we were off to the first and only field trip of the semester — the State Correctional Institution at Graterford, Pa., a maximum security prison.

Transportation was not provided for the trip, so, with a friend who is in my class, we began driving to the prison around 1 p.m.

One of the first crimes committed that day was our pathetic attempt at navigating the suggested route. After driving aimlessly for 25 minutes, not quite sure which state we were in (mentally, as well as geographically), we stopped and asked a road-side construction worker for his insight on finding the prison. His looks, combined with the quick, confident manner of his response with directions, made my friend and I quite certain that he had done some hard time there himself, or was at least related to someone who had.

To make the long drive a short story, at 2:30 p.m., a half-hour after we were supposed to be there, we arrived outside the giant cement wall surrounding the prison.

We parked, locking the doors of course, and entered the visitors' waiting room located outside the prison walls. We were glad to find that our class was still there waiting to be called in for our exclusive tour. It was, indeed, exclusive, as only Villanova and one other school is given this opportunity, probably because Villanova and the other college have professors coming to the prison to teach classes to inmates. (Believe it or not, these Villanova students do not sport Ralph Lauren shirts, pennyloafers or leather aviator jackets!)

When it was time for our tour to get under way, we had to first

The worst thing of all is that our freedom is taken from us. And that's worse than all the physical pain.
Inmate at Graterford Prison

be subject to the standard rigid security measures. These included signing in, presenting identification, passing through a metal detector and receiving a hospital-like ID bracelet, a clip-on visitor ID pass and an invisible hand-stamp.

We were told that we would not be permitted to leave the prison at the end of the tour unless we still had all three (the bracelet, pass and stamp). Needless to say, I checked often to make sure mine were still there. I was also told to get rid of my concealed "contraband," which consisted of a piece of gum I was chewing. It was pointed out that gum can be used to plug up locks, making them ineffective.

After we were cleared through security, two steel gates were opened, one at a time, and we were now inside the prison walls. I felt fairly confident at the time, at least compared to my friend who was as nervous as a cat in a room full of rocking chairs.

I must admit, my confidence was shaken a little when, as we were walking down the main corridor, it was brought to my attention that the photographs on the wall were those of prison guards that had been killed by inmates at Graterford. I began to get the impression that the people who lived at this giant housing project were not all swell fellows that you would want to play a round of golf with or take to the polo club for brunch.

The first main activity of the tour found our class in a room, unchaperoned by prison guards (although they were close by), talking with five convicted murderers. The purpose was to give the class a realistic picture of what the inmate is all about. I probably learned the most from the 60 minutes I spent with Ben, James, Dwayne, "Fang" and Tyrone.

My initial reaction was surprise with the polite and intelligent way the inmates were answering questions posed by students. My friend and I felt relieved to learn that at least some of the prisoners were "intelligent human beings," and that we were not surrounded by 2,700 Charles Mansons.

The inmates had some interesting things to say. When asked what it is like to live among the prison population at Graterford, one inmate said, "You have to be paranoid. You have to be constantly looking over your shoulder. I never feel safe until I'm locked in

(Continued on page 18)

Coors makes a splash in Pa.

By ALLEN AMBROSINO and JEFF GILLIES
Assistant Entertainment Editors

"Brewed in Golden, Colorado with pure mountain spring water, the finest barley, selected grains and hops. No preservatives or additives." This statement is found on every can and bottle of Coors beer, which, since 1873, has been one of the most popular American beers on the west coast.

In 1987, Coors was introduced to New York and New Jersey and was widely accepted by consumers. Now Coors is sold in Pennsylvania, making it available in every state expect one. What does Indiana know anyway?

The very first official six-pack was flown into Philadelphia on the world's smallest jet, measuring just six feet long. Mayor Wilson Goode was chosen to receive the beer on behalf of the city. Now residents of Pennsylvania can enjoy Coors in the comfort of their own homes.

You may be asking yourself, "Why is Coors so special?" Good question! First of all, Coors is the only company that has a product line that is made up of only draft beers. The reason for this is that other major brewers are forced to heat pasteurize their beer to maintain its purity. Heat harms the taste of beer, so, in order to protect the brewery-fresh flavor of its beer, Coors refuses to heat pasteurize.

Instead, Coors beer is run through a series of filters in a sterile environment and immediately placed into bottles, cans and kegs. Through this process, the need for heat pasteurization is eliminated.

In any beer, the single most important ingredient is the water. Coors uses only Rocky Mountain spring water. The water originates high in the Rockies and flows over miles of rock and sand before it emerges on the Coors property from underground springs. This results in the natural filtration of the water, which adds to the richness of the minerals and the water's general purity. Other brewers use chemicals to purify their water. Some brewers never learn.

Another factor which makes Coors a higher quality beer is that distributors are only allowed to keep the product on the shelf for 90 days, as opposed to other major brewers who allow their beer to sit for 120 days.

Due to these painstaking efforts, Coors is now the fifth largest brewer in America, and was recently named "Corporation of the Year."

The Coors product line consists of many different beers of which only a few are available in the east. Coors and Coors Light (known as the Silver Bullet) are the most popular. Heavy advertising campaigns have begun to introduce Coors Extra Gold and Herman Joseph's Original Draft. Also being distributed is George Killian's Irish Red.

Coors has already been made available on tap to many Pennsylvania bars, and will bring an estimated $970,580 in excise taxes into the state economy.

For premium taste and quality, beer drinkers everywhere should agree, as the new advertising slogan says, "Coors is the one."

(Photo courtesy of Adolph Coors Company)

Nationwide distribution of Coors has placed the beer company among the top five largest breweries in the country.

Campus Clip

(photo by Shultz)

A representative from Reptile World brings one of his best friends to Connelly Center for a little show and tell.

Tips to ace your finals

By JACQUELINE GENTILE
Assistant Features Editor

It is almost here folks! That's right, your favorite time of the year and mine too, final exams. To make these next couple of weeks as sane as posssible, Dr. Edward J. Reilly, a study skills counselor at Villanova's counseling center offers some helpful hints.

According to Reilly, while preparing for exams, "The typical thing that students do wrong is that they leave themselves too little time." He emphasized the importance of discipline during the semester, and stated that by reviewing old material before taking on new material, students will see a lot of benefits.

However, Reilly added that "human nature being what it is, most students look for a shortcut." Yet, when we take shortcuts in our studying, meaningful learning does not take place. We may be able to get by on an exam, but there is no real transfer into permanant memory and thus, after a test, we are likely to forget what we have studied.

At this point in time, Reilly suggests that students should already know what order their finals are in, and have a calendar that shows the dates of exams and the due dates of papers. Students should also have a plan for how they are going to prepare for finals so they can do little bits of studying at a time, rather than getting into a situation where you have to drop everything to study for one class.

Reilly offers several suggestions on how to make effective use of our study time. One way is simply to find a good place to study. This is a major accomplishment according to Reilly, because, "If you can find a place that you associate with being on task, if you can just get yourself there, that's half the battle."

Reilly advises against studying in your room, however, because there are usually so many distractions. He added that one of the worst places to study is in bed, because we typically associate our bed with sleeping.

Reilly also suggested setting aside certain times for studying. He explained that if we designate certain times for studying, that might be all we need to prompt us. He added that "for most students, it's not continuing to work that is the difficulty. It's getting started in the first place."

Reilly also stated that when it comes to studying, "distributive practice is better than mass practice." For example, three one-hour sessions are better than one three-hour sessions.

When we begin our studying, Reilly suggests that a good strategy is to do the things that are the most difficult or that we dislike first. He explained that "a lot of people do what they like first and never get around to the thing that probably is the most important."

To actually encode material in our minds, Reilly offers several options, such as reciting material or even writing things out. Making learning tapes is another technique that Reilly feels is helpful. After studying for awhile, Reilly said it is good to go back over your material and choose what you think are about five minutes of the most important information and make a recording.

Reilly feels this is helpful because it forces you to be active and to choose what you think is important and to recite the material in order to make the tape. Once the tape is made he suggests

(Continued on page 20)

"Louie, Louie" parades through Philly

By SUSAN E. CORCORAN
Features Editor

Philadelphia and the entire country will be marching to the rock-n-roll classic "Louie Louie" on May 22. More than 40 cities will be participating in the first National "Louie Louie" Parade Day. The parades are based on the song made popular by the Kingsmen in 1963 and the proceeds will go to benefit the Leukemia Society of America.

The 1988 "Louie Louie" parade will be held in Philadelphia, whose parade last year drew over 70,000 spectators, along with 5,000 kazoo-playing participants, several zany parade floats and an assorted group of bands — all playing and singing "Louie Louie" in unison.

"Louie Louie" first hit the charts in 1956 as a moderate success for its composer, Richard Berry. The song received greater attention, though, in 1963, when the Kingsmen recorded it. Their rendition of the song received a great amount of public scrutiny when listeners interpreted lead singer Jack Ely's slurred vocals as "being dirty."

Agencies such as the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Federal Communications Commission conducted extensive investigations of the song. Both Ely and Berry were called on to testify on the song's lyrics but no obscenity charges were ever filed. The song went on to sell 12 million copies.

The song gained the most attention though and reached the height of its popularity when John Belushi sang the lead vocals in the movie classic, "Animal House."

"Louie Louie" parades have been held in Philadelphia since 1985. It all began when WMMR-FM's popular morning personality John DeBella heard about a California radio station that played different versions of the song for 24 hours straight. DeBella then had a brainstorm. "I thought it would be great fun to have a parade for no reason," he said, "and the 'no-reason' could be 'Louie Louie'."

This year, the "Louie Louie" parade in Philadelphia and the more than 40 cities across the country will be held as fundraisers for the Leukemia Society of America. "Leukemia takes the lives of more children than any other disease. As a matter of fact, leukemia and related diseases will strike over 70,000 Americans this year — enough people to fill a stadium," said DeBella.

Funds for the society will be raised in a number of ways. Sales of kazoos to the paraders to play "Louie Louie" on the march are being sponsored by a number of companies, including Taco Bell. Paraders and parade float entrants can join for a small donation to the society.

The Kingsmen also plan to donate some of their proceeds to the society from their current cross-country tour, and Rhino Records, which includes the Kingsmen and other rock groups, is helping to promote the event along with radio stations around the country who are working with local Leukemia Society chapters.

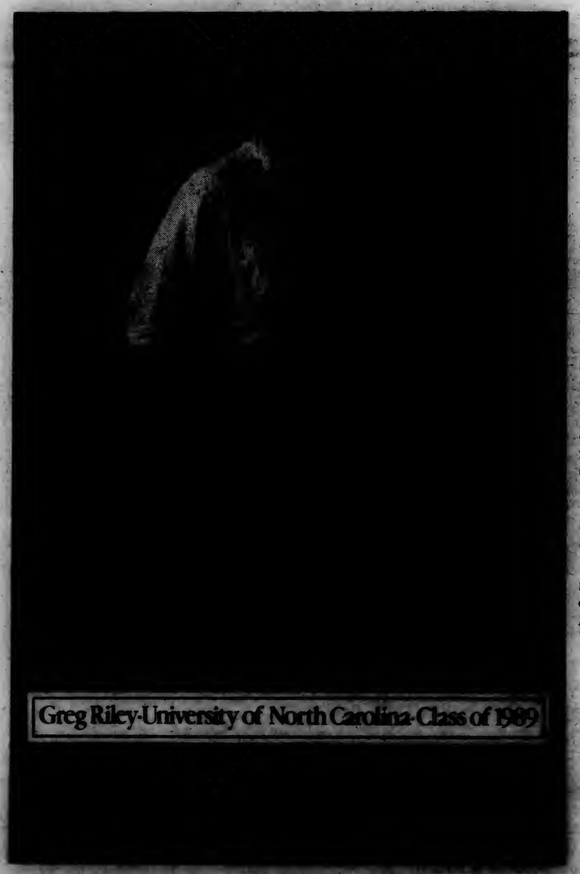
Rock clubs across the nation will be teaming up with the radio stations to sponsor benefit "Louie Louie" nights for the society.

Proceeds from the "Louie Louie" parade across America will be presented on the Leukemia Society of America's second national television event on Aug. 7.

Rubes® By Leigh Rubin

"It's cool guys, the cat's away."

J.C.
If Only You Knew -



Searching?

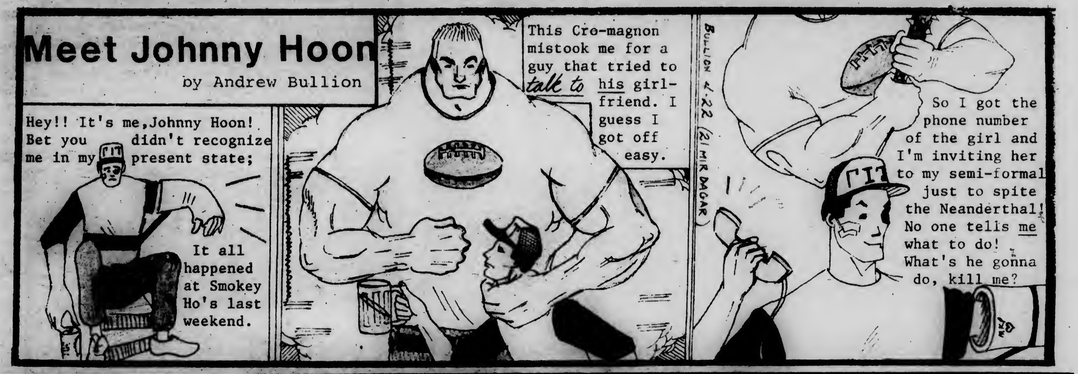
ARE YOU SEARCHING?
WE ARE, TOO . . .
Searching for young Catholic men, like you . . .
To live and work with the poor . . .
To share their sorrows and joys . . .
To care for the needy little ones . . .
To bring Christ into their lives . . .
To join the Columban Missionary Priesthood . . .
If you have a heart big enough,
JOIN US!
COLUMBAN FATHERS
MISSIONARIES
in ASIA and LATIN AMERICA
FOR MORE INFORMATION, WRITE OR CALL:
Father Michael O'Loughlin
Vocation Director
Columban Fathers
St. Columbans, NE 68056
(402) 291-1920

Name _____
Street _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
School/College _____ Age _____
Phone: ( ) _____

"Dad was right. You get what you pay for."

Greg Riley-University of North Carolina-Class of 1989

More people choose AT&T over any other long distance service. Because, with AT&T, it costs less than you think to get the service you expect; like clearer connections, 24-hour AT&T operator assistance, instant credit on wrong numbers. And the assurance that we can put virtually every one of your calls through the first time. That's the genius of the AT&T Worldwide Intelligent Network.



So when it's time to make a choice, remember, it pays to choose AT&T.

If you'd like to know more about our products or services, like the AT&T Card, call us at 1 800 222-0300.

AT&T
The right choice.

THE ART BIN

CONGRATULATIONS
To The 1987 Editorial Staff
Awarded
First Place
With Special Merit
By The American Scholastic Press
 Best Editorial
 Best Sports Coverage

Villanova criminology class tours prison

(Continued from page 15)

my cell at night."

About the violence that goes on at Graterford, another inmate, who had been at the prison for 12 years, indicated that it was much worse before drugs were so readily available. All five of the inmates we talked to agreed that the drugs help keep down the violence. They also indicated that much of the drug supply comes in via corrupt prison employees, and that they believe the guards unofficially condone the drugs because it makes their jobs easier and safer.

When asked their biggest complaint about the way the prison is run, most cited "inconsistencies" in policy to be the greatest problem. They said that different guards have their own different rules, and they found that to be unfair.

One student asked, "What's the worst part of being here?"

To this an inmate replied, "The worst thing of all is that our freedom is taken from us. And that's worse than all the physical pain."

The most startling observation during the heart-to-heart with the inmates was one concerning the unwritten code of "ethics" among prisoners. In a very real sense, the inmates have their own hierarchy of right and wrong. For example, they can understand how someone could "wind up killing" a middle-aged adult in an armed robbery executed for the purpose of obtaining money to support a drug habit that is controlling the criminal. (In fact, that scenerio is exactly what happened in the case of three of the inmates we met.) However, most inmates could not understand or justify killing or molesting children or senior citizens, even if money was involved. One inmate volunteered, "If me and my buddies went into a 7-Eleven and saw an elderly woman, we wouldn't pull off the job because she might end up getting hurt."

After the hour-long discussion with the prisoners, we went on to tour the infirmary, the education department, the parole offices, the clothing plant, the chapel, the assessment unit and the recreation yard.

The most memorable moment of the day, and one that woke up more than a few of our gooseburnps, came later in the tour. As we were walking down one of the main corridors, my friend and I were at the very back of the group and noticed a familiar face motioning at us from inside one of the offices where some of the more educated inmates do bookwork for about $.30 an hour.

The man was one of the friendly inmates that we had talked to earlier in the day. I had asked this particular inmate many questions in the interview concerning what he thought of an infamous resident of Graterford named William Bradfield.

Bradfield had been convicted in 1983 and sent to Graterford for three consecutive life sentences for killing a teacher at Upper Merion High School and her two children. There had been a television mini-series last fall about the so-called "Main Line Murderer," and I just finished reading Joseph Wambaugh's book on the subject called Echoes in the Darkness for one of my classes.

The man was motioning to us to come inside the office, and we did not see any reason why we should refuse. As we walked into the room, I turned to my right, only to be staring into the eyes of William Bradfield, the Main Line murderer. I looked around and realized there were no guards nearby.

My friend said nervously, "Is that him?" I said, "I-I think so." This was confirmed when Dr. McKenna and the rest of the class doubled back and entered the office where Bradfield and other inmates worked.

Bill was sitting quietly at his desk, working on some paperwork and maintaining his low-profile. With his long grayish beard and infamous "ice-blue" eyes, it conjured up images of Charles Manson, and others in his category. This fantastic image was partially shattered when I noticed a sign he posted on his cork-board above his desk that read, "Are we having fun yet?"

As we left the office and began walking down the hall to conclude our tour, I could not help thinking to myself that I probably would not be as frightened at the next "Nightmare on Elm Street" movie, now that I had come face-to-face with the real-life version of Freddie Krueger.

We then passed back through the two steel gates and turned in our passes. Our invisible hand-stamps were checked under the special light, and we took a deep breath when we were on the "outside" again.

On the way to the car, my friend, no longer ruled by her fear of prisons and prisoners, turned to me, smiled confidently and said, "Are we having fun yet?"

who knows, who cares

Thanks for all the hate mail ... at least we know you're reading us ... we're so unprofessional and unethical that the American Scholastic Press Association awarded us First Place with Special Merit for the sixth year in a row ... we would like to dedicate our award to the Elections Commission ... who did such a fine job ... to add to the confusion ... the nonsense ... the absurdity ... maybe next year we'll have a real commission ... that advertises the debates ... promotes student voting ... we'll never know who really won ... the commission lost count ... count ... you can count on two things at Villanova ... rain and tuition hikes ... hike ... during your hikes across campus, did you happen to notice the mounds of dirt in front of Vasey ... Villanova's imported the special edition supermole to clean up this campus ... no more vandalism ... no more alcohol ... and no more nonsense elections ... until next week ... who knows and who cares ...

Edited by the Editorial Board

Before. After.

Before flying Virgin, these typical collegiate-types thought travelling to London was about as exciting as taking an 8 a.m. Trig exam with a hangover.

After flying with us, they were as happy as three rock stars on a world tour.

You'll feel the same way. Once you've flown on our roomy 747s. And experienced our great movies, music videos, BBC comedy shows, 8 different music programs, and all our other award-winning in-flight entertainment. All coming at you through a pair of serious electronic headsets.

Still not satisfied? How about a nice hot meal. In fact, a choice of 3 nice hot meals.

That's right, it's airplane food. With one major difference. It's actually edible. It's also followed by tea and pastries later on.

So you can munch out while you do a little extra studying. (Yeah, right!)

Want even more? Then let us remind you of our fares. As low as $219* from Newark. $249* from Miami.

Now what do you think?

Great. Then see your travel agent. Or call us at 1-800-862-8621.

Hey, if we could please these sourpusses, pleasing you will be a breeze.

Virgin Atlantic Airways. 747's To London.

Take us for all we've got.

*One way Late Saver Fare. Fare and taxes not included. Available within 7 days of departure and must be ticketed upon booking. Non-refundable. Valid in New York April 1–June 30. In Miami, April 1–May 31.

Paul – where are you?

DAEDALUS EDUCATION SERVICES LSAT Now At Villanova!

GO FOR IT! GRE · GMAT · LSAT

• ONE DAY SEMINAR
• 20+ HOUR REVIEW COURSE
• CLASSES STARTING SOON
• EXPERIENCED FACULTY
• SMALL CLASS SIZES
• TELEVISION REVIEW MATERIALS

GUARANTEED SCORES or you repeat your next course free.

Affordable Courses Since 1974

CALL 215-449-6500

Greek bikers to ride for charity

By ELKE JONES
Staff Reporter

This summer, senior John Delfini and junior Greg Muscatello will literally reach across America as a select team of 25 cyclists and crew members from Pi Kappa Phi chapters nationwide pedal from coast to coast with the goal of raising over $50,000 for PUSH.

PUSH, which stands for Play Units For Severely Handicapped, is a non-profit corporation founded 10 years ago by designer Thomas Sayre and Pi Kappa Phi fraternity in response to the special environmental needs of institutionalized children in normal home settings. PUSH not only helps improve the quality of life for people with handicapping conditions, it makes things easier for those who take care of them.

Delfini, a member of Pi Kappa Phi since his sophomore year, stated what caught his interest in the project was an advertisement on his fraternity board. The advertisement sounded appealing, and he felt that, before beginning his career in the fall, he wanted the personal satisfaction of helping others less fortunate.

After applying and being interviewed over the phone, Delfini and Muscatello were two of 20 selected out of 60 applicants from 125 chapters. The decisions were based on biking and fundraising ability.

The marathon begins in San Diego, where the two Villanovans will start their 60 to 100 mile per day trek on the southern route, encountering blistering heat and inclement weather conditions at times. They will finish in Washington, D.C. on Aug. 14. "I'm a little nervous about the mountains," said Delfini.

Yet, proving again that no mountain is too high to climb, Delfini and Muscatello's most challenging feat is raising funds for this event and training for the months ahead. Each member must raise $2500. Commenting on the fundraising, Delfini stated "I now have a better understanding of how hard it is to raise money, even though this is a charity." Delfini bikes 20 miles a day, as well as lifts weights at ATRA.

Dedicated and enthusiastic about the coming months, Delfini and Muscatello are supported by their chapter in efforts to gain sponsors. "So many companies say 'no' [to contributions] because they already have their budget planned," said Delfini. However, Delfini has prospective proposals from Rohm-Haas, PNB in Bryn Mawr and Richboro, Pepsi and Coopers and Lybrand, where he will be working as an accountant in the fall. Villanova's public relations is forming press releases and the Greek Interfraternity and Panhellenic Councils are contributing also. Additionally, Smokey Joe's has donated $20, and Saco East will be providing bikewear.

Anyone interested in contributing to the PUSH America 1988 can contact John Delfini at 825-7361 or write to PUSH, Inc., 110 West Union St., P.O. Box 1972, Morganton, North Carolina 28655 or contact Student Activities at Villanova University.

(Photo courtesy of Delfini)

John Delfini and Greg Muscatello take time out from training for their charitable cross-country bike ride and pose for a pic.

Pregnant?
NEED TO KNOW?
* Free Pregnancy Tests
* Confidentiality
* Results while you wait
* Convenient Main Line location

CALL TODAY 525-1557

Amnion Crisis Pregnancy Center
842 Lancaster Ave.
Bryn Mawr, Penna. same block as Bryn Mawr Theatre

SNOW MAY BE WHITE - BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE

GOLDEN IMAGE TANNING CENTERS

566 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA
Located Next to Al E Gators
CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
525-7125

• Safe UVA Tanning
• Open 7 Days
• Complete Privacy
• Relaxing Atmosphere
• Trained Technicians
• Wolff/ Coppertone Products

ONE FREE TANNING SESSION! New Customers Only Limit One Per Person With Coupon Only Expires 3/31/88

SAVE $9.00 7 VISITS ONLY $35.00 New Customers Only Limit One Per Person With Coupon Only Expires 3/31/88

We feature:
Novalarium Lamps exclusively from patented SCA Wolff System
"The World's #1 Choice in Indoor Tanning"

COLLEGE DISCOUNT — 20% OFF ANY PACKAGE
Villanova Student I.D. Required
American Express Cards Accepted
Have FUN in the SUN Longer this Spring Break!

Personal and Classified Advertising

CLASSIFIEDS

Talented singers wanted for work on Philadelphia's most exciting entertainment attraction, "The Spirit of Philadelphia." Full and part-time positions available. Call between 1 and 3 p.m. for auditions at 923-4966 and ask for Bill.

Students: get your perfect summer job! You can be in the sun all day and still make great pay. Ideal for summer school students. Evening and weekend shifts available in our air-conditioned Bryn Mawr office. If you have good communication skills and enjoy working with people, call Joyce for an immediate interview at 527-4084.

College Pro has summer full-time customer service positions available. Looking for reliable and hard working people to work in our regional office. Must have good phone manner. For more information please contact Sue at 783-8500 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Babysitter needed for Drexel College Life. For leading fraternity and sorority. Call Student Counseling Services at (215) 768-6800. Now going until April 29.

Full-time summer child care job. Looking for energetic, experienced student to care for my five-month old in my home. Must have car, five days including Saturday. Great salary, great kid, and pool at home to boot. Call 667-5189 ask for Julie Goldman.

Summer Day Camp, Sesame Day Camp, in major Montg. Co./Norristown, PA Day Camp, is looking for male/female staff. Join a team of fun, exciting, professional educators. Excellent salary, call 215-275-CAMP.

National Camp Association Summer Camp job clearinghouse — highest salaries paid — quick and efficient job placement — a free service. Call us for an interview at 1-800-752-CAMP.

United States Marine Corps Undergraduate Officer Programs. Freshman — the Marines are looking for a few highly qualified men who want to lead. This summer, at no obligation, you can find out if you have what it takes. We offer good pay, tuition assistance, loan deferment, graduate opportunities, and the most challenging and rewarding experience available to young men of adventure. To learn more, call 568-2580 and ask for Captain Farr.

Work to be earned from 2-bedroom FULLY FURNISHED Radnor House Condo, air conditioned, heated pool, cable, washer/dryer, one and one-half year old, available for sale July 1. Interested call 281-4657.

Summer Camp Counselors Needed — Wilderness, arts, sports, water sports, tennis, gymnastics, dance, drama, ropes, high ropes, Camp Director, Assistant Director, Unit Heads, Office Staff, Nurses. Camp of Pocono Mountains, Camp Ockanickon, Camp Ockanickon for Girls. Camp Ockanickon for Boys. "Happy Memories Begin Here." Call Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., Thursday 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. It is never too early to start planning for summer.

Camp Counselors wanted. Boulder Mountain Camp in Colorado. Western activities. Call collect 215-667-8647.

Government Homes from $1. "U Repair." Also tax delinquent property. Call 805-644-9533 Ext. 1414 for info.

The following positions are available during the summer months for full and part-time help. Carpenters' helpers needed, masonry helpers, general labor, landscaping, grass cutting. Supervisory positions are also available for the summer. All work is based in the Media, Pennsylvania area. Salary will be determined per experience. Send written qualifications or apply in person to Mike Gura, Media Real Estate, 555 East Baltimore Pike, Media, Pa. 19063.

Female '87 Villanova Graduate seeks female '88 graduate to live and share half expenses in two-bedroom Bala Cynwyd apartment. Call 477-6902. Leave message for Corinne.

Furniture For Sale. Couch, chair, rocker, kitchen table with three chairs, bed. Call Chris or Tom at 275-6385.

Room for rent: St. David's Condo Park. $250 monthly plus 25 percent utilities. Must be female. Call 644-6817.

Roof rack for auto. Perfect for dorm. 3.1 cu. ft. Limited capacities — barely used. Must sell. Call 687-3774.

Ocean City, N.J., three bedroom house to rent for summer, May 15 to Sept. 15. Two blocks off street end. $4,000 per month. Call Gerry Lewis, Bryn Mawr, 525-8100, after 5 p.m. 391-0502. American Resort Realty.

Responsible who grew up in female-headed households needed to fill out research questionnaire on student. I need to know about you. Please call Elise at 896-2884.

Babysitter needed. Responsible, loving and energetic person. Part-time, 10 to 15 flexible hours per week, $4 per hour. Prefer someone with car. Must be able to work through the summer. Call Laura, 687-9565.

Two Villanova students looking for apartment to sublet in train-accessible area near campus (Radnor to Ardmore) one or two bedrooms. Call Terry, 525-9230 or Andrew, 527-2542.

Hot computer software company looking for graduates for full-time work. Great growth opportunities are available at this Philadelphia-based company. Contact Tricia Farrell or Mary Lou Cubbage, Career Development Center, 645-4060. Send resumes to Schnerr Resources Inc., 8100 Cherokee St., Philadelphia, PA 19118.

PERSONALS

Group 73-1988 and Group 50-1987. Get psyched for the last big bash before the crash!! See you tomorrow! Love, your OC — Big Bri.

Lissa! Reas: we knew you could not stay out of the hospital for too long! Hope you feel better real soon — we're hungry! Love, Pam and Andrea.

Hall F: Do you know the answer to "Who is . . . " but not to "How much . . . " What now? Noel.

Accountants — I'm really psyched for this weekend! I can't wait! Love, Janet.

Delta Gamma congratulates Kerri Kelliher and Charles Mooney, winners in our fundraising contest. Many thanks to all who supported us!

Jill and Nancy, should I hum a slow song or "Push It?" Kathy.

Megan and Russ, this is two weeks late, but thank you for your help. You're both fantastic friends. Kathy.

Jennifer Lee — Happy 19th birthday. Thank you for being there for me. Yes, I'd still love you even if your hair fell out. Te quiero. Ya know what I mean, Jellybean? Love, Kevin.

Lisa M., is it true that you want to marry Rich, play tennis and shop?? Love always, Joe M.

J.C. — . . . if you only knew . . .

Dearest Beryl, the cemetery behind St. Rita's is a cool (especially without a jacket) place to be at midnight tonight. Come alone. No insecurity guards.

B.V. — Watching the window . . . should I jump? No . . . I think I'll wait . . . Love . . .

To a friend and a lover, Happy Birthday!! BL

Advice from BUTCH BAXTER

Dear Butch,

Since it is obvious you are an expert on the subject, I was wondering, what is prison like?

Signed,
A Dude who Really Cares and is Genuinely Concerned

Hey Dude,

Picture a giant, luxurious country club. Then take away the golf course, the tennis courts, the swimming pool, the chef, the restaurant, the locker rooms, the golf carts, the caddies, the lifeguards, the Rolls Royces and Mercedes, the tennis and golf pros, the jacuzzi, the sauna, the oriental rugs, the chandeliers, the fine china and crystal, the silverware, the expensive paintings and wallpaper, the ice sculptures, the brunch buffet and the fine landscaping. Then change the names of the members from names like 'Skippy' and 'Buffy' to real names like 'Rocko' and 'Snakebite,' while at the same time dressing them all up in plain gray Izod shirst (no alligator, of course) and matching pants.

Dear Butch,

I have a roommate problem. I have been living with my current roommate in our dormitory room for the past semester, and I am not sure I can take another day. My roommate is usually a model human being. He is almost always courteous and considerate, except for his one extremely annoying obsession. Every night, at precisely 3:35 a.m., his alarm goes off and wakes me up. He gets up, slips into one of his Elvis Presely outfits, sticks on the velcro sideburns, and proceeds to do his rendition of "Jailhouse Rock" on his kazoo that he got from a McDonald's Happymeal.

I have asked him many times why he does this, but he just gives me one of his Elvis smirks and begins singing "You ain't nothin' but a Houndog." With finals coming up, I can't be up until all hours of the night rocking with the roommate from hell. Since you are an old jailhouse rocker yourself, I figured you might be able to help.

Signed,
A Nightmare on Sullivan Street,
Elvis' Revenge

Hey Nightmare,

Good choice going for expert advice. You're no fool. Obviously you've heard what wise men have said about rushing in. I think I may have the answer to your problem. You can probably solve your dilemma and cure your roommate of his illness by using a little psychology and playing his game. First, go out and rent the appropriate costume. Then, set your alarm clock for 3:34 a.m. When it goes off, get up and quickly slip into your rented Barry Manilow get-up. Begin singing "Mandy" at the top of your lungs until your roommate gets the picture, or assaults you with a heavy metal object, whichever comes first.

If your roommate questions your activity, do not answer, but instead break into harmony with "I Write the Songs." And if this doesn't work, and your roommate persists with his Elvis charade, at least you have a good chance of a spot with Ed McMahon on "Star Search." By the way, if you happen to run into Ed, tell him I never got the 10 million he promised me.

The characters and letters are purely fictitious, and any resemblance to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Sunshine Day brightens V.U.

By MEGAN WHITE
Staff Reporter

If you can remember, on March 24, most of us went without lunch to help out Sunshine Day. Many times, without knowing what Sunshine Day was or its purpose, people signed their names and walked away hungry. I always wondered if what was happening was on the level or not. Where exactly was the money going?

On that day, Project Sunshine made $2700 to be used this Saturday for Sunshine Day. Over 120 underprivileged children will be arriving on campus to have some fun in the sun. The carnival will start around 10:30 a.m. when the children arrive. Relay races will be held followed by a show given by a magician, Jerry Fraziers. The Pep Band will play during lunch and then it is out to the grounds for games, prizes, face painting and cotton candy. There will be a caricature artist and rides for the little ones including the moon bounce and the ferris wheel.

The children, ages 4 to 10, will be coming from six different organizations that Villanova students have worked with throughout the year, usually as tutors. They include South West Community Center, Patrician Society, Genesis II, Resurrection School, Catholic Worker and the Laotian Community.

Two hundred and twenty Villanova students will be volunteering their time to make the day a success. The students will be running the games, wearing costumes and going around one-on-one with the children as "huggers."

Preparing for final exams

(Continued from page 15)

playing it at convenient times, such as while you are doing the dishes or driving the car. So, from now until finals go ahead and crank up that calculus while you are cruising the Main Line.

Reilly added, however, that "in terms of the learning itself, the poorest technique is just to reread material."

Once we have encoded material, Reilly suggests that active learning is the most beneficial. For example, he stated that "after you've studied, and not before, it's often good to get with some other people to see how much you know."

Also, find out from your instructor the type of exam you will have, whether it will be multiple choice or essay and if it is going to be cumulative. Reilly states that the best rehearsal for a multiple choice exam is to have a study guide that asks multiple choice questions, or to make up some probable questions on your own.

Likewise, if you are going to have an essay exam, Reilly explains that "the best thing you can possibly do is force yourself to anticipate some likely questions and write and struggle at home."

If your exam is cumulative, it is helpful to go over old tests to see where your problem areas are because Reilly stated that "from a teacher's point of view what he wants to retest are the things he noticed a lot of people didn't get."

If you find yourself in a situation that demands cramming, Reilly suggests that the key at this point "is being very selective. You have to exercise good judgment and you're taking some chances, but if you get yourself into that kind of a corner, that's the type of thing that you probably need to do."

Reilly concludes by saying that it does not do you any good to indulge in negative thinking before an exam, such as "Oh, I'm really going to blow this test." We should try to dismiss this type of thinking and replace it with positive affirmations like, "I'll give it my best shot," or "If it's hard for me it's going to be hard for everybody else."

The New York Times!

CAMPUS REPRESENTATIVE NEEDED

Responsible student(s) needed to handle the promotion, marketing and delivery of The New York Times on the Villanova University campus for the 1988-89 academic year.

Hours 6 to 8 a.m. daily.
Good commissions with incentive bonuses.
No experience necessary.
Please contact:
Michael Allen
The New York Times
(215) 884-7957

1988 STEERING COMMITTEE
Let's "Make It Happen" on Sunday!!
Love
Susan and Brian
Let's Go Cats . . .
Ya Da!-da-da-da-da-da!

JINGLES INTERNATIONAL
ADVANCED HAIR TRAINING CENTER

Models needed to model Spring/Summer Hair Designs for Jingles of London. The Jingles design team will need models for cut designs and models with long hair to dress. There will be a full consultation between the Jingles Design Team and Model.

For more information call:
Vince Kearney at 1-800-453-4466
or
Laurie at (215) 337-2044

Entertainment

Musical 'Pippin' opens at Vasey

By ALLEN AMBROSINO
Assistant Entertainment Editor

"Pippin" is a musical that is currently being performed at the Vasey Theater. After viewing this production, there were several good and bad points to be taken into consideration.

An outline of the plot shows how the main character, Pippin (Michael Hollinger), is in search of a better life because he feels he is an extraordinary person. During the play, he follows his dreams and learns a great deal about himself through his journey. Some of the people that he encounters are his father, King Charles (Paul Taylor), step-brother Lewis (Jerome P. Behe), step-mother Fastrada (Beth Dannenfelser) and a very special woman and young boy who help to turn his life around.

Hollinger's sturdy performance was the most impressive part of this musical. He handled a challenging role with relative ease as he struggled within himself to find his place in the world.

When Pippin comes home from school, he meets his father and talks to him about his life over the past few years. Taylor played his part well as he portrayed a strict, war-like tyrant who ruled his people with an iron fist. He also evoked laughter from the crowd with his one-liners a few times.

His step-mother and step-brother both had the same attitude towards Pippin and the crown. She wanted to do anything that she could to make sure that Lewis became the king in the near future. Behe was excellent as the belligerent step-brother who was in love with himself. The energy that he brought on to the stage made his character seem very dynamic and fun to watch. However, Dannenfelser was very lackluster during all of her scenes. She was only a minor character and did not make a solid contribution to the play.

After Pippin left home on his quest for something more, he was picked up by a young woman who took him into her home. Catherine (Megan Bellwoar) had several scenes where her charm and beauty helped to make them work. However, some of her lines were a bit weak as she was inconsistent at times.

Her son, Theo (Jesse Ryan), used his cuteness in order to win the audience's hearts as well as Pippin's. Even though he was only involved in a few of the scenes, his presence definitely added something to the play.

During every part of the play, the Leading Player (Susanne H. Smart), would let the audience know exactly what was happening. She played her part effectively, but was hindered by her average singing voice and jokes that were not funny. Even though she had her problems, Smart also had many impressive moments as well.

All of the actors had a high energy level, and a few of the actors turned in admirable performances. However, on the bad side, the musical was about 45 minutes too long, most of the acting was mediocre and did not keep the audience's attention for very long.

The dancing ensemble seemed as though they would never run out of energy. Unfortunately, most of the people in the audience were drained of their energy after about one and a half hours of the two and a half hour musical. They were really enjoyable to watch and it is really not their fault that "Pippin" was so drawn-out. Many of their costumes were very colorful and brightened the mood of the play considerably. Because of these dancers, "Pippin" was tolerable, if not entirely enjoyable.

If you have the time and the patience, "Pippin" would be a good way to spend part of your spare time. But be warned; you must continuously keep yourself on top of this musical in order to fight the boredom.

(Photo courtesy of Vasey Theatre)
Michael Hollinger (left) Pippin and Megan Bellwoar appear at Vasey Theatre.

"Beetlejuice" plot fails to develop

By STEPHEN POWERS
Staff Reporter

"Beetlejuice" directed by Tim Burton
Warner Brothers
**

You know that "Beetlejuice" is going to be a little unusual when you hear the opening music — a variation on the theme from the old "Munsters" TV series. However, being unusual is not enough to carry this movie, even though it does have its moments. Director Tim Burton, the man who brought us "Pee-Wee's Big Adventure," packs this horror-comedy with a lot of special effects, but it is hampered by a weak, uneven script.

The film's principal characters are Adam and Barbara Maitland (Alec Baldwin and Geena Davis), a young couple who have just bought their dreamhouse in rural Connecticut. They are in the process of restoring it when their car goes off a covered bridge and they are killed. It is only after they return home and fail to find their reflections in a mirror that they realize that things are not quite kosher. Sitting on the coffee table is a dusty volume entitled "Handbook for the Recently Deceased," which says, among other things, that the young ghosts must spend the next 125 years in their house before they can leave.

Michael Keaton gives a terrific performance as the ghost who is determined to appall everyone as much as he possibly can.

Things get worse for the Maitlands when their house is sold to Charles and Delia Deetz (Jeffrey Jones and Catherine O'Hara), obnoxious New Yorkers who plan to SoHo-ize the old-fashioned home with the help of their live-in interior decorator, Otho (Glenn Shadix). Adam and Barbara do what they can to scare the Deetzes away, by severing their own heads and so forth, but the living cannot see the dead, except for Charles' ghoulish daughter, Lydia, who befriends the ghosts.

When their attempts at haunting fail, the Maitlands seek help at a bureaucratic office for the dead, which has a waiting room filled with some very peculiar casualties — a magician's assistant sawed in half, a hunter with a shrunken head, and a burnt corpse who smokes cigarettes. The Maitland's caseworker, Juno (Sylvia Sidney), tells them to start simply when they begin haunting again, but warns them against hiring Betelgeuse (pronounced "Bettlejuice"), a self-proclaimed "bio-exorcist" whose advertisements can be seen all over the supernatural world.

Of course, the Maitlands eventually turn to Beetlejuice to scare the Deetzes away, and Michael Keaton gives a terrific performance as the ghost who is determined to appall everyone as much as he possibly can. He can sprout snakes on top of his head, make his head spin around and around, and turn his arms into huge mallets. The trouble here is that Keaton is not given nearly enough screen time (he appears in only about 30 minutes of the film) and when he is in a scene, director Burton ruins the effect by cutting to other characters just as Keaton gets going. And the way the Deetzes finally surrender is both confusing and inane.

The most frustrating thing about "Beetlejuice" is that it has enormous potential, but falls apart when it reaches the climax. To its credit, it has some strong performances, especially by Catherine O'Hara "SCTV", Glenn Shadix and Winona Ryder as the creepy daughter. "Beetlejuice," unfortunately, turns out to be the kind of movie that is entertaining at first, but makes you look at your watch after about an hour to see when it will be over.

David Lee Roth dances but disappoints

By JEFF GILLIES
Assistant Entertainment Editor

Billed as "the ultimate rock and roll experience," David Lee Roth's concert last Sunday night turned out to be a major disappointment. The show was marred by both extremely poor sound quality and a questionable song selection.

Opening act Poison did an excellent job of warming up the crowd as they played a short but lively set. The crowd responded well, especially to "Talk Dirty To Me" and "I Won't Forget You." At the end of their set, bass player Bobby Dall smashed his guitar into pieces as the crowd roared.

Anticipation grew as the lights dimmed for Roth to take the stage. Kicking off the festivities with "The Bottom Line," it became immediately apparent that Roth was more concerned with putting on a show than with the quality of the music. Roth could barely be heard above the guitars and the entire sound was so loud that it was unclear and distorted.

To Roth's credit, the show was an entertaining one for the most part. He danced about, talked to the audience to get them going and taunted and teased with obscene comments.

The crowd was rowdy and the stage was cluttered with everything from a beach ball to women's underwear. One fan ran on stage, and after being brutally tackled and clinging to the microphone stand for dear life, was removed.

After a few songs from Skyscraper, Roth gave the crowd a taste of what they really wanted as he ripped into "Ain't Talking Bout Love." This was the only older Van Halen material played in the set aside from a completely incomprehensible version of "On Fire." The crowd's response was at its highest level for the Van Halen songs, but Roth only played a few of them.

The most popular songs from his two solo efforts, were "Yankee Rose," "Just A Gigolo" and "Just Like Paradise." These songs were some of the better performances on the night and were made even better by the outstanding playing of Steve Vai.

For "Panama," Roth climbed a ladder in the middle of the floor to a boxing ring hanging from the rafters. This was arguably the high point of the concert.

Immediately following "Panama," which Roth did not even sing in full, he rode a giant surfboard back to the stage as "California Girls" was played.

Outside of these highlights, the show dragged on. Vai showed his talents in some dazzling solos, but Roth's emphasis on the show clearly took away from the music.

Even the show itself was not very spectacular, especially from someone who is known as "the master showman." Motley Crue and Bon Jovi have done better in their recent tours.

At one point, the entire band took center stage to play the steel drums. This was amusing, but the time could have been better spent on some more Van Halen material. "Hot For Teacher" was the only other Van Halen song in the set.

Roth's biggest mistake may have been building up so much hype in the media for his tour.

At the end of the show, Roth asked the audience if they had fun and received a resounding yes. Perhaps if he had asked if they thought the concert was worth the ticket price, the answer would have been different.

The encore set contained perhaps the worst version of "You Really Got Me" ever to be played. Had Ray Davies been there to see Roth completely maul his classic song, he probably would have tossed his cookies.

"Jump" was the final encore and received the most applause. However, by this time most people were anxious to go home.

Roth's biggest mistake may have been building up so much hype in the media for his tour. Everyone had high expectations that Roth was unable to live up to. The concert was not a diaster, but rather a letdown. Do not go out of your way to catch this tour.

(Photo courtesy of Spectrum)
David Lee Roth appeared April 17 at Spectrum.

Triple bill of metal invaded Tower Theater

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

One of the latest techniques of concert promoters to get a large audience at their shows is to join three bands together, instead of two, on the bill. The latest band triplet came to Philadelphia's Tower Theater last Friday. That proved to be one of the best metal shows in a while. Megadeth, Warlock and Sanctuary are currently touring together and, although an unusual matchup because of their different styles of music, they got great audience response.

Sanctuary opened up their 40-minute set with "Battle Angels," the first song on their debut album, Refuge Denied. The album was prduced by Dave Mustaine of Megadeth and added to Megadeth's tour for just this reason. Consisting of Warrell Dane (vocals), Lenny Rutledge and Sean Blosl (guitars), Jim Sheppard (bass) and Dave Budbill (drums), Sanctuary performed seven of the nine songs on Refuge Denied.

Included in the set were "Sanctuary," "Die for My Sins," "The Third War" and their cover version of "White Rabbit." This technical metal band bordering on thrash are destined for success if they continue in the vein they are following now. Most of their lyrics intelligently criticize the problems in today's world and reflect the direction most bands are going in these days.

Warlock are more a hard rock metal band than a speed metal or thrash band. Led by singer Doro Pesch, the band also boasts Tommy Bolan and Niko Arvanitis on guitars, Tommy Henriksen on bass and Michael Eurich at the drums. Warlock is currently riding the huge success of their second American release and fourth album, Triumph and Agony. Playing their faster and more powerful songs to better suit Megadeth's fans, the band included "Three Minute Warning," "I Rule the Ruins," "Cold, Cold World," and "All We Are" from Triumph and Agony, saving "East Meets West" for an encore.

The excellence of the musicians and Pesch's beautiful voice are what give Warlock their substance. Pesch is a captivating persona and in order to better acquaint the audience with Warlock, the band also played other set standards "Midnite in China," "Earthshaker Rock," "Burning the Witches," and "Homicide Rocker."

If Warlock continue at the rate they are going at now, you can expect to see them headlining the Tower on their next album. In any case, Triumph and Agony and the other Warlock albums have enough to appeal to all hard rock lovers with a tendency toward heavy metal.

The unique thing about this show . . . is that for once the sound was actually good.

The featured band of the night was Megadeth, the world's finest speed metal band. The crowd went wild in response to the foursome of Dave Mustaine (guitars and vocals), Dave Ellefson (bass), Jeff Young (guitars), and Chuck Behler (drums). The band's latest record, so far, so good . . . so what!, is currently at 30 in Billboard's charts and still climbing. Megadeth went on to play six of the eight songs from that successful album, excluding "Into the Lungs of Hell" and "502."

Opening with "Set the World Afire" and then "Hook in Mouth" (the band's anti-PMRC song), Megadeth also performed the songs on the first side of Peace Sells . . . But Who's Buying?, 1986's hit Megadeth album. Because of the short set, Megadeth only had "Mechanix" and "These Boots" on the set list for the night from their first album. Definite highlights of the show were "Peace Sells," "In My Darkest Hour," "Wake Up Dead" and "These Boots," which featured Ellefson in a bass solo beforehand.

Despite encouraging words for the persecuted between songs and general invitations to go crazy, band leader Mustaine was relatively quiet, yet visibly amused and happy with the crowd's welcome of Megadeth to Philadelphia. The band concentrated more on playing songs than wasting time with solos. Although Behler performed a drum solo in the set, it was a short, yet powerful one. The unique thing about this show in comparison to other Megadeth shows is that for once the sound was actually good. With band mascot "Vic" Rattlehead on a banner as a backdrop to the stage, there was no question who ruled the audience that night.

(Photo by Ceccola)

Doro Pesch of Warlock has led the band to American success with her captivating voice.

As a fitting closing to the show, Megadeth performed in their last encore "Anarchy in the U.K.," their cover version of the Sex Pistols' classic. Mustaine introduced the song with the message that the audience is the youth of America and that none of them should ever let anyone push them around. Coupled with his trademark jeers and unmoving stance while singing, Mustaine, as well as Ellefson, Behler and Young, proved why their album is doing so well. Megadeth has stayed true to their ideals and never sold out to what is otherwise a business in which false sentiment and unreality dominates the record charts.

MANUFACTURERS HANOVER

Smart

Help your parents get through college.

Just thinking about college tuition is enough to make most parents break into a sweat.

But can you blame them? When you consider the cost of tuition, books, dorms—not to mention pizza parties—you're talking big bucks.

Which is why you should do some talking. Like telling your parents about the Education Loan Programs at Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

At MHT, not only do we participate in all three Federally guaranteed loan programs, but we also work with state and national agencies and can make guaranteed loans in all 50 states.

In practically no time at all.

In a matter of minutes, MHT Student Loan Processors can program your information into our computerized loan-processing system.

Within 24 hours, the Bank will get a decision from the Guarantee Agency. It's that simple. Better still, with MHT your parents will get all the money they need from one source.

Example: If your folks need more money than government sources will give them, we can offer them tailor-made payment plans through The Education Loan Program, Educational Lines of Credit or Monthly Budget Program and Pre-Payment Programs that make it easy for your parents to fund themselves. (The Education Loan Program, Monthly Budget and Pre-Payment Programs are offered through the Tuition Plan, a company of Manufacturers Hanover.)

Once you get a loan from us, you can be sure it'll stay with us. Because we've never sold education loans to other banks (unless the borrower asked us to).

So if you need money for school, call 1-800-MHT-GRAD and get yourself an MHT Education Loan Application.

Then when your folks ask you about tuition, at least you'll have an answer. "No sweat."

The Consumer Banking Group

Member FDIC. © Royal Communications Limited © 1988 Manufacturers Hanover Trust. All rights reserved.

Congratulations
KAO
GREEK WEEK CHAMPIONS
1985-88

Happy Belated Birth-day,
John Ricco,
Award Winning
Editor!

Friendly Floppies . . . .

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

STRIKE FLEET  ELECTRONIC ARTS C64/128

Strike Fleet is the latest game from the trio of designers of P.H.M. Pegasus. Subtitled "The Naval Task Force Simulator," this naval war game takes you to all of the hot spots of today's military world: the Persian Gulf, the Falklands and the North Atlantic. There are 10 missions in Strike Fleet, with some challenging you to commend 16 ships while others need only one or two for a success. You choose ships from the Shipyard screen (cruiser, destroyer, frigate or fast attack craft), command the fleet from the Combat Information Center screen and can control any ship individually from its Bridge screen.

The manual has pictures of all of your ships and the enemy's, as well as drawings and specifications for the weapons used in the game. The manual explains everything clearly and the command card in the package helps greatly, too. Strike Fleet's graphics and menu-driven style make it even better.

SPIDERBOT ½ EPYX C64/128, AP, IBM

This graphic adventure in Epyx's Maxx Out! series is very unusual in game play. You are SpiderDroid, an R2-D2-like creature who must transform into SpiderBot in order to save the jungle from three reactors in a citadel that are about to explode. The way you do this is what is unusual about the game.

When you are SpiderDroid, hitting the fire button on the joystick shoots webbing in the air. By aiming carefully, you catch one of the following insects: Malevolent Man of War, Big Borer, Ray, Rock Hopper and Stinger.

While captured, you can harness the skills of each insect to help you through various situations. The graphics are great in this arcade adventure, although it will take a while to get used to controlling SpiderDroid and SpiderBot. SpiderBot is a unique addition to any collection.

THE THREE STOOGES  CINEMAWARE C64/128, AMIGA

The Three Stooges have always been one of the most-loved trios of movies and televisions. Now, with the release of The Three Stooges, all of the antics, wisecracks and humor of Moe, Larry and Curly comes to your home computer.

The interactive game requires only a joystick and no typing. You guide the Stooges through their town and five arcade games that reflect famous Stooge skits: a slapping game, cracker eating contest, pie fight, hospital car racing and boxing. Each stooge can ear pull, eye poke, head slap and stomach punch.

The Stooges are depicted in colorful, well-animated graphics and you will feel like you are in one of their shorts or movies. The ultimate goal is to raise enough money to save the widow's home from foreclosure, gaining her three beautiful daughters' affections. A manual that gives the history of the Stooges, Stooge trivia, great graphics and the actual voices of the Stooges give The Three Stooges extra value.

SONS OF LIBERTY  SSI C64/128, AT, AP, IBM

Sons of Liberty is an all-inclusive study by SSI of the Revolutionary War and three of its battles. The battles that are fought in this war game and that can be played separately are the Battle of Bunker Hill, the Battle of Monmouth and the Battle of Saratoga. War games are generally boring, depending on who makes them, but Sons of Liberty, as most other SSI war games, goes against the grain. The simulation wins with its unique game system that relies on menus and simple commands to control the various units in the battles.

The graphics in Sons of Liberty are as good as you need them for any war game. You can distinguish units and geography features on the playfield and the playfield closely follows actual maps. Most important are the extras in the package. A historical reference guide discusses in detail all aspects of the actual battles. Reference cards and maps also make the game easier to play.

FOOTMAN * TOPDOWN DEVELOPMENT AMIGA

The strength of FootMan lies in being able to create your own maze with the Maze Editor program that is included on the disk. FootMan is basically a revised version of Pac Man that was given smoother graphics, different characters and mazes and stereo sound.

The package is every maze/Pac Man-type game lover's dream. There are two modes of play in FootMan also. New Taste mode allows play of FootMan with newer characters, whereas Classic mode more closely resembles Pac Man's graphics for that "classic" feel.

The Maze Editor program allows you to very easily create your own mazes to be played in either mode of FootMan or to modify existing mazes. The Maze Editor is very easy to use and divides the entire screen in tiny blocks where any element of the game can be placed (wall, dot, power dot, etc.). FootMan takes all that made Pac Man great and does better.

PLASMATRON  ACCOLADE C64/128

Plasmatron is a shoot-em-up arcade game in Accolade's Avantage line of bargain software that really tests your joystick skills and endurance. You have been instructed by Star Command to pilot your Plasmatron fighter to a deserted colony, Loughton 2, to explore it. Once you get there, meteors and enemy laser beams begin coming at you and you realize that Star Command thought your loyalty was questionable and sent you to Loughton 2 to die.

The graphics and sound in Plasmatron are great, with explosions that are both visual and audial treats. The landscape that takes up the background of the game is a strong point of the game, for it changes to show you entirely new scenes as you battle the enemy space ships and avoid the meteors. You really have to practice a lot to guide your Plasmatron fighter back to Star Command to collect your reward.

Glen Burtnick will play at the 23 East Cabaret on Friday, April 22. Doors open at 8 p.m. acoustic show starts at 10 p.m.

Listening party at J.C.Dobbs

By KATHRYN QUIGLEY
Entertainment Editor

There will be a "listening party" sponsored by CBS records on April 25 at J.C. Dobbs, which is located at 304 South St. New CBS record releases will be played, two tickets to the Godfathers concert will be given away, as well as posters, records and T-shirts. There is a $1 cover charge before 10 p.m. Proceeds will benefit the T.G. Martell Foundation for Cancer Research. For more information call J.C. Dobbs at 925-4053.

Entertainment Calendar

Music

Philadelphia Museum of Art
Parkway at 26th Street
Philadelphia, Pa.
(215) 763-8100
April 16-July 3
"New Art on Paper:" Pastels, monotypes, watercolors

Tower Theater
Upper Darby, Pa.
April 22 — Icehouse/Men Without Hats

Trocadero
10th and Arch streets
Philadelphia, Pa.
(215) 592-0385
April 20 — New Potato Caboose

23 East Cabaret
23 East Lancaster Ave.
Ardmore, Pa.
(215) 898-6791
April 22 — Glen Burtnick/World at a Glance
April 23 — Rhythm and Bluefish/Room 4 3
April 28 — Tommy Conwell and The Young Rumblers

Theater

Vasey Theatre
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa.
(215) 645-7474
April 13-30
"Pippin"

Angry artist offers new rock style

By TOM CHRISTMAN
Staff Reporter

Notes From the Lost Civilization
Tonio K.
A&M Records
***

In his musical social commentary, Notes from the Lost Civilization, Tonio K. (his real name is Steve Krikorian) debuted his first album, Life in the Foodchain. It is in his first album that this angry young artist first created his musical soap box. Five albums later, in Notes from the Lost Civilization. Tonio K. is still angry with American society, but there is now a certain amount of sadness and understanding noted in his latest and most provocative lyrics. Notes from the Lost Civilization examines American life and discovers what is lacking in our society. Tonio K. has come to the conclusion that it is love that is missing in our "Lost Civilization."

Tonio K.'s band includes T. Bone Burnett, Jim Keltner and Booker T. Jones. There are some guest vocals by the likes of Charlie Sexton, Peter Case, Steven Sales and Billy Vera.

"Without Love" is the album's opening song and most probably will be resleased as the album's first single. It is musically naive, but catchy and well executed. The song has an unmistakable Top 40 sound. "Without Love" speaks of a seemingly perfect world in which everyone has everything and dreams always come true. However, Tonio K. also tells us that having everything "Without Love" is like having nothing at all.

The American dream has turned into a nightmare according to Tonio K., in his most extraordinary song "Children's Crusade." Musically speaking, the song is simple, downbeat, and dominated by its distinct drum beat. The powerful lyrics of "Children's Crusade" blame America's misfortune on the psychedelic sixties. Tonio K. sings "It was the childish dreams of fools/ Who had drifted to a new world/ A world without rules/ And they mistook it for the new Eden."

Behind the melody of "The Executioner's Song," there lies yet another potent social commentary on the American state of being. In this song, Tonio K. personifies the negativism and self-indulgence of America into one fictitious individual, "The Executioner." This sinister character seduces Americans into buying "T.V.'s and CD's and fast cars and film stars/ Cocaine and word games and limited editions." Tonio K. does leave us with a glimmer of hope for the future by mentioning that people are looking for a more positive philosophy of life.

Other songs worth mentioning include "City Life," a quick rockin' tune about the difficulties of metropolitan life. "I Can't Stand It" talks about the shallowness and phoniness of American society. Tonio K. exclaims "You can have peace and safety and fun, fun, fun (But it's all done with mirrors)." In his quick paced song, "I Can't Stop," Tonio K. sounds remarkably similar to the band INXS.

Notes from the Lost Civilization, as a whole, is a solid progressive rock album. Tonio K. has once again proven himself as an accomplished musician and songwriter. This album has a completely new and different sound. It was a thrill to hear such a refreshing combination of creative originality and excellent musical talent. Unlike most traditional rock and roll albums, Notes from the Lost Civilization includes only limited guitar work. This is definitely not a guitar orientated album. "Smoke on the Water" has more intricate guitar leads than do any of Tonio K.'s songs. The lyrics of Notes from the Lost Civilization reflect Tonio K.'s particularly negative view of American society. This theme of negativism is somewhat overemphasized as it plays a role in each and every song.

Overall, the album is very well done. Both poetically and musically, Tonio K. can be proud of his latest and greatest album. If the need for something new and unusual should arise, Notes From the Lost Civilization is the album to purchase.

Final Four examines college basketball

By ALLEN AMBROSINO
Assistant Entertainment Editor

The Final Four
by Roy H. Parker
Bart Books
*½

There are over 260 Division 1 basketball teams and every one of them shares the ultimate dream of making it to the Final Four. In order to become one of the elite four teams, the athletes train for months and play well over 30 games. College basketball is the most lucrative sport to any college because of its popularity; in 1988, the Big East received over $3 million for their participation in the NCAA tournament. Because of this, millions of dollars are wagered on the tournament all around the world, from local businessmen to underground bookies. The Final Four is a compelling novel that deals with all of the work that it takes to compete in the tournament and also, the very real possibility of corruption within the system.

The novel begins with Troy Burton, a fundraiser at the University of Charlotte, being offered $100,000 from a Mr. Dolci to help fix the championship game of the NCAA tournament. At first, he thinks his friends are playing a joke on him. However, after talking with him, he realizes that Dolci is deadly serious. He wants Burton to talk with the Hornets star player, Ted Collins, and have him fake an injury in the second half.

Burton was shocked at this proposal and decided to talk with Coach Lee as soon as possible to make him aware of the situation. However, before he could speak with him, Dolci sent for him and explained exactly what was going to happen.

By the time the conversation was over, Burton did not know who he could trust. After this meeting, Burton continues to try and avoid fixing the game while Dolci and his friends do everything in their power to make it happen.

I doubt if anyone realizes how much work went into sending Villanova to the Final 8 this year.

Roy H. Parker's novel shows what can happen when a little boy's game is made so important that it is worth committing a crime such as murder. To the average fan, we just watch the games and root for our college, giving no thought to the events before and after them. Through the character of Burton, Parker shows how travel arrangements, ticket distribution, the gathering of statistics and, of course, fundraising are just as important to a college basketball program as the actual athletes.

I doubt if anyone realizes how much work actually went into sending Villanova to the Final Eight this year. If it was half as difficult as it was for Burton in The Final Four, everyone behind the scenes really deserves a lot of credit. College basketball is so much more than the 40 minutes that the athletes spend playing on the court; it is weeks of endless work that almost always goes unrewarded.

Parker was also very successful in making the chain of events flow and seem realistic to the reader. It is very suspenseful because you never really know who is in on the fix or how Burton will get himself out of trouble with Dolci. He adds an ironic plot twist occasionally and this, too, helps to keep the reader's attention.

The Final Four was released as the NCAA tournament got underway last month. After reading this book, my outlook on all of the games changed completely. The pressure that is on all of the players to succeed is incredible. It is so easy to forget that many of them are still just teenagers who are forced to handle being "under the microscope" when they are at college. Roy H. Parker has proven that he is a great sports author who especially knows his basketball in The Final Four.

Notre Dame
1988 Summer Session
JUNE 20 · AUGUST 5, 1988

AREAS OF STUDY
- Administration
- American Studies
- Anthropology
- Architecture
- Biology
- Chemistry
- Communication and Theatre
- Computer Applications
- Economics
- Engineering
- English
- Government and International Studies
- Great Books
- History (U.S.)
- Mathematics
- Modern and Classical Languages
- Music
- Philosophy
- Physics
- Psychology
- Sociology
- Theology

M.A. PROGRAMS
- Communications Arts
- English
- History (U.S.)
- Institutional Administration
- Theology

For a 1988 Summer Session Bulletin, call (219) 239-7282 or send your name and address to:
Summer Session, University of Notre Dame, Notre Dame, IN 46556
Name
Street
City, State, Zip

VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY
COLLEGE OF COMMERCE AND FINANCE

GRADUATE RESEARCH ASSISTANTSHIPS

Villanova University's College of Commerce and Finance offers a limited number of graduate research asisstantships for students working towards an MBA.

NATURE OF ASSISTANTSHIPS
A holder of a research assistantship offers 20 hours of research services weekly. The nature of such research varies according to the specific research assignment; it may involve library research, assistance with computer work, and collection of data. Currently, there are 11 such assistantships available with holders attached to the various academic departments.

STIPEND OF ASSISTANTSHIP
For 1988-89 each assistantship carries a stipend of $6,000 for the period of Sept. 1, 1988 to May 31, 1989. In addition, tuition is waived for the fall and spring semester.

WHO MAY APPLY
All qualified full-time MBA students may apply for a research assistantship. Deadline for application is May 31, 1988.

For further information, please call or write to:

The MBA Program
Villanova University
College and Commerce and Finance
Villanova, PA 19085
(215) 645-4336

Villanova University is an Equal Opportunity Educator and Employer

Mercy and Mission show similarities

By JOE McGOWAN
Senior Reporter

Children
The Mission U.K.
Mercury Polygram Records
****

Not so long ago The Sisters of Mercy (consisting of Wayne Hussey and Gary Marx on guitars, Craig Adams on bass and Andrew Eldritch on vocals) splintered amidst great success in Britain and the continent. Shortly thereafter ex-Sisters Hussey and Adams teamed up with Simon Hinkler and Mick Brown to form The Mission U.K. (with Hussey taking over on vocals). The Mission U.K. was an immediate success and seemed to tap and redouble the following that the Sisters had earned.

Children, the second major label release from Mission U.K., has already debuted favorably back in the United Kingdom, and may very well enable the outfit to tour the states extensively. What makes matters interesting is that Eldritch has brought together again The Sisters of Mercy.

Produced by Led Zeppelin's John Paul Jones, Children is every bit as impressive as the first Mission U.K. LP. "Fabienne," "Heaven On Earth" and "Kingdom Come" all have the strange melodies and despondent urgency of tracks from the first album such as "Dance On Glass," "Wasteland" and "Sacrilege."

What is different this time for the group is an expanded usage of electronic keyboards and the thematic concept that underlies Children. The record opens and closes, and several songs segue into one another, with the sounds of school children playing and singing. Not only does this provide thematic unity to Children, but it shows that Mission U.K. have stabilized as a group and reached artistic maturation, as "Beyond the Pale" and "Tower of Strength" are tracks longer than usual for Mission U.K. (they are roughly eight minutes long each).

The opening and closing tracks of Children, in particular, ought to be singled out for praise. "Beyond the Pale" opens the album on such a strong note that it should dispel any worries as to whether Mission U.K. could equal their first LP. "Hymn (For America)" is a loud, aggressive track, one that has a rougher edge to it than the material that precedes it.

Floodland
The Sisters of Mercy
Elektra Records
*½

There is more than musical similarity between Mission U.K.'s "Hymn" and "Dominion/Mother Russia," the opening track to Floodland, The Sisters of Mercy reunion LP. Both exhibit the introduction of unusual influences and rhythms to the basic four-minute rock recording, as well as attitudes, social and political, filled with cynicism and despair.

Musical similarities are to be expected between the Sisters and Mission U.K., for, if no other reason, the fact that half of Mission U.K. was in the Sisters. And, like Mission U.K.'s Children, the Sisters' Floodland is a deeply serious record that is not unmindful of high production values.

Back in the early days of The Sisters of Mercy, at the time of their first LP First and Last and Always, the group was not infrequently tagged with the misnomer "second generation punk," as were The Damned and The Lords of the New Church. In terms of attitude this is understandable, but musically the description is faulty. A single listening to the first Mission U.K. LP or The Damned's Anything will readily show that these groups are headed in a different direction than were the Sex Pistols.

Floodland is, despite its dark lyrics and bleak views, a brilliant album. "Dominion" and "This Corrosion" are two of the strongest singles ever recorded by the Sisters and the latter may well reintroduce the group to a large stateside audience. The lengthy pair "Flood I" and "Flood II" and "Lucretia My Reflection" are moody, sprawling pieces that bear the unmistakable imprint of Andrew Eldritch's deep, eerie voice.

The only weak spot on Floodland is the acoustic "1959," which is offset (at least on cassette and CD) by the extra track "Torch." It would be grossly unfair to both the groups to compare the two and put one above the other, since the two have just released excellent albums. But The Sisters of Mercy, perhaps because of enthusiasm for their return, or the strength of "This Corrosion," come out slightly ahead with Floodland. At any rate, the two albums, Children and Floodland, should prove highly influential in the rock world, and the two LPs seem complementary — one should not be purchased without the other.

Divorced couple find "A New Life"

By DINA INNELLA
Staff Reporter

"A New Life"
directed by Alan Alda
Paramount Pictures
**

When a couple gets divorced, the two have to learn to become individuals again. They have to deal with dating again and possibly a new marriage. This is the basic premise of "A New Life."

The movie revolves on two parallel storylines. Alan Alda plays a divorced husband who is never there for his family. Alda is an obnoxious New York stock trader who fails at any attempt to be funny. If you are looking for the heart of Hawkeye from "M*A*S*H," forget it, this man is loud and brash. Not only does "A New Life" grace us with one loud character, but with two. Hal "Barney Miller" Linden plays Alda's shallow best friend whom he turns to when problems occur. As the movie progresses, Alda forms a relationship with his doctor, played by Veronica Hamel, formerly of "Hill Street Blues." Hamel does not tolerate the mistakes Alda made in his first marriage.

Ann-Margret plays Alda's ex-wife, who now has to cope with being independent. Her character is a little less vivacious than Alda's character, yet she is the one who initiates the divorce. Ann-Margaret's character also has a best friend, played by Mary Kay Place ("The Big Chill") whom she confides in throughout the movie. Eventually, Ann-Margret forms a lasting relationship, as does Alda. In this relationship she is in control and calls all the shots.

As the two relationships grow in different directions, the two characters grow as individuals. They change and adapt to their new outlook on life. The couple learns to find happiness elsewhere with different people, but with different attitudes.

Hamel is believable as a single woman with her biological clock ticking. Place plays the typical American single woman; she offers no solutions or savvy to the single life.

As soon as "A New Life" begins, it is in trouble. If the first joke in a movie is Alda buying coffee from a coffee machine and it comes pouring out with no cup, as this one did, the movie must be in a pretty sad state.

Written and directed by Alda, "A New Life" is classified as a comedy. With the exception of a few amusing scenes, the rest of the movie is extremely predictable. Other scenes try their best to be funny, but hardly cause a chuckle.

Many of the minor plots never seem to gel completely, as there are so many minor characters. Not that it is a very complicated movie, but "A New Life" jumps around a lot, and does not develop much characterization.

"A New Life" is not creative or funny. It is the exemplification of everything typical. This movie shows no real insights to the married-then-single life, or to life in general.

WE'VE GOT IT ALL!

- Flexible hours to meet changing needs and schedules
- Above average earnings potential to help meet and offset financial needs
- Extensive training that quickly prepares you to handle your responsibilities with confidence
- Food discounts
- Credit Union, paid vacations, health insurance

The CASA MARIA restaurants in Philadelphia and King of Prussia can offer you all this and more! Not just another summer job, but a steady means of income that you can count on year-round to help finance your college education. Consider the many openings immediately available for:

Full-Time & Part-Time
Summer & Year-Round Employment

- Waiters/Waitresses
- Bussers
- Hosts/Hostesses
- Line & Prep Cooks
- Cocktail Servers
- Bartenders
- Barbacks
- Dishwashers

Apply in person for an ON-THE-SPOT INTERVIEW
Mondays thru Fridays between 12Noon - 7:00pm

CASA MARIA
City Line Ave. & Presidential Blvd.
Philadelphia, PA
(215) 878-9434

CASA MARIA
145 W. Dekalb Pike
King of Prussia, PA
(215) 337-2303

EOE

You'll get first hand experience in the courtroom right from the start. In three years, you could handle more than 3,000 cases in a wide variety of subjects from international to contracts to criminal law. If you think you have what it takes to be a Marine Corps Officer and lawyer, talk with the Marine Corps Officer Selection Officer when he visits your campus.

Have 190,000 clients from the start.

More than 190,000 Marines could use your service.

We're looking for a few good men.

Marines

Call Captain Farr at 386-5557

"Lightness" dimmed by weight and length

By ELANA ROSE STARR
Staff Reporter

"The Incredible Lightness of Being" directed by Philip Kaufman
½

The Unbearable Lightness Of Being., the 1984 best seller by Czech emigre' Milan Kundera, is about life in Prague, Czechoslovakia, just prior to and after the Russian takeover in the summer of 1968. The novel proffers an abundance of philosophical abstractions on issues such as love and sex, politics and exile, and the exercise of free will. Considered unfilmable by most, American director Philip Kaufman was brave enough to turn the book into an ambitious, if imperfect, motion picture.

In the screen version, most of the philosophical digressions have been purged. Instead, Kaufman and his co-adaptor, Jean-Claude Carriere, present a chronologically linear love triangle, centering on the book's libidinous protagonist, Tomas, his long-time paramour Sabine, and his waiflike bride, Tereza.

"Lightness" is dragged down by its length . . . at least one-third of the film should have been left on the cutting floor.

An esteemed brain surgeon and relentless womanizer, Tomas gets the film off to a rousing start when he orders an attractive hospital nurse to "take off your clothes." The woman readily complies, to the delight of two physicians and a male patient spying on the couple through the frosted glass window. In fact, no female seems able to resist Tomas' charms. Since he is played by the young British heart throb Daniel Day Lewis (late of "My Beautiful Laundrette" and "Room With a View"), who bears a strong resemblance here to Montgomery Clift (Day Lewis' favorite actor), this attraction is understandable.

Tomas' favorite lover is the free-spirited artist Sabine, supposedly the woman who understands him best. Sabine, played by the sensuous Swedish actress Lina Olin, runs away from any relationship when it starts to get serious. Thus, Tomas and Sabine avoid the heaviness of emotional commitment, and their trysts are always playful. yet the bedroom scenes between these two are erotically charged, with Sabine generally clad in nothing more than a bowler hat and lingerie out of Victoria's Secret.

On a sojourn to a country spa, Tomas meets the wide-eyed Tereza. Parisian actress Juliette Binoche, in her first English-speaking role, imbues this character with the right amount of guileless charm. Later, when Tereza pays a visit to Tomas in the city and ends up spending the night, we know their relationship is serious; it is the first time Tomas has violated his credo of never spending the night with a woman. Indeed, the two are soon married, although Tomas does not give up his sexual dalliances; however, they become a ponderous problem for Tereza, who is aware of his philandering.

Some of the film's best scenes, revolving around the Soviet invasion, come next, with Kaufman seamlessly blending old newsreels with new footage. The people of Prague demonstrate against the takeover, with the three main characters in the midst of the rebellious fray.

A camera-wielding Tereza captures on film much of the Russians' ensuing brutality. Tomas and Tereza follow Sabine to temporary freedom in Switzerland but end up back in their native country, their passports confiscated. It is at this point, about two hours into the film, that "Lightness" begins to falter, and the audience starts to consult their watches.

Unable to practice medicine because of his outspoken anti-communist views, Tomas is forced to become a window washer and then a farmhand. It is also evident that, in addition to his recalcitrant political stance, freewheeling sexuality as practiced by Tomas is anathema to the Communists, who view it as a threat to their ideology. Despite the oppressive treatment by government officials, Tomas never gives in to them; he maintains his bouyancy to the end.

Images of light and weightlessness abound, including shots under water, through glass, and of frost-rimmed windows. The arrival of Russian tanks is announced through a close-up of tinkling, crystal wine glasses, and the film ends as the sun shines through a rain-streaked windshield. But despite the lovely camera work and the fine performances by the international cast, "Lightness" is dragged down by its length; at nearly three hours, at least one-third of the film should have been left on the cutting room floor. Perhaps what would have been left would sparkle as much as its images of light.

'Johnny Be Good' is bad

By VICKI DiSTEFANO
Staff Reporter

"Johnny Be Good"
directed by Bud Smith
Orion Pictures
½*

"Johnny Be Good" is an insipid example of the adolescent fantasy flick at its abysmal worst. Director Bud Smith has produced a ridiculous script which he expects viewers to take seriously.

"Johnny" rehashes every sophomoric cliche that cinema has ever endured.

It requires more than a willing suspension of disbelief to take seriously the casting of Anthony Michael Hall as the title character, a high school football star named Johnny Marx. Hall has built his professional reputation in the role of the Ultimate Nerd, adding his comic touch to such credible films as "Sixteen Candles" and "The Breakfast Club."

Hall ostensibly agreed to do "Johnny" to avoid typecasting, but his lackluster performance as

(Continued on page 27)

Happy 19th Birthday Jennifer Janson

Noel Falco and Kathy Quigley are not the same person!

What's a degree good for?

Pre-approved credit from Ford Credit and a $400 cash bonus from Ford.

At your Quality Plus Ford Dealer, your degree is worth a lot. If you've graduated, or will graduate, with a Bachelor's or an advanced degree before January 31, 1989, you may qualify for $400 from Ford and pre-approved credit from the Ford Motor Credit Company. To qualify for pre-approved credit, you need (1) verifiable employment beginning within 120 days after your vehicle purchase; (2) a salary sufficient to cover normal living expenses plus a car payment; and (3) if you have a credit record, it must indicate payment made as agreed.

The $400 from Ford is yours whether you finance or not. Keep it or apply it to the purchase or lease of an eligible Ford vehicle. Hurry! This limited-time offer ends December 31, 1988. For all the details, see your Quality Plus Ford Dealer today.

QUALITY plus FORD DEALER

Winfield speaks out

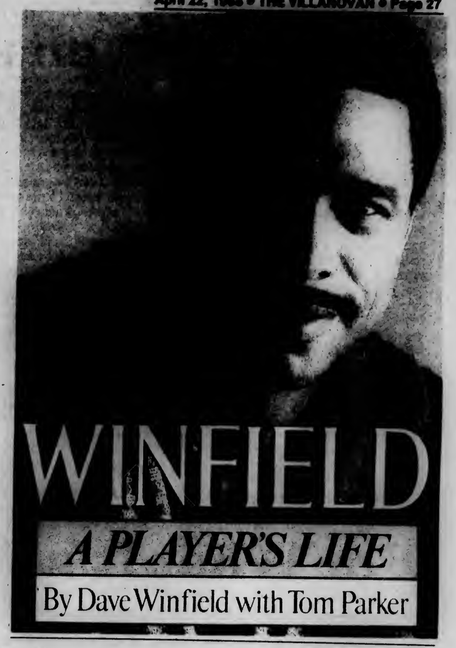
By ALLEN AMBROSINO
Assistant Entertainment Editor

When you talk about the New York Yankees, the two topics that automatically come to mind are controversy and winning. Dave Winfield came to the Yankees in 1981 and has been engaged in a constant struggle with George "The Boss" Steinbrenner from the very beginning. Because the Yankees have not won their division in six years, Steinbrenner feels that it is Winfield's fault and does not hesitate to let him know his feelings. However, Winfield has been spectacular at the plate (five 100 RBI seasons) and in the field during his time with the Yankees. In Winfield: A Player's Life, he addresses controversial topics within the Yankee organization and also deals with many more facets of his life as well. His troubled childhood, problems with women and charitable nature are also talked about in detail throughout the book.

In this book, Winfield gets out all of his frustrations and anger at Steinbrenner with his controversial comments.

Even during his childhood years, Winfield knew that he had exceptional athletic ability. His baseball coach, Bill Peterson, and his mother were the two central figures in his development as an adolescent. They helped him to form a solid set of moral values that have helped him to have a happy, successful life.

However, throughout high school and college, Winfield's cockiness was an attribute that helped him to attain stardom as an athlete. He felt that he was the best and that nobody could stop him from reaching his lofty goals. Only a few people realize this, but Winfield was actually a star pitcher during his college career. Hitting was secondary until he decided to make the move to the major leagues.



However, when free agency became popular, Winfield decided to see how much he was worth to the other teams in the major leagues.

In 1973, Winfield was drafted by the San Diego Padres as an outfielder. He played for them for seven years, making the all-star team and also winning some gold glove awards along the way. However, when free agency became popular, Winfield decided to see how much he was worth to the other teams in the major leagues. He was extremely happy when a winning team, the New York Yankees, expressed interest in him and agreed to pay him over $20 million for his services.

This is when all of the fun begins. During his stay with the Padres, Winfield had started a charitable organization called the Winfield Foundation to help underprivileged youngsters. Steinbrenner had agreed to make a certain amount of donations to the Foundation, but he refused after he became upset with Winfield's playing skills. This was only one of the major battles that Steinbrenner and Winfield fought with one another. In this book, Winfield gets out all of his frustrations and anger at Steinbrenner with his controversial comments.

After this book was released, Steinbrenner immediately ran out and tried to trade Winfield. He felt that he had betrayed the Yankees, when, in reality, Winfield just wrote the truth about Steinbrenner. Unfortunately, sometimes the truth hurts.

Winfield: A Player's Life was a very enjoyable book that opened my eyes to many of the things that go on behind the scenes in the Yankee organization. Winfield showed his articulate side as he ridiculed the man people love to hate, George Steinbrenner. Most books from athletes are usually either humorous or boring. It was very refreshing to read a sports book that had a serious side that showed life as well as athletics.

Johnny Be Good

(Continued from page 26)

"the #1 football player in the nation" is more likely to reinforce his stereotype as an eternal geek than to build him a new image as a heart throb. Hall's physique alone contradicts his character's athletic prowess.

He is about as convincing as 5-foot-four inch Michael J. Fox would be in the role of starting center on a pro basketball team, only Fox would most likely perform considerably better.

Add to this dubious lead character a ludicrous plot, and things really start to get silly. It seems that the almighty Johnny's amazing football prowess has driven literally every college recruiter in the country half insane with desire to draft Johnny, regardless of expense. The high school senior is elevated to godlike status as the recruiters compete for his favor by offering him scholarships, six-digit money allowances, women and automobiles. Johnny is even featured on the cover of Time magazine, which, incidentally, has never in its publishing life included coverage of high school athletes, save Olympians.

These and other farfetched scenes of wish fulfillment poison the already ailing film, which pathetically attempts to rip off the pedal-to-the-floor pace of previously successful comedies such as "Risky Business" and "Ferris Bueller." These movies also featured out-of-the-ordinary adventures of high school seniors, but did not insult the intelligence of their audience.

"Johnny" rehashes every sophomoric cliche that cinema has ever endured. The airheaded dialogue throughout these stale sequences is tossed about from actors who appear to have taken hallucinogenic drugs prior to filming.

The only humorous performance in the movie comes from Robert Downey Jr., who portrays Johnny's hyperactive best friend. His spastic mannerisms are good for a few laughs, but become tedious as they provide the only entertainment in an otherwise humorless comedy.

Perhaps it was awareness of this problem that led "Johnny's" promoters to misleadingly give sports personalities Jim McMahon and Howard Cosell status billing. Their combined onscreen time actually amounts to less than five minutes; they are wasted in irrelevant roles.

The best part of "Johnny" is the ending, partly because Chuck Berry's classic hit "Johnny B. Goode" is played back to back with an inferior Judas Priest remake, and partly because this bland, brainless film is finally over.

What's the difference between these two jumpers?

For Info. Call: (215) 687-5897
UNITED PARACHUTE CLUB, INC.
JUMP LOCATION—NEW HANOVER AIRPORT • SWAMP PK. & RT. 663 • GILBERTSVILLE, PA.
P.O. BOX 188 • GILBERTSVILLE, PA. • WEEKEND PHONE 215-323-9667

opportunite unique pour vous
—
French
—
Majors/Minors/Speakers

Applications at Career Center

OR CALL:

For you, and the world itself. As a Peace Corps volunteer, you can put your degree to work at a challenging, demanding and unique opportunity. You'll be meeting new people, learning a new language, experiencing a new culture and gaining a whole new outlook. And while you're building your future, you'll help people in developing countries through education, health, agriculture and community development projects. The financial rewards may not be great, but as a Peace Corps volunteer, your opportunity for growth is certain.

One year college level or two years high school level French required.

Peace Corps Philadelphia
(215) 597-0744 (collect)
(800) 462-1589 (toll free)

The toughest job you'll ever love.
PEACE CORPS

On The Scene . . .Entertainment Tidbits

By STEPHEN POWERS
Staff Reporter

The 1987-88 television season officially ended Sunday night, and the three networks are already making plans for their new fall schedules. First-place NBC hopes to widen its already-large winning margin, second-place ABC wants to continue on its current upswing and last-place CBS will try to rebuild its schedule after a losing year. Also, Fox, the so-called "fourth network," hopes to duplicate its Sunday night success on Mondays, and find a strong show to anchor its struggling Saturday night lineup.

NBC currently has the most successful programs, so it will have the fewest slots to fill in the fall. Its biggest coup so far has been luring the family-oriented "Disney Sunday Movie" away from ABC. Starting next season, it will be retitled "The Disney Hour" and will feature four recurring series that will air monthly, including an "Absent-Minded Professor" program starring "Night Court's" Harry Anderson.

NBC's new pilots include "Baby Boom," a sitcom based on the feature film, with Kate Jackson taking over Diane Keaton's role as the businesswoman-turned-mother. "Channel 99" has Marilu Henner ("Taxi") as the program manager of "the worst TV station in America," and is produced by Ron Howard.

Richard Mulligan ("Soap") stars as Miami's most eligible bachelor in "Empty Nest," a "Golden Girls" spinoff that co-stars Kristy McNichol. In addition, NBC already has a commitment to a "Facts of Life" spinoff with Lisa Whelchel running her old boarding school and taking care of a new ensemble of kids.

CBS hopes that three veteran performers will lift the network out of the Nielsen basement next season. It is already committed to new series for Mary Tyler Moore, Dick Van Dyke and Christopher Lloyd.

Moore, the star of the successful "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and the not-so-successful "Mary," plays a divorcee with one kid who marries a widower with two in an as-of-yet untitled sitcom. The first episode has already been filmed, and Moore promises that the focus will be on the adults, not the munchkins, for a change.

Moore's former television husband, Dick Van Dyke, returns to the small screen in a new comedy produced by her real-life former husband, Grant Tinker. Titled, appropriately enough, "The Van Dyke Show," the series has Van Dyke and real-life son Barry playing a father and son who run a dinner theater in Philadelphia.

Christopher Lloyd's new series, "The Dictator," focuses on a deposed South seas leader who now runs a laundry in Queens. The show was supposed to be a mid-season replacement for this spring, but was delayed because of the writers' strike.

Other CBS hopefuls include "Baby on Board," produced by Marlo Thomas; "Fort Figueroa," an Hispanic family drama; "TV 101," about (you guessed it) television; and the crime drama "Elysian Fields."

Cost-conscious ABC has produced much fewer pilots than the other networks, but believes it has a hit in "Roseanne," starring comedienne Roseanne Barr as a working-class mom. This sitcom, produced by Carsey/Werner ("The Cosby Show"), was also bumped off the mid-season schedule because of the writers' strike. ABC's other notables include "The Robert Guillaume Show," with the former "Benson" star as a divorced marriage counselor, and "Studio 5B," a ripoff of "Broadcast News."

And then there was Fox. The fledgling network does not really have a fall premiere season — its series premiere all year long. Programmers hope to shore up the dismal Saturday ratings with "The Dirty Dozen," which is based on the 1968 feature film of the same name and debuts later this month.

Also in the works are "Angels '88," a sequel to the 1970's ABC hit "Charlie's Angels" starring four unknowns; "Blues Point," a blue-collar soap from ex-"General Hospital" producer Gloria Monty; and a "21 Jump Street" spinoff about young lawyers. Fox wants to use some of its new shows to launch a Monday night schedule this fall.

NBC, ABC and CBS will reveal which of their pilots made the fall schedule in May.

SHORT TAKES: The official word from ABC is that "Moonlighting" is done for the season, after producing only 13 new episodes. Because of the current Writers Guild strike, no more new scripts have been written, and the 3-D season finale has been postponed until next year . . .

And another strike casualty is NBC's "Saturday Night Live," which is also finished with new episodes until the fall. Unfortunately, this also means that alumnus Gilda Radner will postpone a guest show on the show, which would have been her first appearance since she left eight years ago.

Source: USA Today

For What It's Worth . . .Commentary

By MICHAEL AIMETTE and BILL CARR
Staff Reporters

For eight years, The Church has been accused of promoting their unique style while sometimes not concerning themselves with the actual substance of their songs.

The distinctive overlapping guitars and uniquely hazy vocals were overshadowed by the lack of good "hooks" in the music. Now, however, with their newest album, Starfish, this undesirable trend has subsided. True, on first listening, it may seem that a definite melody takes a back seat to texture, but after acclimating oneself to their style, the strength of the melodies distinctively shines. This being their sixth album, it seems the Australian-based band is finally getting it right; this album is undoubtedly their most direct and accessible to date.

The Church's first single from Starfish, "Under The Milky Way," is a heavily-layered potential hit that, like most good Church songs, grows on you with repeated listenings. Additionally, The Church's traditional problem of alienating potential record buyers because of their obscure, and somewhat cold, lyrics has been abandoned; this record is easily their most personal and "real" — just listen to cuts like "Blood Money" and "Hotel Womb." In the past, The Church has been either very good or very boring; with Starfish though, they are simply excellent.

The Mighty Lemon Drops are another band that could be accused of too much texture and not enough substance. They can also be accused of sounding a lot like Echo & The Bunnymen. However, on their new LP World Without End, The Mighty Lemon Drops prove once again that being a heavily-hyped band from London need not imply any lack of talent. This is a very adept band with a strong gift for writing pop singles. It is hard to imagine a pop music enthusiast who could resist the chorus of "Inside Out," the first single from the album.

Though the individual songs are quite good, somehow it is much more pleasing to listen to this album in small doses than all at once: a lot of The Lemon Drops' songs sound alike, primarily because of the invariability of vocalist Paul Marsh's dispassionate singing.

Surprisingly, the band is most interesting when it slows things down (a rarity on their first album, Happy Head), as on the pretty ballads "In Everything You Do" and "Closer to You." All things considered, World Without End is a successful follow-up to Happy Head. Not much new ground has been broken, but The Mighty Lemon Drop show signs of continued success and promise.

Upon hearing that the former co-leader of The dB's, Chris Stamey, completed his second solo album late last year, informed music listeners waited in anticipation. After hearing it, however, one is left with the ultimate in mixed feelings about this sometimes brilliant, sometimes lousy album.

For years, the early incarnation of The dB's released albums full of quirky, yet extremely likable songs — at least half of which Stamey was responsible for. But times have changed. The dB's reformed, signed to IRS Records, adopted a more garage-band approach, and recorded one of the most critically-praised albums of 1987. Would Chris Stamey also change his style? Well, yes and no. In one way, he continued to write amazingly good pop songs ("Cara Lee," "When We're Alone"), thanks in part to the help from Marshall Crenshaw and Mitch Easter, another pop mastermind from Let's Active.

On the other hand, Stamey has somewhere along the line become a big wimp. A few of these songs are so spineless (listen to "The Seduction" and try not to gag) and sugar-coated they are sickening. Still though, the majority of this album contains good, safe pop songs, even if Stamey occasionally wimps out. Chris Stamey sums up his album best in its title, though maybe a slight underestimation . . . It's Alright.

Joni Mitchell has a new album out that features vocal appearances by both Peter Gabriel and (Yikes!) Billy Idol. Joni's getting kind of hip in her old age . . . The Jefferson Airplane is contemplating a reunion of all its original members, including Grace Slick, who recently left Starship because of "artistic frustration" — artistic absence is more accurate . . . Van Halen's much anticipated new LP is out, and guess what those crazy tricksters are calling this one? Yes, another wild title, OU812. Wow, their sense of humor even matches their importance to rock and roll . . .

Speaking of Van Halen, they are currently headlining the Monsters of Rock Tour featuring The Scorpions, Dokken, Metallilca and Kingdom Come. Oh, boy! . . . The fun doesn't stop. The Rolling Stones may have a new album out by next year. Whip that dead horse boys, it may yet come back to life . . .

Next Week: Preview of the upcoming INXS concert right here at Villanova University (just kidding . . . no chance)

Students

When it's time to pack up and go home...

We can help!

Getting your stuff home doesn't have to be a hassle. We'll pack and ship it all home for you. From bicycles to computers—shipping small loads is our specialty. Or pack it yourself. We offer a complete line of professional packaging supplies—from filler and tape to just the right size boxes. Call us now and your stuff will be home before you are!

- Custom crating and packing
- Shipping from 1 to 1,000 pounds—including overnight delivery
- Insurance to $60,000
- Pick-up service
- Packaging supplies—boxes, tape, foam

CALL FOR INFO:
543-4281
Olde Sproul Shopping Village
1166 Baltimore Pike
Springfield, PA 19064

Packaging Store
Packing and shipping and a whole lot more

THANKS

The Brothers of Delta Kappa Epsilon International Fraternity
Would Like to Thank
LONDON MARKET
GARRETT HILL PIZZA
For Their Generous Donations
&
SISTER TERESE WENZEL
For Giving Us The Opportunity To Help Make Project Sunshine A Success

(Photo by Trimble)

Junior Greg Ackerman (above) teamed with John O'Dwyer to pull out a 5-4 victory over Fordham.

Loughman, Freedman lead Villanova tennis past Rams match was knotted at 4-4. It took a 7-6, 4-6, 6-0 win at No. 3 doubles by the team of junior Ackerman and sophomore John O'Dwyer to rescue the Cats and bring the final tally to 5-4.

(Continued from page 36)

It did not get any easier when Monmouth College came to visit the following day, but the 'Nova netters managed another 5-4 victory. This, again, in spite of losses by Rouse and Teresi. Rouse lost to Steve Frankel, 6-4, 7-6 and Teresi was defeated by Ben Freeman, 7-6 and 6-4. Leonard, Loughman and Ackerman all won their singles matches while Freedman was tagged with a 6-4, 6-4 loss.

With 'Nova down 4-3 after a doubles loss by Rouse-Teresi, 6-4, 4-6, 7-5, the teams of Leonard-Freedman and Ackerman-O'Dwyer captured their matches by scores of 6-2, 6-0 and 6-1, 6-3, respectively, to end the match with a 5-4 Wildcat win.

West Chester University came to visit on April 14, and were battered by the Cats, 7-2. Rouse returned to his winning form, defeating Jeff Fegel, 7-5, 6-4.

After a three-set loss by Teresi, Leonard, Loughman, Freedman and Ackerman all captured their singles matches in two sets.

'Nova also won two of three doubles matches. Leonard-Freedman and Ackerman-O'Dwyer each won in two sets, while No. 1 Loughman-Gorsky lost 6-3, 2-6, 7-5. But the five singles victories were the key to the 7-2 defeat of West Chester.

After a day off, Queens College came to the St. Mary's courts and offered up another tough match which again had to be won in doubles play and was captured by 'Nova, 5-4.

Rouse led off with a 6-4, 6-3 win. Then No. 2 Leonard, playing in place of Teresi, who is still suffering from the effects of an arm injury, lost a close 5-7, 6-2, 6-4 match against Rob Weidenbaum.

As each singles player moved up a notch, No. 3 Loughman, No. 4 Freedman, and No. 6 Gorsky were all victorious. Ackerman suffered a 6-2, 6-0 loss at No. 5 singles.

After a 6-4, 6-3 loss at No. 1 doubles by Rouse-Gorsky brought Queens to within 4-3, Leonard-Freedman iced the match with a 6-2, 6-3 win. Ackerman-O'Dwyer lost at No. 3 doubles and the final score came to 5-4.

Because Monday's match with Rutgers-Camden was cancelled, the last match of the week was played against visiting Georgetown on April 17 and was the lone loss of the week, 5-4. Rouse took his third loss of the week, 6-2, 7-6, but Teresi came back and defeated Kirk Haggerty, 6-2, 7-6. After a loss by Leonard, the Cats won the No. 4 through No. 6 singles matches with Loughman, Freedman and Ackerman all capturing three-set decisions.

The Cats, however, were swept in the doubles matches and the score went from 4-2 for 'Nova to 5-4 in favor of Georgetown. A 6-3, 7-5 win by Pete Martin and Neil McGinness at No. 3 doubles sealed Villanova's fate.

The Wildcats are now 18-3 and winding down their season. It should be noted that freshman Loughman, from Hingham, Massachusetts, is now 21-0 in singles play between the third and fourth seed spots this spring. After winning the No. 6-seed singles at the Big East Tournament in the fall, Loughman is now 24-0 in his collegiate singles career. The Cats will seek another 20-win season as a team beginning this week.

Women's crew

By WAYNE CRESSKILL
Staff Reporter

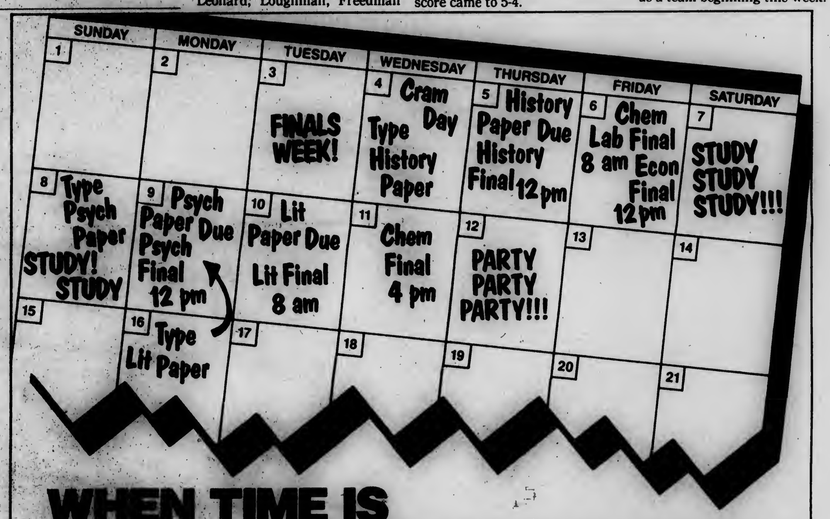
The women's varsity crew teams captured a pair of victories April 16 on the Schuylkill River in a regatta with the College of Franklin and Marshall and Drexel University.

In the varsity four race, Villanova's varsity heavyweight and novice squads took first and second places, respectively. The varsity four crossed in a time of 8:50 and the novice four in 8:51. Franklin and Marshall finished in 9:02 and Drexel at 9:24.

In the varsity eight, the Cats time of 7:46.7 was enough to hold off a solid Drexel time of 7:59.4. F&M settled for third at 8:17.7.

The novice eight team took second with a time of 8:49. Drexel won that race with their time of 8:25.

Tomorrow, the women's crew teams travel to Washington, D.C. for a regatta with George Washington University and Washington College.



GMAT LSAT

If you're unsure whether or not to prep, take our computerized diagnostic test and find out. Then make the decision that's right for you.

If you already know you want to prep, call us, and find out why we're the most successful test prep group ever. After all, it's your career, give it the best shot you can.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW

215/923-2077

WHEN TIME IS SHORT, PUT US TO THE TEST!

When your schedule's crammed, Domino's Pizza® really delivers. Just give us a call, and before you've finished going over those notes, we'll be at your door with a hot, delicious, custom-made pizza. In fact, we guarantee delivery in just 30 minutes, or you get $3.00 off your order.

Sometimes your best study partner is a great-tasting pizza. So call Domino's Pizza today!

Call us.
Wayne
293-0980
128 W. Lancaster

Open for lunch
11 AM-1 AM Sun.-Thurs.
11 AM-2 AM Fri. & Sat.

Our drivers carry less than $20.00.
Limited delivery area.
© 1988 Domino's Pizza, Inc.

DOMINO'S PIZZA DELIVERS® FREE.

It's in your notes

Take a break from the grind with a hot, delicious pizza. And if you present this coupon and show our driver the notes you're studying from, we'll give you $1.00 off any pizza!

One coupon per pizza. Not good with any other offer.
Expires: 5/11/88

Safe, Friendly, Free Delivery

Runners blossom at Dogwood relays

By TERRY KELLY
Staff Reporter

Over the past weekend the Wildcats continued to show that they are worthy of national recognition as a track school. The team took three first places at the University of Tennessee in the Dogwood Relays.

In the only individual event the team entered over the weekend, sophomore Mike Seeger won the 800-meter run. His first place finish was accomplished with a time of 1:53.7.

One of the other first-place finishes came in the sprint medley relay. In this event the quartet of Marc Jones, Mark Rainey, Tony Valentine and Mark Sullivan teamed up to defeat Ball State and Indiana. The four did so by combining splits of 21.8, 21.3, 46.8 and 1:50.8 to take the victory in 3:19.96.

The final victory of the weekend came in the 4 x 400-meter relay. The Cats squad of four ran to a slim win over Eastern Michigan and Michigan State with a time of 3:07.02. Grant Davis led the team with a 46.5 split and was followed up by Jones in 47.1, Rainey in 46.5 and Edwin Modibedi in 46.9.

What made this victory so sweet for the Cats was the fact that their time of 3:07.02 made them the team's first qualifiers for the 1988 IC4A championships at the end of the season.

In other relay action the Cats took second place in the 4 x 800-meter relay. The team of Jan Friedli (1:53.2), Finn Kelly (1:50.7), Howard Jackson (1:52.7) and Aidan O'Regan (1:50.5) teamed up to finish just behind Indiana with a time of 3:27.13.

In the only other relay the Cats entered, the distance-medley team of Friedli (3:02.9), Davis (46.8), O'Regan (1:49.9) and Kelly (4:16.8) placed sixth with a combined time of 9:55.98, while Iona won the event in 9:50.14.

The Wildcats' next test comes today at the Rutgers Relays. The team is hoping to continue to prove that they are worthy of the recognition which the V.U. has come to expect over the years.

(File Photo)

Tony Valentine helped lead the Cats medley relay team past Ball State and Indiana.

Golfers lose first

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

After springing to an impressive 8-0 start, the Villanova men's golf team finally had their perfect mark blemished, at the hands of the University of Delaware. Their record now stands at 9-1.

On April 12 at the Newark Country Club in Newark, Del., the Blue Hens outscored 'Nova 391-399. Widener University also competed, but they finished well behind the other two teams, giving the Cats a split for the day. Seniors Chris Cappello and Tony Corbo led the team with scores of 78 and 79, respectively.

"Chris [Cappello] and Tony [Corbo] are producing consistently low scores," explained Head Coach Don Ficco, "and they have risen to the occasion and become leaders."

Finishing out the scoring for the Cats were Mark Dougherty and Kevin Rogerson (80) and sophomore Todd Rongaus (82).

In this spring season, low-scoring honors have been very equally distributed. Almost every match yields a different medalist. Ficco explained, "This year, we don't have that one guy who always has a score near par. This situation has created a lot of competition and the scores are better, but the kids are feeling the pressure."

The Cats had run their record to 8-0 on April 11 with a dual meet win over Columbia University, at the Rockland Country Club in New York. Junior walk-on John Marcantognini scored a surprising 75 to lead the Cats. Other contributors were Rogerson and Dougherty (79), and Corbo (80) and Cappello (83). Their team score of 396 was 11 better than Columbia (407).

On April 20 the Cats travelled to Indiana, Pa. for the Indiana University of Pennsylvania tournament, to face smaller Pennsylvannia schools like Slippery Rock University, Gannon College and IUP.

Today, they begin competition in the Princeton Invitational, their most important match to date.

"Princeton is the tournament we're really shooting for. All the tough teams in our district will be there, such as Army, Temple, Penn St. and Princeton," said Ficco.

Recruits

(Continued from page 32)

in the nation list Villanova as a prospective college. Included in this list are 5'11" point guard Bobby Hurley and 6'6" forward Jerry Walker, both from Jersey City, N.J., and 6'5" guard/forward Lance Miller (David's brother) from Raritan, N.J.

With the 1987-88 recruiting year coming to a close, Lappas seems satisfied with what looks to be one of 'Nova's better recruiting efforts. "We feel we're right there. With the kids we have back, the freshmen can be eased in and should become very good players."

CATS' NOTES —

Villanova University has had a current and a former player receive invitations to try out for the 1988 U.S. Olympic team. Both junior Doug West and former Wildcat Shelly Pennefather were invited to attend the Olympic trials in Colorado Springs, Colo.

The women's trials are being held this week and the men's are scheduled to begin on May 18.

West, a 6'6" forward, will be one of over 90 players competing for the 12 spots available, while Pennefather is among the 58 selected to compete for the women's team.

Men's crew

By KARL BECK
Staff Reporter

The Villanova men's crew team's varsity four and lightweight eight boats suffered a pair of defeats April 16 to the powerhouse boats of Princeton University. The races took place on Carnegie Lake in Princeton, N.J.

The varsity four team's time of 7:53 was only six seconds more than the time of the nationally respected boat from Princeton.

Head Coach Jack St. Claire commented, "It was our best race of the day. It was the most competitive margin between boats."

'Nova's lightweight eight team rowed against Princeton's heavyweight boat and lost by a fairly substantial margin. However, Ivy League crew programs, Princeton, in particular, are regarded as having some of the top programs in the country.

Tomorrow, the men's crew teams will travel to the Maryland area to race George Washington University, Washington College and George Mason University.

(File photo)

The men's lacrosse team improved their record to 5-5 with a pair of home wins last week.

Lacrosse topples Swarthmore

By JOHN I.M. SWIFT
Statistician

The Villanova men's lacrosse team won a pair of games at home last week to improve their overall record to 5-5. Both wins came in the friendly confines of Villanova Stadium and came at a crucial time in the Wildcat's roller coaster season.

Coming off three straight losses, the Cats needed a win badly when Swarthmore College came to town on April 13. Villanova accomplished that goal and then some.

The Cats jumped out to a 6-0 lead in the first 11 minutes of play and never looked back while cruising to an easy 15-6 victory.

Freshman Chris Sullivan paced Villanova with four goals and three assists for seven points. Sophomore John McEvoy was close behind with three goals and two assists for five points in a game that saw 12 different Villanova players tallying at least one point.

The duties in the net were split between junior Steve Ciarrocca and freshman John Pareso. Ciarrocca had ten saves and Pareso notched six.

The Holy Cross game on April 16, however, proved to be quite a test for Villanova.

'Nova fell behind by the score of 3-2 early in the second period. Then, Villanova scored five unanswered goals to build a seemingly insurmountable 7-3 lead with 7:53 remaining in the third quarter.

If there is one thing that is for certain in lacrosse, it is that no lead is too safe because scoring can occur so quickly. Holy Cross proved this by storming back to draw within one goal at 7-6 with 5:22 remaining in the contest.

In an exciting conclusion, though both teams enjoyed various scoring opportunities in the waning minutes, neither team could score. Thus, Villanova held on to win by the score of 7-6 and improved their record to its present state at 5-5.

Sullivan and McEvoy each recorded four points to lead the Villanova attack. Sophomore Joe Lingle made five saves in the nets and junior John Nugent was credited with eight ground balls for the Cats. 'Nova held an impressive 44-18 advantage in the critical ground ball department.

On April 23, Villanova returns home to play Hofstra from Lafayette where they played the Leopards on April 20. The Hofstra game will begin at 2 p.m. in Villanova Stadium.

Athlete of the Week

CHRIS SULLIVAN

This week's Saco East Athlete of the Week is Chris Sullivan.

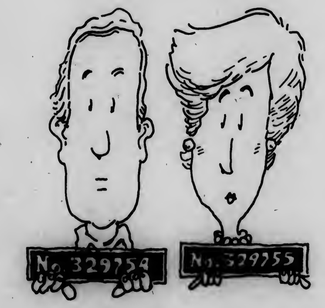
Sullivan, a member of Villanova's men's lacrosse team, led the Wildcats to victories over Swarthmore and Holy Cross this past week.

Sullivan, a freshman, netted four goals while adding three assists in the Wildcat's 15-6 route over Swarthmore. In the 7-6 victory over the Crusaders of Holy Cross, Sullivan scored one goal while dishing out three assists. 'Nova 1988 record stands at 5-5.

Sullivan now ranks as the squad's second-leading scorer with 11 goals in ten games. In addition, Sullivan has accounted for 16 assists and 27 points in 1988.

'Nova's Scholar Athletes

Villanova's 1987-88 Big East Academic All-Stars



NAME	CLASS	SPORT
Mark Plansky	Senior	Men's Basketball
Lisa Angelotti	Senior	Women's Basketball
Tom Barrett	Senior	Soccer
Lou Dearstyne	Sophomore	Men's Swimming and Diving
Dave Echeverria	Senior	Men's Swimming and Diving
Joe Regan	Senior	Men's Swimming and Diving
Danielle Mackey	Sophomore	Women's Swimming and Diving
Greg Ackerman	Junior	Men's Tennis
Taylor Teresi	Sophomore	Men's Tennis
Mary Beth Lemon	Senior	Women's Tennis
Laura Smelas	Junior	Women's Tennis
Michelle DiMuro	Junior	Women's Track
Celeste Halliday	Junior	Women's Track
Vicki Huber	Junior	Women's Track
Sheila Duffy	Sophomore	Volleyball
Lori Reiter	Senior	Volleyball

saco EAST
University Sportswear
JACKETS ● CAPS ● T-SHIRTS ● PROMOTIONAL ITEMS
1945 LANCASTER AVE., BRYN MAWR 527-4188

Richard & Company
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
773 E. Lancaster Ave., Villanova
527-2080
Villanova Student Discounts
(On tanning, perming, coloring & more!)
Open Mon. thru Sat. (Wed. & Thurs. Evenings)
Appointments Requested

SUMMERTIME IS A GOOD TIME AT MUHLENBERG
To Move Ahead • To Expand • To Enrich
To Catch Up • To Enjoy
For Our New Summer Bulletin
Call 215-821-3300
Summer Sessions, Muhlenberg College, Allentown, PA 18104

WANTED
FRESHMEN, SOPHOMORES, JUNIORS
Interested In Helping Out With SENIOR WEEK AND COMMENCEMENT

MANDATORY MEETING
Thursday, April 28
5:30 pm CC Cinema
Sign Up In Advance In The Union Office

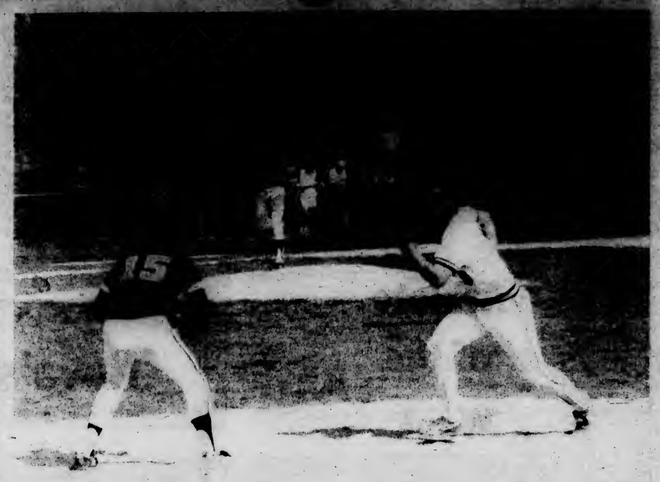
Baseball sweeps Pittsburgh Panthers

By DOUG SCANCARELLA
Sports Editor

"The baseball team is in a good spot right now," said junior shortstop Bob McCreary of his 23-15 team. "We have come together as a team, played well and are now in first place in the Big East."

The Wildcats have played well. Along with an overall record of 23-15, the Cats stand atop the Big East Southern division with a conference record of 11-1. Those 11 wins mark the most conference wins ever attained by a Villanova baseball team and earn them an automatic berth in the Big East tournament. Additionally, the Cats, who hold a four-game advantage over all other conference foes, have won 16 of their last 19 games for Head Coach George Bennett, who has a three-year record of 79-53-1 at Villanova.

This past week Villanova captured five out of six contests. They kicked off the week splitting a home-and-home series with St. Joseph's. V.U. dropped the first game of the series 11-10. Behind homeruns by Mike Shick and Frank Matrone, the Wildcats raced to an early 9-2 advantage, but squandered the lead late in the game when the deeply talented Hawk squad scored nine straight runs and eventually claimed a one-run victory.



A day later, at McGeehan field, the Cats returned the favor as they shut out St. Joe's, 9-0. Freshman pitcher Mike Boetticher hurled five strikeouts in eight innings while not allowing a single run to score. Rick Petrone and Bill Ellis both went two for three from the plate while Gary Scott knocked in three runs.

Next, the Wildcats swept four straight games from Big East rival — Pittsburgh. In the series opener the Cats, behind a nine-inning pitching effort by Mike Shick, edged the Panthers 4-3. Freshman Jim Sears led the team offensively with a two-run home run that sealed the victory.

In the next game Villanova's bats exploded for 15 hits as they clubbed Pitt, 18-12. Three hits apiece from McCreary and Sears combined with a three run, three RBI performance compliments of Marc Alderfer to give Villanova the victory. Also helping the cause was a horrendous 16-walk pitching performance by the Panthers.

"Right now we're playing with a lot of momentum and we're winning the games we have to win, but we still have a ways to go," stated McCreary.

The momentum continued through the next two games as Villanova concluded its series with Pittsburgh with 6-4 and 9-6 wins. Two three-run spurts, led by Dave Carr and Alderfer, in the first and fourth innings were all the Wildcats would need in the 6-4 win. A four-for-five, three RBI performance by Petrone and a four-inning scoreless relief pitching effort by ace reliever Scott Marks clinched the 9-6 victory.

(Photo by Nunes)

The baseball team has won more conference games this year than ever before. They recently clinched a Big East post-season berth.

With the best record in the Big East, and a conference tournament appearance sealed, the Cats are right where they want to be. But, according to McCreary they are not satisfied. "Our goal is to win the Big East tournament. If we keep pitching well and hitting the ball like we're hitting now, we'll have a great shot."

Tennis goes 4-1

By STEVE KIRSCH
Staff Reporter

The 'Nova men's tennis team encountered a tough week of matches, but came out of the fray with a 4-1 record on the week. The Cats are now 18-3 and appear headed for their third straight 20-win season under Head Coach Dr. Robert Langran.

In a rescheduled match at Fordham University on April 12, the Cats pulled out a 5-4 victory which was won in the very last match. No. 1-seed, junior Mike Rouse, suffered his first loss of the season at the hands of Dan Mastrangelo by scores of 6-3, 5-7 and 7-6. Rouse was 16-0 entering the match.

Following a 6-4, 6-3 loss by No. 2-seed Taylor Teresi, Pete Leonard, Mike Loughman, Mike Freedman and Greg Ackerman were all victorious in the No. 3 through No. 6 singles spots, respectively. All four players were extended to three sets except for No. 4 Loughman.

Following losses in close matches by the No. 1 doubles team of Rouse-Teresi and the No. 2 team of Leonard-Freedman, the

(Continued on page 29)

(Photo by Trimble)

No. 5-seed Mike Freedman and the men's tennis team shoot for a 20 win season this week.

(File Photo)

'Nova-bound high school star Greg Woodard

V.U. recruit signs

By JOHN RICCO
Sports Editor

On April 13, the NCAA men's basketball late signing period began, with Villanova hoping to add to its already successful 1987-88 recruiting year. The late signing period offers a second chance for high school players who had not signed by Nov. 18 to commit to the school of their choice. The players are not allowed to sign during the collegiate season.

As expected Marc Dowdell, who had verbally committed to 'Nova last fall, signed immediately. The 6'9" forward from Lincroft, N.J. averaged 25 ppg. in his senior year, while leading Christian Brothers Academy to a 24-2 record.

Among many other awards, Dowdell was named Parade Magazine all-America third team and USA Today Super 25. Dowdell joins Greg Woodard and Chris Walker, who both signed last fall, to become 'Nova's third quality recruit.

Entering the late signing period, V.U. was actively recruiting three other players in Townsend Harris, Kevin Cooper and David Miller. Unfortunately, only Miller, a 6'0" guard from Raritan N.J., remains a possible signee. "Miller is a point guard/second guard-type," said Assistant Coach Steve Lappas. "He will probably decide where to go this weekend."

Harris, a 6'9" center/forward from Palatka Fl., was considering schools such as Louisville and Florida, in addition to V.U., but eventually chose to attend Indiana St. next fall.

Cooper, also 6'9", decided to play collegiately for Iona over a host of other schools. "Cooper is a very good player, who probably would not have played that much for us in the coming year," said Lappas. "Also, with the fact that there are some very good juniors we are involved with, it probably worked out best for Kevin and us that he chose Iona."

The juniors Lappas spoke of are indeed, very good. According to Eastern Basketball, a highly regarded college basketball publication, six of the top 25 juniors

(Continued on page 30)

Softball faces mid-season slump

By AMY C. SPENCER
Staff Reporter

Villanova women's softball had a busy week as they played the first seven games of their 13-game homestand. Their collection of five losses and two wins brought their season record to 7-12 with two weeks remaining.

The team started the week badly with a 3-2 loss to Swarthmore College. Villanova took the lead in the third, but a run in the fourth and a two-run fifth inning for Swarthmore, which included a home run off V.U. pitcher Karyn Ladlee put the Cats behind and they never caught up.

April 14 was a busy day for the Cats as they faced both Trenton College and Trenton State College. In the first game, against Trenton, Villanova emerged victorious 6-5.

Sophomore Jill Karpinski was the offensive star of the game, going 4-4 and completing a rare event-hitting for the cycle. A double in the second was followed by a single in the third, a triple in the fifth and a home run in the seventh. Karpinski had two RBI's and three runs. The win went to sophomore Kris Branca.

The second game of the day was not as much fun for the Cats as Trenton State piled up 10 hits and 10 runs to smother the Cats, 10-1. Villanova used four pitchers in trying to shut down the mighty bats of the opposition, but none succeeded.

Trenton had four runs in the first and nine in the second to [illegible]

Villanova split a double-header with Philadelphia Textile on Saturday. The first game was lost by a score of 6-3, but the Cats rebounded to win 4-3 in the second.

A double-header against Long Island University on April 17, rescheduled from a rainout on March 26, featured a game that was a reminder of the game against Trenton State earlier in the week. The Cats fell by a score of 11-0.

The Cats' bats were [illegible] as they [illegible] only nine hits compared to Long Island's 10. The Wildcats committed six errors to Long Island's one error and [illegible] the entire game to Blondie.

In the second game, the Cats played better, but still lost by a score of 6-2.

This is the last issue of the 1988 spring semester.

the Villanovan

Vol. 63, No. 21 | VILLANOVA UNIVERSITY, VILLANOVA, PA. | April 29, 1988

(Photo by Shafie)

The Phillie Phanatic, obviously well-nourished on stadium hot dogs, hugs Cindy Lappe, nutritionist of Food Services. Food Services sponsored a Phillie's Phillies Phillies Day in the dining halls last week.

PEC report under scrutiny

Board will not make decisions all at once

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

The Board of Trustees will make decisions concerning the Program Evaluation Committee's [PEC] final report recommendations on a step-by-step basis, said the Rev. Edward J. McCarthy, O.S.A., chairperson of the Board of Trustees, Wednesday.

While McCarthy said the PEC did a "very excellent job" and that the report should not be ignored, he added that he does not "think we should rush into things."

McCarthy commented that he would be "very surprised" if the Board made a decision on all the recommendations for program terminations during its July meeting, when it is scheduled to begin discussion of the PEC recommendations.

The Board will be considering factors such as responses to the report from individual programs and financial effects, said McCarthy.

In all, the Board will not delay "for the sake of delay," but will not make any decisions without having an opportunity to gain sufficient knowledge and to reflect on what action to take, concluded McCarthy.

The need for time to reflect on the approximately 340-page report was also listed by faculty representatives as one of their concerns regarding the report. Currently, the deadline for responses to the report have to be sent to the office of University President the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., by June 1.

The PEC final report is the culmination of two years of study and analysis of all University programs, both academic and non-academic. It contains recommendations on programs which will be considered by Driscoll and the Board of Trustees.

Faculty reactions

The faculty council resolved during a recent meeting to request that the deadline for responding to the PEC report be extended until July 1.

"The PEC report has been released at a time when faculty and administrators are busy with the many duties associated with the end of a semester and academic year ... an extension of time would allow chairpersons and directors adequate opportunity to collect accurate data and develop reasoned responses," stated the committee.

PEC Chairperson Dr. Angelo Armenti, dean of University College, responded Wednesday that the June 1 deadline needs to be met because of the requirements of the upcoming Middle States accreditation evaluation which the University will be undergoing.

The PEC report is a large part of the self-evaluation the University must do for the Middle States

(Continued on page 6)

Support programs evaluated

By JENNIFER REIDY
Assistant News Editor

In their recently released report, the Program Evaluation Committee [PEC] evaluated 35 support programs of the University, including the financial aid office, the athletic department, development, alumni, public relations, Student Life, Housekeeping and Maintenance, among others.

This article will attempt to condense the comments and observations of the PEC regarding these programs, and focus on some important recommendations issued by the committee.

Financial Aid

PEC discovered that Villanova commits only 4.6 percent of its tuition and fee revenues to student financial aid, and cited comparable schools that allocate "two to four times that amount," such as Ursinus (10 percent), Georgetown (15 percent) and Catholic (20 percent) universities.

In view of this fact, the PEC chose to recommend "very strongly" that the University increase its budget for financial aid to 10 percent gradually over a period of five years. The committee "believes that a special tuition increase will be needed and should be implemented for the purpose of funding this measure."

The report commented, "Villanova is in danger of becoming a haven for the children of only the most affluent families, a development that has been accelerated by the decline in grant aid on the one hand and the increase in financial need on the other.

"To a large extent, our growing failure to attract commuting students as well as certain minority students is linked to and compounded by the harsh economic realities fostered by those simultaneous and opposing pressures," it concluded.

Furthermore, the PEC recommended that the University "pursue the establishment of a substantial student-aid endowment" and "pursue an investigation of creative financing packages for our students."

Athletics

The PEC begins its evaluation of the Athletics department with praise from outside evaluator George Hanford, for the "variety of quality sport activities available to students." However, the PEC quoted Hanford, who said in his report, "appreciation of these strengths by the rest of the University community is being thwarted or diminished by the figurative chasm that Ithan Avenue represents.

"Attention instead seems to be only telescopically focused on the athletic department from time to time by other parts of the University family in connection with special circumstances such as the

(Continued on page 6)

Senate considers report

Recommendation on PEC expected today

By KEVIN C. HEIL
Assistant News Editor

The University Senate is scheduled to make a recommendation to the Board of Trustees on the final report of the PEC [Program Evaluation Committee] when it meets today at 4 p.m. in the West Lounge of Dougherty Hall.

The Senate will also ask for the decision of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees on the proposed tuition increase for the 1988-89 academic year, according to Dr. Philip A. Maurone, Senate chairperson and physics professor.

The PEC was charged in fall 1985 by University President the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., to evaluate all academic and non-academic programs at the University and "arrive at resource allocation recommendations on a program-by-program basis," according to a PEC newsletter.

The final report of the PEC recommended that 15 academic programs at Villanova, mostly from the graduate school, should be terminated.

The report also cited "less than challenging courses, syllabi, assignments and tests" as factors which reflected poorly on the intellectual environment of the University.

(Continued on page 6)

INSIDE

EDITORIAL: Professor rebuts PEC report ..... p. 11

FEATURES: Greeks help children ..... p. 13

ENTERTAINMENT: Blue Period interviewed ..... p. 21

SPORTS: Baseball sweeps Georgetown ..... p. 36

1987-88 . . . a year of change and conflict

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

The 1987-88 academic year held much change and conflict for Villanova University.

In his Feb. 19 final State of the University address to the Senate, the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, said, "I think we will regard [1988] as one of the banner years in our maturation."

University president

Driscoll himself made a "banner" decision at a Dec. 8 meeting of the University's Board of Trustees when he announced his retirement. While Driscoll's retirement is effective as of August, no successor has yet been named. The announcement came prior to the Provincial Superior Conference April 14, [illegible] Board of Trustees began to choose the new president at their July meeting.

Student Government elections

Student Government, too, has been left with no new president. The results of the April 12 elections were nullified as a result of the Elections Commission's decision "that the electoral process was irreparably damaged with regard to fairness." Both Sean Closkey and Terise Fusco's campaigns were cited for election violations. Fusco admitted to throwing out several hundred copies of a special edition of the Villanovan on election day.

Current Student Government President Phil Bruch will remain in office until a new election is held in the fall.

Bruch was not to run again and [illegible] this question until spring. [illegible] was not able to run again as well.

PEC

The Program Evaluation Committee's [PEC] report was released this spring, as well as the results of the University Values Survey conducted late last year. The final report is the result of a two-year study of the University conducted by the committee. According to a PEC newsletter, Driscoll created the PEC in the fall of 1985 and charged it with "evaluating all existing academic and non-academic programs."

The University Senate is supposed to make a recommendation on the final report today. Driscoll and the Board of Trustees are supposed to make the final decision in July on what changes will be made at the University, based on the PEC recommendations.

Several Villanova students found a new voice in the form of protest this year. Students first rallied on Nov. 20, 1987, when U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese arrived on campus in conjunction with the Constitutional lectures series. Meese gave an address at a banquet held after Associate Supreme Court Justice Antonin Scalia gave a lecture. Both pro-Meese and anti-Meese demonstrators came together to air their views.

In mid-February, a group of students gathered on the corner of Lancaster and Ithan avenues to show their support for putting a pedestrian bridge across the intersection.

Most recently, nearly 200 students converged at a University Senate meeting March 25 to protest the passing of the 1988-89 academic year's operating budget, which includes a tuition

(Continued on page 8)

(Photo by Shafie)

During the course of this past school year construction began on the two new dormitories on south campus.

F.Y.I.

April 30

Pledge of Resistance

Today is a day of community action and education in Philadelphia neighborhoods and suburbs. Literature tables with petitions, balloons and banners at various public locations, 11:30 to 2 p.m.; a rally celebration at 3:30 p.m., all at Eakins Oval, 23rd and Spring Garden. For information or to help table, call Pledge of Resistance, 438-9656, or CISPES, 546-9255.

May 2

Amnesty International

The Villanova Chapter of Amnesty International will have its final meeting of the year at 4:30 p.m. in the Center for Peace and Justice Education in the basement of Sullivan Hall. Please join us in the fight to correct injustice.

Arab and Islamic Club

The last meeting for the semester will be today. We will be meeting at 7 p.m. in Bartley Circle.

Used book exchange

Any students interested in helping run the used book exchange please come to the meeting at 7 p.m. in the Student Government office. Contact Michelle in the Student Government office, if you are interested and unable to attend the meeting.

May 3

Silk squad

Hey, girls — our end-of-the-year dinner will be on the first reading day. Meet at the information desk in Connelly at 6 p.m. We are going to go to Houlihans. Bring your uniform cleaned. See you then!

Math Club

There will be a student-faculty softball game in Mendel Field at 3 p.m. All are welcome to play. Any mitts, bats and other equipment that you can bring are needed.

Peer counselors

The Career Development Center proudly announces its selection of peer counselors for the 1988-89 academic year.

Class of 1989: Julie Gargula and Petra Hummelbrunner; Class of 1990: Marie Dancheck, John Guaragna, Megan Guidera, Joe Henry, Arline Kerrigan, Danny Leary, Lisa Mountain and Susan Richards; Class of 1991: Chris Arnold, Chris Jones, Chris Orr and Lisa Smith.

And many thanks to this year's staff: Mark Cary, Chris Cooney, Mia Donnell, Teresa Pasik, Patty Brown, Patty Hayek, Trudi Maniaci, John Guaragna, Megan Guidera and Arline Kerrigan.

Cancun for fall break

Students, faculty and staff are invited to join the trip to Cancun during fall break, Oct. 17 to 21. Sponsored by the Graduate School Alumni Association, this trip includes roundtrip air transportation from Philadelphia, accommodations at Tacun Cun Beach (a beachfront hotel), daily breakfast, roundtrip transfers, hotel taxes and tips. The cost is $469.

To obtain a flyer about reservations, call Dr. Joseph Kinney, in the English department, at 645-4799. The deadline for deposit ($100) for reservations is June 16.

Graduating seniors

Congratulations from the Bursar's Office staff! Your breakage deposit will be automatically refunded approximately 60 days after graduation.

Seniors

If you did not pick up your pictures from the Days Party in Connelly Center, they are in the Student Activities office. Please pick them up as soon as possible!

Attention seniors

A new activity planned for Senior Week 1988 will be a Senior Mass in the Main Chapel. Anyone interested in participating in the Mass, helping to organize it or who has any suggestions, please contact Jill Apito in the Student Union office in Connelly Center at 645-7280.

Football managers needed

Football managers are needed for spring football from April 22 to 30, and for fall football from Aug. 15 through Nov. 19 to cover practices, home games and away games. For information contact Bob Lambert, Equipment Room at 645-4124.

Job Club

Still looking for employment after graduation? Join the Job Club. Job Club can help you to understand the basics of a successful job search and assist you with interviewing skills, career descision making and salary negotiations. Conducted in a group setting, counselors from the Career Development Center will train you in the secrets to success from May 23 to May 27. Visit the Career Development Center for more information.

Photo contest

The Association of Commuting Students is holding a contest for a photo which best represents some aspect of commuting life. The winning photo will receive $25 and the picture will appear in the 1988-89, first, edition of the commuter wall calendar. All photos must be in black and white and should be dropped off at the A.C.S. office in 215 Dougherty Hall by May 5.

Thank you

This is to everyone who helped reduce vandalism. Vandalism has been reduced by thousands of dollars this year. Thank you for your help and support.

The Campus Vandalism Committee

Ski Club

Damage deposits from the Killington Ski Trip can be collected from the Student Activities Office in Dougherty Hall. Anyone interested in organizing a Villanova Ski Team can contact Stephen Eid at 941-0889.

1988 Orientation staff

The Dean of Students Office is pleased to announce the selection of the following students as administrative assistants:

Dan Brooker, Cathy Coyne, Beth Dreiling, Nancy Duncan, Susan Gallagher, Elizabeth Gerth, John Hayburn, John Hulbert, Mary Theresa Johnson, Kathleen Kelly, Corrine Kohl, Susan Lewis, Michael Miehle, Katie Reichner, Maura Riley, Christina Silva, Ken Sungela, Sharon Varga and Sharon Waters.

The following students as orientation counselors for the 1988 New Student Orientation Program:

Tami Adams, Jeffrey Adelman, James Baldwin, Edward Barrett, Diane Bodden, Christie Bonesch, Patrick Brala, Carol Brennan, Laura Bronzi, Anna Bullock, Susan Chronis, Steven Ciarrocca, Karen Cichowski, Dave Cook, David Cregan, Patricia Cronin, Maureen Curran, Steven DelDuco, Kim DiDonato, Jerry DiGiovanni, Elia DiTaddeo, Christine Donahue, Daniel Donahue, Michael Donnelly, Daniel Doughtery, Barbra Doyle, Martha Driscoll, Kevin Drummey, Kathryn Duberson, Paul Eells, Sean Fahey, Ken Fahrman, Colleen Fitzsimmons, Joe Flanagan, Terise Fusco, Lauriann Gallagherv.

Also, Carolyn Gerg, Christine Gibbons, Christine Goppel, Stephanie Gruner, Christine Hamburger, Joseph Hofmeister, Lynn Joyce, Sean Keough, Robert Koelmel, Kimberly Koerner, Thomas Kurke, Teresa Li, Tim Lowry, Mary Mayfield, Kathryn McCarthy, Natalie McKenna, Teri Messenger, Karen Mitchell, John Mooney, Lisa Morelli, Mary Norcini, Danielle Ochnich, Maureen Pelrine, Shauna Quinn, John Reilly, Cindy Rich, Craig Sanders, Regine Scharle, Tracy Setlock, Anne Sikorski, Maura Slattery, Andrew Southerling, Sandra Stanger, Patricia Stofira, Jennifer Temo, Mary Tierney, Sheri Van Ginhoven, Kathleen Wakefield, Brian Wiele and Deborah Zuniga.

English department honors students

The Department of English has announced the admission of the following senior English majors into the English Honor Society:

Joanne Caccavale, Maria Chiappetta, Pamela Coyle, Susan Dougherty, Alice Kelby, Joanne Loftus and John Misselwitz.

The English Honor Society was established to mark the achievements of the best English majors. Membership in the society requires a high academic average, sponsorship by members of English faculty, and a crucial essay in support of the application. The Department of English instituted the Honor Society as a reflection of the growing excellence of its English majors.

Editor's Note:
Due to technical difficulties the Greek Week Collage scheduled for this week has been cancelled. The Villanovan is sorry for any inconvenience.

Faculty council discusses academic freedom issue

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

In an interoffice communication submitted to the faculty council on April 18, Dr. Joseph Betz, professor of philosophy, claimed that Capt. Charles D. Shields, Jr., U.S.N., Commanding Officer, NROTC [Naval Reserve Officer Training Corps] "ordered" students not to attend a lecture included as part of Betz's Ethics of War class.

The lecture was given by the Rev. Thomas McGann, a member of the Epiphany Plowshares Four, a group which damaged three preselected types of aircraft at a military base in protest of war on Jan. 6, 1987.

McGann, who awaited arrest and was later charged with trespassing, was invited to speak to the class in order to present the views of pacifism, a belief Betz felt was not emphasized in a course focusing on the "just" war and "total" war theories.

Betz opened the class lecture to anyone who wanted to come by advertising through fliers distributed "mostly in faculty mailboxes," but also taped to walls.

The flier, which read across the top, "Why would a Philadelphia priest take a hammer and help cause $160,000 damage to three military aircraft at the Willow Grove Naval Air Station?" appeared to Shields "to encourage destruction of government property," according to a letter he sent to the faculty council.

Shields said in this letter that he "informed all the midshipmen of [his] unit that [he] recommended they not attend this forum to debate whether or not destruction of government property is a good thing."

Betz's letter prompted the faculty council to approve a motion on April 25 to recommend that there be a faculty council fact-finding committee, composed of three people, to immediately attempt to interview the principals involved to determine whether there was an infringement of academic freedom in the directive Shields gave, according to Dr. John A. Doody, chairperson of the council.

Doody said, "Some people on the council felt that the claim that it wasn't a class, that he didn't know it was a class and that he thought it was only an open lecture, wasn't a violation of academic freedom as far as Capt. Shields went, but some members of the council felt that itself was still an infringement of academic freedom. To issue a command to students not to attend even a lecture is a violation of the kind of understood academic freedom on campus."

(File Photo)
Dr. John A. Doody, chairperson of the faculty council which met April 25 to discuss the issue of academic freedom.

Dr. Edwin Goff, president of the Villanova Chapter of the American Association of University Professors [AAUP], a national organization which has historically made decisions on academic freedom, said of the issue, "Whether it be classroom or lecture, it's the same principle."

Goff said the question at hand is not a "straightforward question of whether he did command students not to go to class or even whether he commanded them not to go to the lecture, but whether the factual determination allows us to say whether he was misunderstanding what the circumstances were."

He added, "I think there needs to be a very clear and strong statement [that] no member of the University can use their authority to recommend to any student not to participate in any University class or lecture."

Betz, former president of the Villanova AAUP, said he, too, felt it was a violation regardless of whether it was a class or a lecture.

He said he hoped to see at least two affirmations come from the investigation of the issue: that any student has the right to attend any public lecture at Villanova, and that any qualified student has the right to choose and take any course at Villanova.

Doody explained that the fact-finding committee's report will not be available until next September.

Abzug speaks on politics

By JIM BOWMAN
Staff Reporter

Bella Abzug, a former Democratic congresswoman, New York mayoral candidate and lifelong feminist, spoke April 26 in the Villanova Room of Connelly Center.

In her speech, titled "Women in Politics," sponsored by the Villanova Union, Abzug outlined some of the major events of her political and personal life, as well as topical problems of women in society.

She began the evening with an anecdote explaining why she always wears one of her now famous hats in public.

"In those days [1940s], women wore hats. So I always wore a hat, and when I went anywhere for a meeting, they knew I meant business. I continued to wear hats. I just grew to like them. Then I grew up some more and became a member of Congress," said Abzug.

"When I got to Congress, they made such a big fuss about this hat, I didn't know if they wanted me to take it off or put it on. When I decided they wanted me to take it off, I decided to keep it on," she continued.

Abzug offered a brief overview and her own personal interpretation of the role of women in political activism.

"I believe that women have been moved to act, most often, when confronted by violence. Women participated in the abolition movement to eliminate the violence of the institution of slavery. In the course of the struggle against that violent institution, women realized there was a violence directed toward themselves," she explained.

Abzug said, "It was not until the 1960s until women, I believe, again reacted against violence. At this time, it was the violence of the Vietnam War. They rejected what might be regarded as a certain kind of male triumphalism. They responded negatively to the traditional testing ground of virtue, aggressiveness and belligerence to what was to many of them a horror.

"This has a great impact on the political awareness of women. A new kind of political woman emerged. We saw women, minorities and young people begin to question the policies of government. They began to question whether they should remain outside a power structure that excluded them," Abzug added.

It was in this mood of national questioning of the established power structures and roles of women that Abzug decided to run for office.

"As the war [Vietnam] became more and more horrible, I became more and more open to the suggestion that people made that I should run for office. Because I was independent and did have a view, a vision of some kind, I finally decided to run. It was I, in my campaign, who initiated the slogan, 'This woman's place is in the house — the House of Representatives.'"

(Courtesy of Student Union)
Bella Abzug, famed politician, spoke Tuesday night at the Connelly Center.

The recollection of the efforts involved in her first political campaign provided the impetus for one of the more emotional moments of the evening. When Abzug reflected on her recently deceased husband, she explained his impact on her life.

"My husband was terrific. I adored him. He adored me. He thought I was the greatest thing to walk this earth. Frankly, many of the things I've done, I know I couldn't have done without that support. Anyway, somehow I hope he is here with us tonight," she said.

During a question and answer session, Abzug responded to the question, "How can we bring greater awareness to college campuses?"

"Kids who care have to organize to make a difference in issues that affect them. I don't see a lot of that today. The emphasis is on 'how do I equip myself?' instead of discussion of ethics and history. This is a serious problem," she answered.

In the News

Falvey hours to be extended

Falvey Memorial Library recently announced the hours it will be open during examination week.

The hours are as follows: Wednesday, May 4 through Friday, May 6, 8 a.m. to 1 a.m.; Saturday, May 7, 9 a.m. to 1 a.m.; Sunday, May 8, noon to 1 a.m.; Monday and Tuesday, May 9 and 10, 8 a.m. to 1 a.m., Wednesday, May 11, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Thursday and Friday, May 12 and 13, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

On Saturday and Sunday, May 14 and 15, the library will be closed. Regular hours will resume on Monday, May 16.

M.S.

Bryn Mawr, V.U. exchange courses

Villanova University and Bryn Mawr College will be offering an exchange program on a limited basis beginning in the fall semester, according to Dr. Michael E. Burke, director of the honors program.

Through the program, "superior" undergraduate students at Villanova will be able to enroll in one course at Bryn Mawr tuition-free, while Bryn Mawr undergraduates may do the same at Villanova, said Burke. The course should be in the student's area of concentration.

The program is restricted to juniors and seniors in the college of Arts and Sciences and is on a three-year trial basis, according to Burke.

Students may not take a course at Bryn Mawr which is already offered at Villanova. Credit for courses taken at Bryn Mawr will be listed as transfer credit on a student's transcript and will not affect one's grade point average, said Burke.

Students should contact the Honors office for more information.

K.C.H.

Unity Week held by BCS

This week, the Black Cultural Society [BCS], led by second Vice President Cynthia Glover and other officers, sponsored Unity Week. Students were asked to wear black arm bands all week "to symbolize the united effort to stop racist and intolerable activity across college campuses," according to the group.

Similar demonstrations are occuring at Fordham University and other colleges, according to Glover.

She said the goal for the participants is to raise a level of consciousness throughout the University as to the seriousness of increasingly "unfriendly" climates in "supposedly higher institutions of learning." The BCS said it hopes to make a change through its efforts.

Book exchange to be held in fall

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

There will be a used book exchange sponsored by Student Government in Alumni Hall's gymnasium from Wednesday, Aug. 31 to Friday, Sept. 9, according to Michelle Ciccolo, secretary of internal affairs for Student Government.

Ciccolo said the procedure for the exchange will be that students will drop off used books all day Wednesday until noontime on Thursday. A small fee will be charged to cover the costs of renting tables and publicity.

Students will be given a receipt after signing a release form. Ciccolo said students will price their own books and Student Government will sell the books for this price. The students will receive their money or their unsold books on that Thursday or Friday.

If the student fails to pick up the books, the books will be given either to charity or to book buyback.

Ciccolo said the exchange is a service for the students that Student Government wished to provide. She said the general concept proposal was approved by Lucyna J. Gorski, director of Student Activities, over a month ago.

A general meeting, in which chairpersons will be selected for different sections of the exchange, will be held Monday at 7 p.m.

University evaluates needs

By SHARON A. WATERS
Assistant News Editor

Arthur W. Eccleston, outside consultant to the University president, predicted that the first actual construction for the master plan of the University would "realistically" be in the beginning of 1989.

Because the funds for the master plan will not be raised all at once, the completion of the plan, excluding the west campus development, "could take 10 to 15 years" according to Eccleston's estimates.

He said that a goal of the master plan is to create a "downtown" portion of the campus where the business activities would take place on the main campus.

Splitting the main campus into business and residential areas would also foster the separation of vehicular and pedestrian traffic, which Eccleston considered a priority.

While priorities in the master plan have not been officially set yet, Eccleston said, "Certain things seem to be rather obvious, I think, to anybody."

He said there is a "major need to upgrade" classroom and faculty office facilities and improve the mechanical and plumbing systems of campus buildings older than 20 years, which includes almost all the buildings on campus except Connelly Center and the four new south campus dormitories. Eccleston added that the structure of these buildings is fine and only the systems need to be upgraded.

The University is presently in the first two stages of the master plan — developing a "program of requirements" to determine the needs of the University and finding the best use of the allotted property, according to Eccleston.

The third stage of the plan considers the physical facilities that will be built and assigns how they will be used. Step four is a more detailed subdivision plan studying engineering, design and the practical problems of sewer, water and gas systems.

The final stage develops design and construction documents for a specific portion of the area, such as a building. These five steps must be completed before any actual construction can begin.

Two questionnaires, academic and non-academic, have been sent out "to all components of the University" to receive feedback which will help determine the University's needs. Eccleston said, "Need and want are two

(Continued on page 8)

News analysis

Dukakis triumphs in Pennsylvania primary

By G.J. DONNELLY
Staff Reporter

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts consolidated his position as the front runner for the Democratic nomination for president with a decisive victory over Jesse Jackson in Pennsylvania's primary Tuesday.

Despite a relatively low turnout of voters, Dukakis drew 66 percent of the vote while Jackson took only 29 percent. Jackson did, however, defeat Dukakis in the city of Philadelphia, where he garnered 51 percent to the governor's 41 percent.

However, Dukakis crushed Jackson in central and western Pennsylvania as voters flocked to Dukakis by a 3-to-1 margin over his rival.

In the Republican race Vice President George Bush ran relatively unopposed and won the 78 delegates needed to clinch the nomination. Bush, who needed only 60 more delegates to assure himself of the nomination, took 79 percent of the vote, with 12 percent going to withdrawn candidate Robert Dole, the GOP minority leader of the Senate, and 9 percent going to former televangelist Pat Robertson.

Dukakis took a giant step toward obtaining the Democratic party's nomination for president in his victory in the New York primary last week.

Dukakis garnered 51 percent of the vote compared to 37 percent for Jackson and 7 percent for Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee. The day after the primary, Gore suspended his campaign.

Jackson needed a victory in Pennsylvania to stop the momentum of Dukakis.

Dukakis has roughly 1,070 of the 2,081 delegates needed for nomination, plus the support of the majority of the 643 "superdelegates," public and party officials who are uncommitted.

If one thing has dogged the Dukakis campaign, it is the candidate's seeming lack of dynamics. Only 34 percent of the voting public, according to a poll in Time magazine, find him to be a dynamic campaigner.

However, another Time magazine poll found that Dukakis would do well head-to-head against Bush in November, should the governor be nominated. The poll showed Dukakis was favored over Bush 50 percent to 39 percent among those polled.

For Jackson, the Pennsylvania primary was a must-win if he was to keep Dukakis from the nomination. Jackson's campaign manager Gerald Austin admitted after the New York results were in that Jackson's prospects were "pretty bleak."

Jackson has concentrated his campaign on the national drug problem. His signature line in speeches is "Down with dope — Up with hope!" He recently employed filmmaker Spike Lee to direct an anti-drug ad which features images of Harlem and suburban Tarrytown, N.Y. juxtaposed with one another to show that drugs are "killing our children" in both neighborhoods.

Indeed, drugs are an issue with which the American people are concerned. A recent CBS/New York Times poll showed that by a ratio of 3-to-1 drugs were seen as a bigger threat than communism.

Dukakis has responded to Jackson's one-man anti-drug war by running ads of his own. These ads feature close-ups of Panama's General Manuel Noriega while attacking the Reagan administration for allegedly paying $200,000 a year to his regime. Noriega has been charged with smuggling drugs into and around the United States.

In Pennsylvania, the issue became the budget. Jackson repeatedly challenged Dukakis to present a budget he would implement, should he be elected. "[Dukakis] says that he wants a scholarship for every youth who has the will to go to college," said Jackson. "That is a noble position but it is going to cost," he added.

Dukakis declined the challenge by saying, "If there is anything I have learned very painfully, it is that you can't be drawing up budgets today for next year. No candidate knows what he is going to expect."

The statement was a reference to a broken promise the governor made during his first run for the statehouse in 1974 that he would not cut taxes.

Dukakis was leading in the polls prior to the primary, but that did not deter him from campaigning across the state, from Philadelphia to Pittsburgh. Jackson followed a similar route while using his advertisements to show him as a leader.

The ad featured descriptions of various strikes Jackson has helped to negotiate, such as the nurses' strike in Buffalo, while also painting a portrait of him as a world diplomat. The latter image was suggested through closeups of Jackson with Navy pilot Lt. Robert Goodman, whose release Jackson obtained from Syria in 1984.

There is now talk of Jeanne Kirkpatrick becoming Bush's running mate. The former U.N. ambassador, who teaches at Georgetown University, declined to comment.

Portions of this article were taken from Time and the Philadelphia Inquirer.

Michael Furgiuele is a senior general arts major with minors in economics and computer science, and comes to Villanova from Andover, N.J.

As a dedicated brother of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity, Mike has held a wide variety of positions, including social chairman, sports chairman, pledge master and big brother.

In addition Mike has also served in the capacity of IFC delegate for Sig Ep for several semesters. Mike is also a member of the Order of Omega.

Outside of Greek life, Mike has been active in the Economics Society, Special Olympics and Balloon Day. Mike is also a founding member of the Saferides Program and was a member of the Tailgate Mangement Team.

In his spare time Mike enjoys watching old movies and reading autobiographies of famous people.

For all of his accomplishments and contributions to the Villanova community, the Order of Omega is pleased to honor Michael Furgiuele of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity as the Greek of the Week.

Jackson broadens appeal

By The College Press Service

While other Democratic candidates, particularly fallen frontrunner Gary Hart and now, at a lower decibel level, Massachusettes Gov. Michael Dukakis, have attracted essential cores of student support, Jackson seems to have evoked a passion on campus unseen among liberals since the 1968 campaigns of Robert Kennedy and Eugene McCarthy.

Some campaign officials claim "thousands" of students are now working on the campaign.

"All the other candidates seem to be wishy-washy," added Wisconsin freshman Mary Cook. "He's talking about things that matter. He got right down to the nitty gritty," Cook said.

Cook, for one, became a supporter after hearing Jackson speak. "He really sold me. I'm going to work for the guy," she explained.

Much of Jackson's campus support, however, seems to come not from newcomers like Cook, but from "veterans" long active in liberal causes like the [CIA] South Africa divestiture movement, efforts to ban Central Intelligence Agency recruiting on campuses and opposition to the Reagan administration's Central American policies.

"What Jesse is doing is giving all the campus 'antis,' the anti-Reagan crowd, the anti-CIA crowd, the anti-involvement in Central America crowd, something to be for," said Stuart Levitan, who represented student districts on the Dane County [Wisconsin] board for three terms.

The Jackson volunteers, however, maintain the candidate's campus support has broadened beyond college leftists.

"Students are aware of the bad economy, of unemployment," Colorado grad student Larry Johnson asserted. "These students are concerned about jobs and about their future. These people are working on degrees they want to use in the economy. They're not activists," he said.

And although Johnson admits it is often easier to get students excited about contra aid than financial aid, Jackson's student aid promise , he, like Dukakis and apparent Republican nominee George Bush, has adopted the American Council on Education's call to decrease students' dependence on loans by funding more grants — has attracted support.

But something more than students' agreeing with issues — Jackson's positions on them are not all that different from his opponents — seems to be fueling the student's passion.

For instance, many campus supporters credit Jackson for helping black students take broader leadership roles at colleges.

But the few times in recent history in which students supported candidates passionately, it has ended badly: Robert Kennedy was killed, McCarthy was muscled out of contention and, in 1972, the Democratic leadership actively subverted George McGovern's candidacy.

Rumors that the Democratic convention in Atlanta could be directed by backroom power brokers toward Dukakis or even New York Gov. Mario Cuomo have raised the same fears among Jackson supporters.

"It will hurt them [the Democratic Party]," said Johnson, who believes Jackson's supporters are the party's most enthusiastic campaigners, and would drop out if they felt cheated. "The Democratic Party will break into fragments," he added.

Conservatives miss Kemp

By The College Press Service

Things just are not the same for many conservative college activists since N.Y. Cong. Jack Kemp dropped out of the race for the Republican presidential nomination in late March.

Vice President George Bush has not lit any fires among campus Republicans, who claim credit for delivering an impressively large student vote for Ronald Reagan in 1980 and 1984, the activists say.

It was no secret that much of the College Republican national leadership supported Kemp, although the group, like the Republican National Committee, is supposed to stay neutral during the primary and caucus season.

In fact, the group's ties to Kemp helped provoke state and local Republican protests that, combined with other criticisms of Reeves' leadership abilities and allegations that he cheated to win his post, led campus groups in Florida, Missouri and California into debilitating internal splits and struggles during the last 12 months.

Now the activists say they will campaign hard for Bush, whose nomination seems all but certain, but stress their hearts still belong to Kemp.

It is Kemp, and not the vice president, who these students see as the natural heir to President Reagan's legacy. In fact, they credit Kemp with creating many of the economic programs that became symbols of the Reagan years.

If Kemp cannot be the party's presidential nominee, conservative students would like to see him named as the vice presidential candidate or to a cabinet post. Such an appointment, they say, would allow Bush to show his commitment to the conservative cause.

Rally scheduled

By E.H. McELDOWNEY
Staff Reporter

The Archdiocese of Philadelphia's charismatic prayer groups will hold their annual rally in the duPont Pavilion June 3 to 5.

Philadelphia Archbishop Anthony Bevilacqua will be the main celebrant and homilist for the June 4 liturgy. John Cardinal Krol is scheduled to perform the liturgy June 5.

The rally, which in the past has drawn about 5,000 people, is expected to exceed that amount in attendance this year, Sr. Maria Rosita, the executive director of charismatic events, attributed this to the attendance of Bevilacqua and Krol.

According to Rosita, groups come from the greater Philadelphia area, Wilmington, Del. and all parts of New Jersey. Groups also attend from Allentown, New York City and from as far as Boston, Mass.

The charismatics held their last rally in the Pavilion in October.

The charismatics are a sect of the Catholic Church, founded in 1967, who maintain that they receive the charismatic gifts described in the book of Corinthians in the New Testament. These gifts include the word of knowledge, the gift of healing, the gift of miracles, the gift of prophesy and the interpretation of tongues.

Eileen George will lead a healing service, with fellowship meeting, June 4 at 3 p.m.

The rally is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Friday. Tickets are available at the door the day of the rally for $9.

Anti-apartheid march today

By DANIEL MORIARTY
Staff Reporter

The Villanova Anti-Apartheid Coalition will march today at 1 p.m. from the Center for Peace and Justice Education to the office of the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, according to Kimberly Howse, student coordinator for the coalition.

The march is an attempt by the coalition to initiate dialogue with the administration regarding the divestment of University funds in South Africa and to increase campus awareness of the South African apartheid issue, according to Ed Sullivan, associate director of the Center for Peace and Justice Education.

The coalition also held a prayer service for the victims of apartheid yesterday at 7:30 p.m. in the Main Chapel.

Dr. Meghan Keita, a specialist in African and South African history and, beginning this fall, a member of the history department, was expected to speak at the service.

"The purpose of the Villanova Anti-Apartheid Coalition is to work through events such as these toward justice for South Africa and to educate the Villanova community about apartheid," said Howse.

According to the Sept. 26 issue of the Villanovan, Driscoll said, "It is my understanding that Villanova, in its investments portfolio... has completely divested from South Africa." At that time, Driscoll did not address the coalition's questions concerning 16 companies involved in South Africa in which the University had investments, according to the article.

(File photo)

Ed Sullivan, associate director of the Center for Peace and Justice Education, said the march today is an attempt to increase campus awareness of the South African apartheid issue.

In a meeting later that fall, Driscoll said, in contradiction with earlier statements, that the University still held investments of about $550,000 in seven companies that do business in South Africa. A source within the coalition found later that two of the companies had no connections with South Africa.

The marchers are supposed to present Driscoll with a petition for complete information on the University's divestment from South Africa and a letter reviewing the coalition's previous contact with the administration, Howse said.

"We don't anticipate any immediate replies from Driscoll, but we aim to get the relevant information, and we want to exhaust all normal channels first," Howse said. She commented that the next step may be a sit-in during the fall.

Driscoll was not available for comment.

The Anti-Apartheid Coalition, whose members represent various student groups on campus, recently submitted a request for recognition as an official campus organization, according to the Student Activities office.

Casino Night approved

By DIANE A. CILIONE
Staff Reporter

The proposed Casino Night has been approved by the administration as an alternative to the Spring Festival, which was scheduled to take place April 30.

The event is still in the planning stages, according to Sean Closkey, member of the committee that worked on the Spring Festival. The targeted time for the event is in the fall or in early spring 1989.

Tentatively, Casino Night will be held in the Connelly Center. It will include games like roulette, blackjack, poker and craps, according to Closkey. There will be alcohol available for students over 21, he said.

This event was approved, unlike the Spring Festival, because the University will be able to exercise control over the area, according to Closkey.

Lucyna J. Gorski, director of Student Activities, said, "At this time, the University has a system where indoor events can happen with alcohol. We know how to gauge who is of age and who is not," she said. Also, the smaller scale of an indoor event makes planning the event easier, according to Gorski.

"The reason for this event is to promote interaction between upperclassmen and underclassmen, and to bring upperclassmen back to campus on a weekend night," said Closkey. "I believe this will be the first step in increasing this type of alcohol-related event on campus," he added.

Gambling with money would require a permit, according to Closkey. The main difficulty for the students planning this event is to work out a system for the gambling, said Gorski. Using tickets and a raffle system for prizes instead of cash is an alternative, according to Gorski, but no specific plans have been made.

Actual planning for the event is targeted for November or December, she said.

"This event will have no liability risk for the University as long as the law is followed, and it will be," said Closkey.

Another accident at intersection

By KATIE REICHNER
Staff Reporter

No one was seriously injured in a two-car accident at the intersection of Lancaster and Ithan avenues April 24 at 2:14 a.m., according to Radnor Township Police Department.

A police report stated that there was fog and poor visibility at the time of the accident.

One vehicle, driven by Susan S. Mooney of Wayne, Pa., was traveling northbound on S. Ithan Avenue approaching Lancaster Avenue. She then proceeded past a red light and struck the driver's side of a vehicle traveling west from Lancaster Avenue onto Ithan Avenue, driven by Elizabeth Noonan of Boyertown, Pa.

Both cars came to rest at the northwest corner of the intersection and the drivers refused medical treatment.

Several Villanova students were listed as witnesses.

Mooney was cited for a violation.

(File Photo)

The intersection of Ithan and Lancaster avenues was the site of an accident April 24.

National News Notes

Compiled from the College Press Service

Conservatives oust communists

Conservative students succeeded in ousting a Communist as co-president of the University of Massachusetts' student government.

On April 13, the student Supreme Court pushed Co-President Jason Rabinowitz, a member of the Young Communist League, and Co-President Shari Silkoff, who does not belong to the group, out of office.

Almost as soon as Rabinowitz, 20, and Silkoff, also 20, won 67 percent of the 2,500 votes cast in the March 15 campuswide election, conservative members of the student government began a filibuster to keep the election from being ratified.

Student Attorney General William Collins had argued the student constitution does not allow for more than one president.

The court called for a new presidential election, which will be held pending further appeal from Silkoff and Rabinowitz.

Gee, Wally, where's the Beav?

Despite the best efforts of a group of University of Washington [UW] "guards," someone stole Beaver Cleaver again.

Cathy Keller of local television station KTZZ has reported a five-foot by six-foot cardboard likeness of the character from the "Leave It To Beaver" television show was stolen from a billboard near the UW campus for the second time in three weeks.

KTZZ had rented the billboard to advertise its nightly reruns of the show.

After still-at-large vandals stole the first version of the likeness in late February, Keller hired members of the Phi Gamma Delta and Theta Chi fraternity houses to guard its replacement.

Theta Chi President Jarrod Guthrie, who led a team of guards who watched the billboard through the nights from a doughnut shop across the street, said his team had stopped two attempts to steal the likeness during the 10 days they guarded it.

In one case, Theta Chi members chased off someone dressed in a ninja suit.

But house members left their guardposts at 2:30 a.m. one morning, just as their contract with KTZZ expired. Before the sun rose several hours later, the likeness of "The Beav" disappeared.

Keller said the promotion for the show was almost finished anyway and that "The Beaver isn't something I really want to prosecute over."

She said she would fulfill her end of the bargain — donating a television and cash to a local charity in the fraternities' names — despite the theft.

Experts discuss future of U.S. space program

By BARBARA KRESCH
Staff Reporter

Four of the leading American experts on U.S. space policy came to Villanova April 19 to speak in the seminar, "Onward and Upward: Reasserting U.S. Leadership in Space."

During the seminar, they discussed the United States' future space activities as stated in the new National Space Policy.

The policy was released by the White House on Feb. 11 after having been approved by President Ronald Reagan on Jan. 5.

"The National Space Policy outlines a framework for the future of U.S. activities in space and reaffirms the federal government's commitment to American space leadership in an increasingly competitive environment," according to the Precis of the New American Space Policy from the Common Heritage Institute. It categorizes these activities into civil, defense and commercial policies.

The lecture was sponsored by the Common Heritage Institute as an introduction to a series of lectures and discussions about U.S. activities in space. The institute chose to sponsor this program because of the University's involvement in sapce activities.

The University has a department of astronomy and astrophysics and is actively doing research through the College of Engineering and the space shuttle experiment. Also, a Villanova University student is currently entering an astronaut training program.

John Logsdon, director of the Space Policy Institute, was the first speaker. He put the new space policy in a historical context.

He first defined space policy as a statement of the goals and the means to these goals of the space program.

The U.S. policy in 1958 originally aimed itself to leadership in space in the fields of science, through NASA, and more importantly, defense through the U.S. Department of Defense.

The program was given governmental attention when the Soviet Union became the leader in space by producing the first artificial satellite, Sputnik. After that event, President John F. Kennedy announced a new space policy that stated the goal of preeminence in all aspects of space. There had not been an updated policy until 1988.

The second speaker, Kenneth Pedersen of NASA, the writer of the new policy, spoke about it in general terms. He described the goal of the policy itself as bringing together all of the loose fragments of policies that existed and melding them into a whole and clear statement.

He described the policy in three parts. First of all, he said that the critical goal of U.S. activities in space, as the title of the lecture suggests, is to reassert U.S. leadership in space.

He said that it also emphasized a long-term vision of space activity. He felt that it corrected the previously faulty actions of the United States to start in a number of different directions, to not follow up with any of them and to change the priority of the space program in the budget each year. He felt that the policy requires the government's support of the space program by making it a constant priority in the budget.

Thirdly, the policy emphasized international cooperation with mutual benefits.

Kenneth Schwetje, Lieutenant Colonel of the U.S. Air Force's International Law Division, discussed the military and national security aspects of the policy. The goal of the policy is mainly defensive, he said.

He added that the new program involves the improving of launching mechanisms, the covering of land, sea and air forces, the surveillance of space and preparing for the use of defense tactics.

The fourth speaker was David Wright, the manager of marketing for Civil Space Programs of General Electric, who spoke about the commercial aspects of the policy.

The purpose of this aspect of the policy was to create new government and industry relations regarding space, he said. It regulates governmental influence in industry by putting the power of regulation upon the individual companies themselves.

All of the speakers agreed that the essence of the policy lies in its emphasis on U.S. leadership in space, though it does not require pre-eminence. They agreed that leadership has always been a U.S. goal, and the example was given that the Apollo missions were sent mainly for the political purpose of gaining leadership.

It was emphasized by all that long-term commitments were reached through the policy and that now the U.S. must test its perseverance and will that is needed for it to be the leader in space.

PEC report examined by V.U. community

Faculty examine recommendations accreditation process," according to Armenti. He added that it is important for the Middle States evaluation to "not only show we have evaluated the programs," but after considering comments from various parts of the University, that decisions on the recommendations be implemented.

(Continued from page 1)

He also said that the PEC report, as acted on by the Board, is the first plan in the University's rolling planning process, which is due to begin shortly. The Board's decisions in July are supposed to set the process into effect, said Armenti.

The faculty council also requested that a report consisting of all the responses to the PEC report should be published and distributed in the same manner as the PEC report was.

"Numerous faculty members believe the report to contain serious inaccuracies, omissions and instances of the selective use of data. Furthermore, they believe that the wide distribution of the report without opportunity for prior comment and correction has unfairly injured the reputations of both individuals and programs," the faculty council stated.

"It is hoped that by publishing the responses in a dignified format an atmosphere of rational discussion can be established," concluded the council.

Armenti responded by noting that the PEC had indicated that it intended to criticize ideas, not people, in its report.

He added that while he has seen letters that claim the data used by the PEC was inaccurate, he has not received any specific information about errors.

Also, he said that an atmosphere of rational discussion concerning the report is possible and is occurring in some parts of the University community, such as academic departments.

Dr. Michael J. Hones, chairperson of the University Senate's faculty affairs committee, also commented that if final decisions on programs recommended for termination are not made by September, those programs will be terminated "de facto."

"Who's going to register for a graduate program that's been recommended for termination?" Hones asked.

Faculty council Chairperson Dr. John A. Doody said Tuesday that the worst way that the University could respond to the PEC report was if the Board met in July and approved all the recommendations. There is not enough time to make the decisions that the report calls for, nor are all of the decisions the correct ones to make, said Doody.

He added, however, that it would be wrong to attack the report on methodological grounds and ignore it.

He said the best use of PEC would be to allow enough time to assemble the best responses to the report, to publish those responses and then implement the recommendations that will improve the quality of undergraduate and graduate studies at Villanova.

Brach responds

Brach said that the PEC recommendations are beneficial, "more than not." He expressed disappointment, however, that no student had been on the PEC, and added that there had been a "lack of understanding" of some student concerns.

Brach added that he agreed with the PEC's "emphasis on undergraduate education" and supported the PEC process.

Brach criticized the PEC for not addressing the issue of coed dorms, which was discussed by Dr. Arthur Shriberg in his evaluation of Student Life. He disagreed with the recommendation that quiet hours should be imposed in dormitories at 8 p.m., stating that there are already too many rules regarding student behavior in dormitories.

Administrator reacts

Cherry said last week that the PEC report should ultimately prove helpful in the planning process. He also agreed with the committee's emphasis on undergraduate education.

He added, "The justification for eliminating some of the programs are very clear," while others "are more debatable."

He stressed that the report is "by no means the final word" and is the beginning of the University's planning process.

University Senate to vote on report

(Continued from page 1)

Maurone said he expects the senators to express their concerns, recommendations and agreements with the PEC report but is not certain how the Senate will carry out its dialogue.

"We sent letters to all the subcommittees of the Senate, asking that they view the PEC report in light of their constitutional charge" and give "any responses that they think are appropriate, using that as a guideline," Maurone said.

He said that, according to the Senate Constitution, the Senate cannot comment on specific departments and programs as discussed in the PEC report.

According to the Senate Constitution, "The University Senate is restricted in its legislation to those matters ... which affect more than one college of the University.

Matters which affect only individual departments or individual colleges of the University should be determined at the departmental or collegiate level respectively, subject to the approval of the appropriate administrative officers," the constitution states.

Maurone added that he has received several responses so far and plans to read them into the minutes of today's meeting. "I think everyone should be heard and that the president [the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A.] should hear everyone's remarks concerning PEC," he explained.

Concerning the report itself, Maurone said, "It's a blockbuster. I haven't read it all yet. I've read through the introduction and the areas of my concern. In the physics department there are terminations, various rejections of proposed programs ... and I haven't really couched my personal response yet [to Driscoll].

"As far as the Senate goes, I'd just like to see a fair hearing given to the PEC report and all responses" in order to enable Driscoll and the Board of Trustees "to look at both sides," he commented.

Maurone said he also plans to read a letter from Driscoll at the Senate meeting. In the letter, Driscoll thanks the senators for the work it accomplished at the March 25 budget meeting and wishes them luck on coming to a conclusion on the PEC report.

Undergraduate writing critiqued

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

The University needs to address the "serious issue" of undergraduates' low levels of writing proficiency, recommended the Program Evaluation Committee [PEC] in its final report.

The PEC specifically stated that the University should "appoint a committee to develop specific recommendations for dealing with ... the problem of writing across the curriculum."

The PEC also recommended that "the University commit itself" to having 75 percent of all freshman English, history and religious studies courses taught by full-time faculty within five years. It also recommended that the University "hire two Ph.Ds in composition in the first year to teach and coordinate Freshman Writing."

In explaining the reasons behind the decisions, the PEC referred to an English department self-study which noted the "widespread inability of college students today to write even minimally satisfactory prose."

The self-study stated, "Unquestionably the greatest weakness of nearly every course in the curriculum of every college in the University is the failure among faculty to require even minimum standards of writing proficiency.

"There is a pervasive and extraordinary attitude among faculty in all disciplines that the responsibility for training students to write clearly and effectively rests solely with the department of English," continued the self-study.

"More than any other single factor, this attitude accounts for low writing skills among undergraduates," concluded the self-study. The PEC "concurred wholeheartedly with this assessment," according to the committee's report.

Dr. Charles L. Cherry, associate vice president for Academic Affairs, also agreed with the English department's evaluation, saying it does not make sense to view the English department as being solely responsible for undergraduate writing.

Cherry added, "Writing ... is a skill that every degreed professional should have," and said studies show that communication skills are necessary for a successful career, in most cases.

Solving problem difficult

One of the PEC members noted in the final report that the task of improving students' writing is a difficult one.

"Our students after all have been taught writing for something like 12 years when we first encounter them. If they have not profited markedly from that long apprenticeship, it is unlikely that our one or two semester 'crash course' will change anything very much," commented the member.

Dr. Sterling F. Delano, chairperson of the English department and one of the authors of the self-study assessment, agreed that the teaching of writing is difficult.

The PEC member noted that one "basic condition" for improving writing "is that the person involved have some interest which they hold deeply enough to want to be able to express it convincingly in written form ...

"They [University undergraduates] do not write well because there is nothing about which they care deeply," the member added.

Another "determinant of the ability to write well is a history of reading widely ... Unfortunately our society is more and more seduced by television and therefore oral communication," the member continued.

Delano said that one way in which the College of Arts and Sciences is trying to improve undergraduate writing is through freshman seminars, which began last fall.

Evaluation of support programs reinstatement of intercollegiate football or the construction of new sports facilities," the Hanford report noted.

(Continued from page 1)

As a result, the PEC recommended that the Athletics department create a mission statement as it relates to the philosophy and Mission Statement of the University, since "it makes no sense to keep rubbing salt in wounds that need to be healed," according to the Hanford report.

In accordance with this recommendation, the PEC advises "displaying the financial circumstances of the Athletics department as they relate to those of the University as a whole," particularly "the development of a five-year budgetary plan for the Athletics department in general and for the intercollegiate football program."

The PEC also urges the Athletics department to insure "equitable use of its facilities by all elements of the athletic program" and suggests that it continue to employ women coaches and administrators.

In regard to football, Hanford stated, "What has got to happen is to stop reliving the past ... [Villanova] must recognize first and foremost that the trustees have decided that the University is going to compete in Division IAA football.

"Every effort should now be made to 'make a go' of that decision, not to try to undercut it," Hanford asserted.

Because of these reasons, the PEC chose to recommend that "the Trustees and the President reaffirm Villanova's commitment to Division IAA football and call upon the Villanova community to lend full support to that commitment."

Development, Alumni and Public Relations

According to the report, "PEC recommends that the University Board of Trustees be enlarged to permit more lay member representation and participation."

In regard to Development, the committee suggests that the department "feature the academic side of Villanova as opposed to the athletic side" in their programs.

The PEC emphasized the importance of prioritizing and assessing needs to be funded through the Development office. "This process would include a department-by-department assessment of needs," the report stated.

Student Life

In the area of Student Life, the PEC first examined the Connelly Center, and concluded that "a separate University committee ... be created to review [its] goals and priorities." The Connelly Center was criticized because it "operates as a virtual monopoly for significant portions of the school day and school year."

One evaluator noted that "if it is truly a University resource, then the Connelly Center needs to expand its hours." Moreover, he found that some faculty, students, and administrators feel the staff is "not as cooperative as they would like."

The PEC suggests the merger of the Infirmary and the Counseling Center in order to create a "Wellness Center" and recommends that the University hire a consulting psychiatrist. Also, the committee offered the possibility of Villanova creating its own HMO [Health Management Organization].

In order to combat the current housing problem, the PEC recommends that the school "continue to move toward more additional residence hall capacity, at least until about 80 percent of the full-time undergraduate student population can be accommodated on campus." Currently, two new dormitories are under construction on south campus, while negotiations are under way for several other new dorms to be built on the west campus behind St. Mary's Hall.

The PEC urges that security be increased in the dormitories, "assuring that all people entering the dormitories have the University's permission to be there." The committee also recommends that additional female Security guards be hired for some of the residence halls for women.

In regard to the University's alcohol policy, the PEC advises the school "to be consistent in enforcing [it]." The committee also suggested that the University "utilize more alternative beverages ... [and] stay with and strengthen Jake's Place."

The PEC recommended "very strongly" against the practice of early fall rush for fraternities and sororities, which has already been prohibited.

(Photo by Shafie)
Dr. Angelo Armenti, chairperson of the Program Evaluation Committee.

Housekeeping and Maintenance

Among their findings, the PEC listed that "the campus is in a state of disrepair, classrooms and stairwells are not as clean as they should be, and Maintenance appears to be handled largely on an emergency basis.

"PEC believes that the above findings point to debilitating weakness in supervision in both Housekeeping and Maintenance," according to the report.

Thanks to all our writers for their hard work and dedication
—Noel, Dante, Jen, Sharon, Kevin

Peace and Justice Center targeted for termination

By JENNIFER REIDY
Assistant News Editor

The Program Evaluation Committee [PEC] recommended in its final report that the Center for Peace and Justice Education be dissolved and reorganized into other departments of the University.

The committee advised that the academic portion of the center be reconstituted in the philosophy department, while its nonacademic activities be placed under Campus Ministry, according to the report.

"Although admittedly anecdotal, some students claim that the PJ in Peace and Justice courses stands for 'peanut butter and jelly,' i.e., easy grades," the report stated.

"I never saw that kind of evidence in the SPET [Support Programs Evaluation Team] report, which was the initial evaluation of Peace and Justice that was submitted to the PEC. They commended Peace and Justice and recommended that it be maintained," said Dr. Barbara Wall, O.P., philosophy professor.

Dr. Angelo Armenti, dean of the University College and chairperson of the PEC, commented that the center has worthwhile activities that could be accomplished in a different way.

Armenti said that no scientific sample was taken concerning the center for the PEC's final report. He said he regrets the report's reference to Peace and Justice courses as "peanut butter and jelly."

"It surprised me that the PEC would completely reverse the recommendation of SPET, especially after reading that their reasons were 'anecdotal' for their decision," Wall explained.

Wall said that Armenti did not give the center the appropriate evaluation forms to complete that other academic programs received and these forms were not included in the final report.

"We were never consulted, never interviewed about this matter," she commented.

"On the positive side, it seems that a small group in the basement of Sullivan Hall has managed to disturb a few people who are concerned about the activities we sponsor for the purpose of raising consciousness, particularly about hunger, poverty, homelessness and apartheid, to name a few," Wall asserted.

She cited a passage from the PEC report that indicates this attitude, which states, "PEC also has great concerns about the nonacademic aspects of the current program in the Center for Peace and Justice Education, especially as they relate to political activism and controversial positions which, while perhaps entirely acceptable when presented as the belief of a person or small group of persons, would not be acceptable if presented as the official position of Villanova University."

Armenti explained that the PEC's concerns about the center were primarily accountability and supervision. He said that the controversial activities of Peace and Justice are a secondary conern and that the main reasons for the PEC's decision were organizational, not political.

Armenti explained, for instance, that the committee had concern about the idea of an academic program not being under the supervision of an academic department.

Wall quoted the American Catholic Bishops' pastoral letter on the economy in response to a question concerning the purpose of the center. "[The Church] demands a

(Continued on page 8)

V.U.'s Mission discussed

By DANTE J. SCALA
News Editor

The Program Evaluation Committee [PEC]'s final report has sparked a dispute over how the University community should interpret its "constitution," the Mission Statement.

In a debate which resembles the current controversy over the U.S. Constitution, the PEC's strict interpretation of the Mission Statement stands in opposition to the liberal view which the University Senate's faculty affairs committee has taken.

The debate is grounded in the issue of how important graduate education, research and scholarship is to the University. The PEC has said that these aspects are secondary to undergraduate education, while the faculty affairs committee argues that the University community's consensus is that "teaching and research/scholarly work are to be accorded equal importance."

PEC Chairperson and University College Dean Dr. Angelo Armenti said Wednesday that the PEC report is the first attempt to bring the University's reality into harmony with the Mission Statement.

A number of graduate programs have been recommended for termination by the PEC.

Differing interpretations

Among the faculty's arguments countering the report, the question raised about interpretation of the Mission Statement is one which questions the foundations of the PEC's evaluations.

The PEC was charged by the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, to follow the Mission Statement and Planning Assumptions.

The committee's decisions, including the recommendations it made to terminate various graduate programs, stemmed mainly from these two documents. The programs recommended for termination, however, also did have weaknesses in such areas as quality, the need for the program and the satisfaction gained from it, said Armenti.

Armenti said that mission statements are like constitutions and the PEC was bound to work within the framework established by the document, according to Driscoll's charge.

While the PEC's interpretation of the Mission Statement is correct literally, it is incorrect in a historical sense, according to the faculty affairs committee.

The issue is a question of "principle versus practice," said Dr. Michael J. Hones, chairperson of the committee, Tuesday. The concepts described in the Mission Statement have not been implemented by the University community since the document was promulgated in 1979, added Hones.

"Since its formulation, the Mission Statement has undergone a history of interpretation and application by the administration, faculty, [University] Senate and other organizations of this University," according to a statement by the faculty committee.

"One primary tenet of that consensus is that teaching and research/scholarly work are to be accorded equal importance in the formulation and retention of University programs," stated the report.

In this light, the committee "suggests" that the PEC "fundamentally" misinterpreted the Mission Statement. "Since this misinterpretation served as a directing guideline for the investigations of the PEC, the individual conclusions on particular programs may well be seriously out of accord" with what the committee believes to be the correct interpretation of the Mission Statement.

The committee did imply in its statement, however, that some of the PEC's conclusions on individual programs may be correct despite the interpretation.

(Continued on page 8)

Students rewarded for academic achievement

By MAUREEN STAPLETON
Staff Reporter

Thirty-three seniors and four juniors were inducted into the Villanova chapter of the honor society Phi Beta Kappa. Seniors included Christian Alfonsi, Janine Andrews, Joanne Caccavale, Patricia Carroll, Sean M. Carroll, Rita Ciccariello, Donna Cicirello, Claire DeLeo, Kathy Diesl, Charles Dougherty and David Echeverria.

In addition, Kathleen Engel, Tamar Fruchtman, Paul Gaudrault, Kevin Hecht, Theresa C. Jones, Katherine J. Krackeler, John Lemole, Joan London, Donna Mastrangelo, Kathleen McAveney and Joseph McGowan were also inducted.

Also, Carla Mastricelli, Guy Mullin, Catherine Mullin, David O'Toole, Maryjo Ouellenski, April Peterson, Michelle M. Shanahan, Michael Sheldon, Joseph Sixeas, Lynn C. Watts and Cathleen Whelan were added to the honor society.

Juniors who were inducted into the honor society were Patricia Brown, David Hinkle, Ronald Koerner and Beth Westerman.

Undergraduates present papers

Four Villanova undergraduates presented papers at the Second National Conference on Undergraduate Research held at the University of North Carolina, Asheville, from April 21 to April 23.

Participating Villanova students were Greg Castano, who presented "The Decline of Catholicism in France"; Claire DeLeo, who presented "Harvesting Effects on the Morphometric Measurements of Two Species of African Ungulates;" Colleen Downes, who presented "The Dual Commitment of Union Members to their Unions and Employing Organizations;" and Kristin Switala, who presented "The Question of Creativity in Foucault's Notion of Produced Individuals."

Abstracts of the papers by DeLeo and Switala were selected for publication in the conference proceedings.

Wnuk selected as finalist

Christine Wnuk has been selected as a finalist in the James A. Finnegan Fellowship Foundation. Wnuk was honored at the foundation's annual awards luncheon at the Governor's home in Harrisburg. She will now have a 10-week summer internship in a state government agency.

Science students awarded

The National Science Foundation awarded Sean Carroll a National Science Foundation Graduate Fellowship. Carroll will be pursuing graduate work at Harvard University in astronomy.

Mary Frances McAleer was awarded honorable mention by the foundation. Currently, she is a senior bachelor of science, honors major.

Sigma Xi announces new members

The Villanova University Sigma Xi Club recently announced its full and associate members of the chapter. Full members are recognized for "noteworthy achievement as an original investigator in a field of pure or applied science." Associate members are honored for their achievement, through initial research, in a field of pure or applied science.

Twelve members of the Villanova faculty were made full members. This group included Moeness G. Amin, Michael F. Brown, Jose R. de la Vega, John A. Doherty, Robert M. Giuliano, Peter N. Keliher, Stephen Konyk, John N. Majerus, William E. Mattis, Purusottam Mookerjee, John E. Mulholland and Peter G. von Glahn.

The newly elected associate members of Sigma Xi are Sean M. Carroll, Mark G. Caprara, Claire L. DeLeo, Elayne C. Griffin, Catherine R. Hahn and George B. Stroup. Other new members are Tarak D. Mody, Melanie D. Rittenhouse, Thomas F. Kelly, John D. DiLullo, Kai D. Feng, Mary F. McAleer, Mary E. O'Donnell, Anthony M. Pisciotti, Ravindra P. Tetambe and Kenneth J. DeCarlo.

Educational Opportunities

Compiled by Maureen Stapleton

Scholarship

Every year Villanova is invited to nominate graduating seniors for Rhodes, Marshall and Fulbright Scholarships. The Rhodes and Marshall Scholarships provide two years of study in England, and the Fulbright provides an opportunity to undertake independent projects in most non-Soviet bloc countries.

On May 3, at 9:30 a.m. in Mendel Hall, Room 117, there will be an informational meeting for all interested juniors.

Nominations will also be made for up to three sophomores for the Harry S. Truman Scholarship. The scholarship provides up to $7,500 for four years of study to those students with a demonstratable commitment to a career in public service. There will be an informational meeting for all interested freshmen, May 3, at 10:30 a.m. in Mendel Hall, Room 117.

The National Black MBA Association [NBMBAA] is now accepting applications for its 1988 National Scholarship Program.

The scholarship program was initiated in 1984 to award deserving minority students in a graduate business or management curriculum. In 1988, the NBMBAA will award at least six scholarships, totaling $18,000.

To qualify, students must be enrolled in a full-time graduate business of management program in the fall of 1988 or winter of 1989.

To receive an application, contact: The National Black MBA Association, c/o 1988 Scholarships, 111 E. Wacker Drive, Suite 600, Chicago, Ill. 60601.

Summer course

The department of classical studies announced a six-week accelerated course in Elementary Latin to be offered this summer. The course will count as six undergraduate credits and will be offered on Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 12 p.m. Dr. Effie Coughanowr will be teaching the course.

Exposure to Latin phonology, vocabulary, snytax and style will improve students' English language abilities and provide a foundation for other foreign language study. There are tuition scholarships available for qualified applicants. For more information call (215) 645-4796 or (215) 645-4780.

Convention

Hundreds of young people and students from around the country will gather at the third National Convention of the Young Communist League, U.S.A. The convention will take place from June 17-19 at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst.

The convention will include discussions, workshops and a "rich cultural program." Discussions will focus on the need to abolish nuclear weapons, defeating Reaganism in the 1988 elections, the fight against the rule in racist violence, youth unemployment and student rights. The convention will be held under the theme, "Turning Our Country Around."

Employment

Temporary service companies are actively looking for college students for summer employment.

Temporary services allow for a flexible schedule and also pay students well.

If you are interested in working for a temporary service firm in the area, contact CDI Temporary Services, 1600 Market Street, Suite 1904, Philadelphia, Pa. 19103, (215) 569-2490.

Course abroad

The Critical Studies Program in Paris, in cooperation with the University of Paris III, focuses on current French theoretical trends in literature and film studies.

Courses are offered both at the undergraduate and graduate levels, during the fall or spring semesters or for a full year. There is a minimum two year college-level French requirement for fall semester and academic year students, three years for spring students. Applicants must also have a minimum of two courses in either film studies, literary criticism or communications.

For more information, contact the Council on International Educational Exchange, Academic Programs Department, 205 East 42nd St., New York, N.Y. 10017.

Conflict and change mark a "banner" year

(Continued from page 1)

increase of over 10 percent.

Budget passes

Despite student protest, the proposed budget was approved by the University Senate by a vote of 17-16. Two student senators were the only two absent without excuse, while four other senators left early and one was excused.

The budget totals $110 million and is "the highest budget we've ever had," according to a comment by Alvin A. Clay, chairman of the Senate budget committee and dean of the College of Commerce and Finance. Aside from the tuition increase of over 10 percent, the budget includes a 4 percent room and board increase, an 8 percent faculty salary increase and a 6 percent staff salary increase.

On-campus plans

Plans to rezone and develop west campus, which began with a Nov. 5 meeting between University officials and Radnor Township residents, have progressed. The University is currently in the process of having the approximately 65-acre area rezoned from residential use to institutional use, according to the Rev. Robert J. Martin, O.S.A., assistant to the president.

Groundbreaking for the south campus dorm project finally took place the week of March 25, after being predicted to start in late fall 1987 by Martin in a Sept. 18 article. Estimated completion date is summer 1989.

In November, Driscoll reviewed a recommendation to build a new infirmary within the next two years. No decision on this recommendation and related plans has been made as of yet.

However, plans are proceeding on the renovation of the Main Chapel. The entire restoration process will take approximately five years, said the Rev. Shawn T. Tracy, O.S.A., director of Campus Ministry, in an Oct. 30 Villanovan article.

Vandalism

Campus vandalism was lower this fall than the last until Homecoming, according to the Rev. Martin Smith, O.S.A., assistant director of Residence Life for environmental management. While a campus-wide contest to lessen vandalism was implemented by Residence Life, approximately $5,000 worth of damage was wreaked during the victory celebration after the Wildcats' March 24 victory over Kentucky in the NCAA basketball tournament.

An additional estimated $75,000 worth of damage is the result of the damaging of "The Awakening," a modern sculpture donated in 1985 to Villanova by its artist, Jay Dugan.

New grading system

Driscoll approved a new grading system that includes "minus" grades. His decision was announced at the Feb. 19 Senate meeting. The system will not be implemented until the computer system which holds student records is converted. The conversion will take at least a year.

National reflection on Greek organizations

The Feb. 12 death of James Callahan, a Rutgers University freshman associate member of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, by alcohol poisoning, prompted national media reflection and coverage of Greek organizations. The Villanovan's own Feb. 19 editorial on the Callahan incident, which advocated the abolishment of the Greek system, provoked much controversy and response in the following issue.

In fall 1987, Delta Kappa Epsilon's [DKE] fraternity charter was suspended for three years by University administration. Currently, Sigma Nu fraternity was put on indefinite probation by its national office.

Wins

The Oct. 26 issue of U.S. News and World Report released a survey of the nation's college presidents which rated Villanova University the best comprehensive college in the East for the second year running.

The Wildcats made it to the final eight in the NCAA men's basketball tournament March 24, by defeating Kentucky.

The 1987 edition of the Belle Air was ranked in the top 5 percent of college yearbooks nationwide by the Columbia Scholastic Press of Columbia University. The yearbook finished in first place and was awarded a Medalist Certificate.

The Villanovan was awarded First Place with Special Merit by the American Scholastic Press Association for the sixth year running. It was also cited for its sports coverage and editorial writing.

Coed Dorms

On Feb. 19, Student Government submitted to the University Senate a report compiled to address the issue of coed dorms at Villanova.

The Senate recommended that Driscoll charge the office of Student Life to study the issue further.

Graduation

Graduation ceremonies for the class of 1988 will be divided this year so they can be held indoors as a precautionary measure in case of rain. The decision has prompted protest from students in the course of the year.

(Photo by Castano)

Demonstrators counter a protest against Attorney General Edwin Meese before he spoke at a banquet celebrating the Constitution in November.

Peace and Justice

(Continued from page 7)

compassionate vision that enables it to see things from the side of the poor and powerless and to assess lifestyle, policies and social institutions in terms of their impact on the poor," it read.

"The Peace and Justice Center helps maintain this vision at Villanova," Wall explained.

Wall commented that there have been concerns about space within the University, and said that she takes offense to the PEC's statement that the commitment of space to the center is "excessive and wasteful," according to the report.

"Our space is student space, not faculty space, for it is designated as residential by the University. Our staff works on a purely volunteer basis, and the time we take out to teach these courses or partake in these activities is our own free time," she noted.

When asked if the center will take action against this recommendation, Wall responded that the staff has currently requested from Armenti the evidence that the PEC used to determine its decision.

"I had hoped the process of the PEC would be more respectful of people and their programs and the institution at large," Wall concluded.

Mission Statement

(Continued on page 7)

Hones made a connection between a robust view of research and scholarship with a natural flourishing of graduate education.

Armenti countered that the committee's interpretation of the role of research and scholarship, as well as the view described in the faculty handbook, was formulated before the Mission Statement's promulgation. The PEC has indicated that most of the graduate programs had begun before the promulgation.

"In a very real sense, the PEC report was the first time the University looked at [its] activities ... in compliance with the stated Mission," said Armenti.

Armenti noted that the PEC expressed sympathy to the "many faculty" who feel that graduate study should be increased. Thus, it recommended "that the Board of Trustee reevaluate the roles of research, scholarly work and graduate study when the Mission Statement is next reviewed for possible revision."

"Depending on how the Board [of Trustees] decides on the PEC recommendations in July, that, to some extent, will answer the question whether graduate programs will be given greater emphasis in the future," said Armenti.

Good luck

Michelle and Siobhan!

We'll miss you!

Love,
Toots and Scante

Senior job market bright

By CAROLYN R. MIRABILE and KATIE REICHNER
Staff Reporters

"There is a big job market available for seniors in many different fields," according to on-campus recruiting coordinator Mary Lou Cubbage.

At the Career Development Center [CDC], located in Corr Hall, there are applications available from about 135 companies who have job openings. CDC gets requests from companies who are looking for students with specific qualifications. Students who meet the criteria can submit a resume.

Although many companies may call the CDC to request applicants, the CDC also informs companies on availability of students. The CDC also gets requests from alumni.

"Alumni are a great source for employment opportunities. Many former graduates who are working will contact the center because they like to hire Villanova graduates," said Judy H. Madsen, career counselor.

Cubbage added, "Alumni will help the students through an interview, and they will act as a mentor if they are hired."

Students who do not find a job before they graduate can still use the center's facilities. Cubbage commented, "If a company calls us over the summer with a job opening, we can look through the resumes and call students who have the right credentials." Students who want to change jobs later can also use the center's materials to find another job.

Students who are interested in finding a job should come in during their freshman year to explore different options. Madsen said, "Usually students come in during their sophomore year because that's when they have to declare a major, and they want to start looking in a specific area."

The Job Club at the CDC will hold a seminar May 23 to 27. Students will be able to assess their skills in order to find a job in which they can succeed. The center will also videotape a practice interview and teach resume skills and career planning ideas which are beneficial to job searching.

Every two years the CDC holds a job fair. About 50 companies participated in last year's fair. The next fair will be held in fall 1989.

The CDC also offers graduate testing materials and keeps letters of recommendation on file. Cubbage said, "We think students should look into graduate studies and job opportunities because they may not know if they want to go to full-time graduate school or part-time while they work."

Graduate school as an option

Results from an annual survey of Villanova graduates have recently been received, according to Dr. Robert D. Stokes, director of the CDC.

The survey provides information on the number of graduates who are employed, attending graduate school, traveling, or whose plans have not yet been finalized.

Out of 1,800 undergraduate students in Villanova's class of 1987, 1,100 participated in the survey, said Stokes.

According to the survey, 24.8 percent of engineering majors, 12.7 percent of commerce and finance majors, 32.3 percent of arts and science majors and 15.6 percent of University College students have undertaken post-undergraduate education.

This includes those people who are employed both full-time and part-time while attending graduate school.

Stokes commented that during a strong job market period, the number of people entering graduate school tends to be lower than during a weak job market period.

Needs evaluated

(Continued from page 3)

different things because everybody wants more [office] space but whether they need it or not requires a more objective look. It was time for Villanova to take that very broad look at its program needs."

The Administrative Planning Committee of the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, and his assistants, is working with Eccleston in developing the program of requirements, according to Eccleston.

The funding cost of the master plan is not known yet because the needs for the plan have not yet been determined. Eccleston said that the cost will "depend on the extent of the physical facilities that are needed, both new and renovation of existing [facilities]."

The Covenant III fund-raising project will provide the "main portion of the funding," plus possibly a bond issue, according to Eccleston.

He added that he did not think it would be possible to get any governmental sources of funds, although this option is being investigated.

Other plans include a "building that would house classrooms and faculty offices," possibly behind Kennedy Hall.

Possible plans for Alumni and Corr halls include converting them to faculty or administration office buildings.

Concerning a new health care facility, Driscoll established a committee to examine the health care needs of students, which submitted a recommendation that "the psychological and physical health needs of students be housed together under one organization" and in one building, possibly behind Kennedy Hall, according to Eccleston.

Eccleston added that the current infirmary, Middleton Hall, has "outlived its usefulness" for health care and cited the example of beds for patients being located on the second floor, although patients might be using crutches.

Another presidential committee looked at the construction of engineering and science laboratories in Mendel Hall. Although there has been no final recommendation yet by this committee, possibilities include adding a new wing onto Mendel Hall or an entire new building for laboratory purposes, according to Eccleston.

Other plans include creating more dining and kitchen space in Connelly Center and also adding meeting rooms to it.

THE UNION PRESENTS . . .

THIS WEEK

Campus Films

"THE MOST WELCOME SURPRISE OF THE SUMMER." —Michael Medved, SNEAK PREVIEWS

He's got three hits on the charts.
A million screaming fans.
A girl he loves named Donna.
A dream house he bought for his mom.
And he's only 17.

LA BAMBA
An American Success Story.

April 28 & 29
6:30 p.m. and 9 p.m.
C.C. CINEMA TICKETS $2

Special Showing!

SUNDAY
MAY 1
3 p.m. 5:30 p.m.
8 p.m.
C.C. CINEMA

R · DOLBY STEREO · A PARAMOUNT PICTURE · TM & Copyright © 1987 by Paramount Pictures Corporation. All Rights Reserved.

TICKETS $2

CONGRATULATIONS SENIORS!

BETH BILLY LISA
CRAIG KAREN PETE
ERNIE JOHN TONY
JILL KIM DAVE
STEVE JILL AVA

IT WON'T BE THE SAME WITHOUT YOU!
GOOD LUCK!

COUPON GOOD FOR UNLIMITED VISITS

SENIOR WEEK 1988

FRIDAY, MAY 13
STUDENT-FACULTY GOLF OUTING for further information please contact the Dean of Students Office, 2nd Floor Dougherty Hall 645-4200

"MEET AT THE BEACH!"
meet fellow seniors at Island Beach State Park - NJ
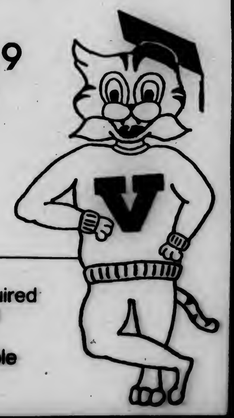
for a day of fun in the sun!
Directions available at CC ticket office or Union office

SUNDAY, MAY 15
SENIOR MASS
6 p.m. Main Chapel
co-sponsored by Campus Ministry



MONDAY, MAY 16
'NOVA NIGHT AT FLANAGAN'S
2nd & South Sts., Phila., PA
tickets available at the door

Tickets available CC ticket office
* Proceeds to benefit Senior gift to V.U.

TUESDAY, MAY 17
SENIOR PICNIC featuring "Blue Period"
12 p.m. to approximately 6 p.m. Mendel Field
$10 ticket includes: t-shirt, cup, food, beverages, games!
ALL TICKETS MUST BE PRE-PURCHASED — NONE SOLD ON SITE — TICKETS REQUIRED FOR ADMISSION
* RAINDATE: WED., MAY 18 *

WEDNESDAY, MAY 18
OUTDOOR MOVIE "BACK TO SCHOOL"
9 p.m. Kennedy Plaza
—FREE—

THURSDAY, MAY 19
FINAL DAYS PARTY AT POPCORN'S
King of Prussia
5-9 p.m. $5 cover

* All tixs in CC tix office
* Proof of 21 & valid V.U. I.D. required for all ticket purchases and for all events.
* Limited number of tickets available
* NO REFUNDS

the Villanovan

201 Dougherty Hall
Villanova University
Villanova, Pa. 19085

Johanna C. Sharp
Editor in Chief

Janet Diefenbach
Managing Editor

Natalie McKenna
Associate Editor

Seriously consider PEC report

Self-evaluation is the most difficult form of criticism. While it is easy to evaluate others objectively, it is seldom easy to recognize one's own faults and weaknesses. The task of self-evaluation snowballs when members of a large institution attempt the job. The Program Evaluation Committee [PEC] should be applauded for its efforts to improve undergraduate and graduate, academic and non-academic, programs at Villanova. However, the PEC should not be looked upon as infallible, but rather as a basis upon which the University should evaluate itself.

The PEC made many important observations about student life and academics. In particular, the recommendation to upgrade services for students and increase hours in the Connelly Center are commendable and necessary. The suggestion to hold early semester book sales in Butler Annex to alleviate lines in the University Shop should be implemented next semester.

The PEC saw the need to improve the low proficiency in undergraduate writing and for putting more full-time teachers in freshman classes. We applaud the PEC for recommending an upgrade in the intellectual climate on campus.

It is also commendable that the PEC wants to emphasis quality instead of quantity in Villanova's graduate programs. Serious discussion must take place about the academic issues raised by the PEC including the termination of a number of graduate programs and the rejection of four proposed graduate programs.

While the PEC has made a number of very good recommendations, it has missed the mark in a few areas.

The recommendation to terminate the Center for Peace and Justice shows a lack of consideration and insight into the center's true mission and value. The center is one of the few outlets students and faculty have to combat social problems, protest and create community awareness of today's issues. The center is a superb academic tool for the University for it facilitates new, liberal thought in the minds of many students. Moreover, it is an excellent spiritual tool for it fights for the rights of the poor and powerless. What kind of a Catholic university would discourage this?

The PEC recommendation of continuing Division IAA football fails to consider the University as a whole. Just because the Board of Trustees have supposedly "decided the University is going to compete in football' is no reason for the PEC to support football. The recommendation failed to mention the $1.2 million loss the program is expecting next year. Perhaps some of this money could be utizlied in more profitable ways such as financial aid.

In regard to the recommendation about Villanova's alcohol policy, the PEC fails to address tailgating. They mention that Villanova is inconsistent in enforcing its alcohol policy, yet only weakly encourage more social life on campus.

The PEC completely skirted the issue of coeducational residence halls, a suggestion highly recommended in Arthur Shriberg's report.

The recommendations about Villanova Security were weak and severely lacking substance. Why was the personality and style of Chief Rowan Kelly, director of Security, overlooked in the final PEC report, after an earlier PEC report concluded that they were at the core of the problems in Student Life and Security relations.

The PEC report is out. The recommendations, suggestions for and against programs are made. We hope the University will use this report as a method of constructive self-evaluation. We cannot criticize others until we can objectively look at our own weaknesses.

Letters to the Editor

Respect Villanova's campus

To the Editor:

Imagine Villanova in the springtime — rolling green lawns, blooming dogwood trees and forsythia bushes, gardens of daffodils and tulips, stately old buildings and students enjoying it all.

Now take a closer look at this pretty picture — toilet paper grows along with the leaves on the trees, crumpled newspapers litter the green fields, bottles and cans clutter the flower beds and the buildings, old and new, are dirtied with unnecessary vandalism, but the students still seem to be enjoying all of it.

Most of us spend the greater part of every day on campus. Why is it that we have allowed the vandalism and littering to become so ordinary that the sloppiness of our school does not even bother us anymore?

Every week, thousands of dollars are spent, fixing things that students have purposely broken, and cleaning up the messes we have thoughtlessly created.

The destruction and damage evident in the quad and everywhere else on Saturday mornings says a lot of negative things about the pride we take in Villanova. We have a reputation as a group of students who really take pride in their school, but our treatment of the campus belies that image.

Since warm weather is just around the corner, and we will all be spending more time outside, let us all make a resolution to start keeping this campus clean.

It is not too difficult to throw out your trash after lunch on the wall or to pick up the papers that are piling up at your feet or to put your junk mail in a trash can or to reconsider covering walls with yogurt and overripe oranges.

Now is the time to show our "Wildcat pride" by making Villanova look its very best this spring.

Marybeth G. Donahue
Class of 1989
Villanova Vandalism Committee

Closkey advocates speak

To the Editor:

We are disgusted with the way the election was handled this year, and we believe there is no reason Sean Closkey should not be president right now.

After being informed of the allegations against both candidates we can not understand why Closkey was slighted from this office when it is clear that votes were impounded because of Terise Fusco's actions.

Not only was she seen campaigning illegally in Bartley, which the Elections Commission chose to ignore, but also admitted to discarding over 1,000 papers.

We have not heard such charges against Closkey. The only charge against Closkey was his distribution of the election addition of the Villanovan, which you, the Election Commission, condoned. This was in no way campaign material, and we feel that this was just an excuse you used to keep Closkey out of office.

For these reasons we beg Closkey to run again next year because we would be honored to have him represent the student body in the position he rightfully deserves.

Linda Jordan
Mark Farley
Barbara Sinesing
Dan Connolly
Janet Diefenbach
Class of 1989

EDITORS
News: Noel E. Falco, Dante J. Scala
Features: R. Michael Bullotta, Susan E. Corcoran
Entertainment: Kathryn Quigley
Sports: John Ricco, Doug Scancarella

ASSISTANT EDITORS
News: Kevin C. Heil, Jennifer Reidy, Sharon A. Waters
Features: Jacqueline Gentile
Entertainment: Allen Ambrosino, Jeff Gillies
Sports: Jim Bowman, John F. Swift
Managing Editor: Andrea LoCascio

Layout Director: Eileen McGinley
Art Editor: Andrew Bullion
Interns: Cynthia B. Bosnian, Kathleen Reichner
Photography: Dana Shafie
Greek Page: Jill DeForte, Steve DelDuco
Advertising Director: Jim Duffy
Subscriptions/Billing: Pam Salter
F.Y.I. Coordinator: Collette Mitchell
Personals/Classified: Paul Iacovoni
Advisor: June W. Lytel-Murphy

Staff: Richard Abraham, Michael Aimette, Christine E. Atkins, John Baker, Karla Beckner, Tom Brugger, Monica Byrne, Diane P. Carman, Bill Carr, Russ Ceccola, Mary E. Charest, John Chepega, Diane A. Cilione, Andrea Cinelli, Joanne L. Conrad, Wayne Creskill, Jim Crossan, Tim Daniels, Joe DeFulvio, Michael Denison, G.J. Donnelly, Diane Dragonette, Bob Duggan, Chris Elgen, Kristen Fallan, Paul Fratamico, Debbie Gross, Kevin A. Hecht, Karen Iovino, Luci Jankowski, Michael Jones, Theresa Jones, Bridget Kellecher, Terry Kelly, Steve Kirsch, Barbara Kresch, Irene V. Langran, Jackie Lanza, Andrew Mathis, Dave Maylish, Elliott McEldowney, Joe McGowan, Carolyn Mirabile, Steve Montresor, Coleen Moore, Dan Moriarty, Sharon Neubauer, Mary O'Neill, Stephen Powers, Dana Rao, Siobhan Roder, Kristine Ryan, Stephen J. Schlager, Michelle Shanahan, Tara Siligato, Amy Spencer, Maureen Stapleton, Laura Stevens, Elana Rose Starr, Amgad Subourgi, T. Patton Trimble.

The writing, articles, lay-out, pictures and format are the responsibility of the Editor and the Editorial Board and do not necessarily represent the view of the administration, faculty and students unless specifically stated. The University subscribes to the principle of responsible freedom of expression for our student editors.

The Villanovan is published Fridays, 10 issues a semester. Circulation: 8,500. Subscriptions are available at $17.50 per year. For advertising information contact the office 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays, 215-645-7207.

The Villanovan reserves the right to refuse any ad insertions due to questionable content and space limitations. The deadline to place advertising is 12 p.m. the Tuesday prior to publication.

The Villanovan is the newspaper of record for Villanova University.

Op-ed

Election Commission critiqued

By STEPHEN FLANAGAN

The final decision of the Election Commission is severely flawed. In its sincere attempt to rectify the controversy which arose on April 12 during Student Government elections, the commission may have exacerbated the situation by taking the wrong course of action.

First of all, the student vote count should have been published given that there was no evidence or even accusations of voter fraud. Serious allegations of fraud at the polling place, which prove to have some merit, should be the only reason for a vote count to be withheld.

This is not to suggest that the numerical victor should take office if he or she has admittedly committed a breach of ethics that should bar him or her from that office.

It is obvious that that is what has occurred in this election. But that is a different question that should have been dealt with separately from the actual vote count. The voters have a right to know the results of the poll; anything less is disenfranchisement.

A second aspect of the Commission's decision that is objectionable can be found in the first whereas of their official statement (Villanovan April 22, page 7) regarding the Villanovan's "controversial election supplement."

The article which caused such consternation was an editorial piece that was clearly identified as such which the commission statement holds contained "material of questional validity that may have unjustly affected the electoral process."

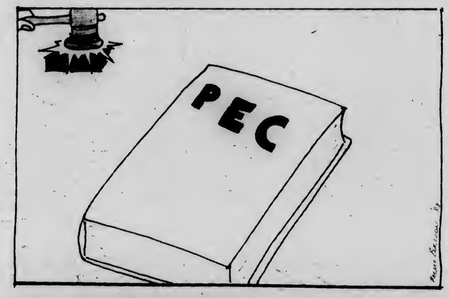
Of course the editorial raised questions; it can even be considered "questionable." But that is precisely what the opinions of the editors of a publication should be. Anybody who would automatically believe what they read in the newspaper, especially what is on the editorial page is a fool. While the editorial was clearly very negative toward vice president Terise Fusco, the editors of a paper are within their rights to take such stands.

It is true the Villanovan could have asked for a rebuttal from the Fusco campaign prior to publishing, but most would agree that it has to remain the perogative of the Villanovan (or any newspaper) whether or not to do so. The fact that the Villanovan choose not to seek a reply from Fusco left it up to its readers to decide whether or not their's was a fair assessment of the candidate.

I do not believe it should be in the Election Commission's domain to decide whether the editorial content of the newspaper is just or unjust. That determination belongs to the reader.

The Commission's actions regarding Fusco, who according to the report "personally disposed of approximately eight hundred supplements" was too lenient. She clearly should not be allowed on the ballot next year. The sad part is that maybe if the student voters had been given all the information the penalty may not be so lenient after all. The reason being that one could speculate that Fusco won the vote count and, if it were not for this transgression, would not be president. If she did not win there is no reason that candidate Sean Closkey should now assume the office of Student Government President.

For those that would quickly dismiss what Fusco did as even somewhat justified, imagine this: What would the reaction of the Villanova community be if the Rev. John M. Driscoll, O.S.A., University president, ordered the Maintenance Department to dispose of an issue of the Villanovan on the morning of its publication because it said negative things about him [even what he viewed as slanderous things]?



The resulting demonstrations would be phenomenal. It would not only include students, but faculty and even some administrators. The local and national press would be here and our president would be defamed as a close-minded dictator who suppresses the free flow of information at an institution of higher learning. What Fusco did was quite simply wrong and she should acknowledge it as such.

The Election Commission report cited candidate Closkey's use of the Villanovan election supplement to lure voters as also being unfair. This is simply ridiculous. During Phil Brach's campaign for president I personally cut clippings from all the newspapers Phil had been interviewed in, quoted by or even metnioned and used them to go around and tell student voters that "Phil Brach's work for students is part of the public record." Twenty-seven articles were from the Villanovan, four of those were editorials in which Phil's work was mentioned very favorably and a fifth editorial was an endorsement of Phil for president by the Villanovan. This action by me was completely appropriate, because I was discussing Brach's public record of service to students.

And finally citing the Villanovan staff for unfairness because they distributed their newspapers after candidate Fusco admitted to them that she had thrown many in the garbage can only be seen as absurd. They were merely protecting the integrity of their circulation which is completely understandable given the circumstances.

It was the desire of the Election Commission to "send a clear message regarding the importance of ethical behavior in all facets of Villanova life." But the fear is that the message is not clear enough because all the facts in this case were not revealed. The lack of public candor on this incident by the commission stifles the debate on what should be expected of future candidates and what actually occurred in this instance. The commission report was totally ambiguous, it pointed the finger at everyone and penalized no one except the voter who showed up at the polls.

Steve Flanagan is presently a graduate student, was formerly chairman of the student caucus of the University Senate, and was co-manager of Joe Allman's presidential campaign in 1986.

Professor evaluates PEC report, defends program

By JOSEPH R. DES JARDINS

Imagine reading a widely circulated newspaper, finding yourself slandered in it, and then discovering that with this issue the newspaper will go out of existence. I have recently experienced a similar situation in reading the Program Evaluation Committee (PEC) evaluation of the Center for Peace and Justice Education.

My colleagues and I will, of course, respond to the specifics of the PEC report at the proper time and in the proper forum. Like everyone criticized by PEC, we expect to be — and should be — judged on the merits of our program. We are confident of the results.

However, my immediate concern is to address publicly the woefully inadequate and inappropriate methodology adopted by the PEC. I suggest that by studying their procedures we can learn something about why their report has met so much resistence.

In this regard, it will be interesting to contrast the PEC's approach with that of the American bishops in writing their recent pastoral letters.

In writing their pastoral letters on the arms race, the American economy and women, the bishops were a model of inclusiveness, openness and respect for their audience.

The bishops held public hearings, confronting friends and foes alike, publicly issued early drafts, requested criticisms to these drafts and revised their document accordingly.

If only the PEC shared the bishops' conviction that truth and fairness are best served by procedures that are public, open and respectful.

Compared to the bishops, the PEC proceeded in a secretive, authoritarian and autocratic manner.

For example, to the best of my knowledge the PEC held no public hearings. I know for certain that no member of the PEC ever spoke to any member of the staff of the Center for Peace and Justice.

Had they done so, perhaps the PEC could have avoided the embarrassment of having to rely upon "admittedly anecdotal" evidence and based their evaluation upon the facts instead.

Had they done so, perhaps further embarrassing mistakes could have been avoided. For example, the PEC recommends that the philosophy department curriculum committee "take full responsibility" for the academic content and integrity of all peace and justice courses."

Since I am the chairman of that committee, I would have been happy to assure the PEC that Peace and Justice insists on the same academic standards as the philosophy department.

Had we been asked, we also would have been happy to supply the PEC with copies of our course syllabi and exams, as well as student-course evaluations — both college-wide evaluations and those developed as part of our own on-going program evaluation.

Since the PEC did not have this information it is not surprising to find their conclusion based upon hearsay, rumor and slanderous "anecdotes."

Apparently, the PEC also adopted as an operating procedure a rule by which specific members of the committee were excluded from the discussion of a program, if they missed the initial meeting at which the program was discussed.

As a result, as we understand it, three of the four members of the arts college were excluded from full participation in the evaluation of peace and justice.

So much for the claim on page B-3 that "PEC acted in good faith in all its deliberations, and attempted at all times to be fair, impartial and totally faithful to its charge."

Had the PEC been more open to its own members, perhaps someone would have explained to the committee the difference between philosophy and the interdisciplinary peace and justice courses, and between Campus Ministry and Student Life. But, the PEC held to its exclusionary principle and as a result its conclusions are uninformed and biased.

I am also troubled by the fact that the PEC decided to visit the center's offices one evening after the staff had left for the night (apparently the committee's only "field trip").

Why not visit while we were in the offices? What is the relationship between this unusual visit and the PEC's judgment that the "current commitment of space to CPJE [is] excessive and wasteful." One wonders which came first, the visit or the judgment?

Finally, the PEC should be ashamed of its unwillingness to take responsibility for its report. Among the self-congratulatory comments in the opening sections, we are told that "It is the Committee's Report," "no votes were ever taken," and the "individual words, phrases, sections, and recommendations" do not "necessarily reflect the views in whole or in part of the individual members."

Why no votes? Why no minority report? Add to this the fact that the committee conveniently goes out of existence after widely circulating its report and you have a report without accountability.

Imagine our outrage as Catholics if the bishops and written and issued their pastoral letters in a similar manner.

How should the Villanova community react to the PEC? I think that we should learn a lesson about decision-making from their errors.

There was a time, unfortunately not yet in the past, in which decisions at Villanova were made in secret by small groups protected from accountability.

I suggest that this style of decision-making is inappropriate in any community, but it is especially out of place in a Catholic community. It is too bad that the PEC ignored the model provided by the U.S. bishops.

Dr. Joseph R. Des Jardins is an assistant professor in the department of philosophy.

Letters to the Editor

'Pippin' review questioned

To the Editor:

We were shocked and greatly disappointed by the review of "Pippin" in your April 22 issue. While no artist enjoys having her or his work disparaged, it is particularly frustrating when the attack is both carelessly written and characterized by the kind of ignorance and insensitivity displayed in this review.

To criticize a performer for being "only a minor character" or for "jokes that were not funny" grossly muddles the distinction between the play "Pippin" and Villanova Theatre's production of it; to state that "most of the people in the audience were drained of their energy after about one and a half hours" is blatantly presumptuous at the very least; to suggest cutting 45 minutes from a compact show that runs just over two hours (including intermission) borders on the absurd.

As performers, we are certainly accustomed to criticism in the press. It is a necessary part of the business, and one should never expect unqualified praise for a less-than-praiseworthy effort.

However, we would ask that in the future the Villanovan not assign reviewers so casually, without recognizing the responsibility inherent in judging the collective effort of several dozen artists.

Instead, we would suggest that someone be sent who actually has some knowledge of the theatre, who cares about it, for whom going to a performance is in itself an experience to be welcomed and not simply "tolerated."

The cast and crew of "Pippin"

Change attitudes

To the Editor:

A recent series of events has embittered me to my fellow students and classmates.

First, the destruction of the "Awakening" statue proved the mindless destructive tendencies of more than a few students on campus. While it has yet to be proven that the vandals were students, the act coincided with the loss of a basketball game.

If these people had ever created anything of value during their pathetic lives, they would respect the creations of others. Instead, they are only motivated by hatred and violence.

Second, the sale of Senior Dinner Dance tickets was a zoo. My friends and I began waiting in line at 8 a.m. in Connelly Center, about sixtieth in line.

Quite a few of my classmates considered it below their social status to wait in line with myself and the other peasants.

Subsequently, they amassed at the front of the line as they strolled down the stairs at 9:30 a.m. I received the 130th ticket at 10:30 a.m. while my friends, caught amid the crowd, received tickets in the 300s at nearly 12:30 p.m.

Third, while I danced during the dinner dance, someone stole my tuxedo jacket off the back of my chair. Needless to say, I was mad as hell.

With my date's keys and license in the pocket, a jacket taken by mistake would soon be discovered. The jacket has not been returned.

Who do you people think you are? You have no respect for public or private property and apparently enjoy stepping on people every chance you get.

Congratulations Villanova, you have gotten me angry, a task not easily accomplished. I am left with some splendid memories as I leave this fine Catholic (?) institution.

Perhaps the Admissions Office should change their policy and start admitting students with a Christian attitude. But then again, why change now?

Vincent J. Donohue
Class of 1988

Do not stereotype

To the Editor:

I would like to bring to the attention of the administration and students a problem that needs to be addressed now. The problem that I am referring to is the lack of knowledge about black students that is rampant among the white population here at Villanova.

There seem to be many misconceptions and uninformed opinions about black students. For example, I have heard it implied that we are all either here on athletic scholarships, or that we are all so poor that we have simply been given a free ride by Villanova University.

Granted, there are some black students who are here due to their athletic abilities, just as there are some white students here due to their athletic abilities.

However, there exists an even greater number of black students here who have worked very hard throughout their high school careers in order to be accepted into Villanova.

It is almost a given that the average black student feels as though he has to work twice as hard as the average white student in order to prove that he can "make the grade." This feeling is justified by the fact that there is a subtle tension throughout this campus that is constantly felt by blacks.

We, as black students, are always making an effort to be accepted by our fellow white students. If this effort continues to be one-sided, we will never progress.

I realize that this problem cannot be solved overnight. However, I sincerely hope that I have succeeded in raising the awareness of the student body and of the administration, and that everyone on this campus will immediately make efforts to improve student relations and to unify Villanova University as a whole.

Valerie R. Bass
Class of 1991

Review criticized

To the Editor:

As both a news writer for the Villanovan and a member of the stage crew of "Pippin," I had the rare experience of witnessing both the efforts and the repercussions of our publication. After reading the entertainment "critique" of the musical, I must admit I was ashamed to be associated with the paper.

It is not the negativeness of the critique that I am protesting; it is the quality. My distress is twofold: first, that such an uninformed and biased opinion would claim to be a critique and second, that the entertainment editors of the Villanovan would support and publish such "writing."

Allen Ambrosino lacks an interest in and familiarity with the theatre only matched by his poor writing skills and this makes him utterly unsuited to such a task.

To reduce the performance of an actress to "jokes that were not funny" and to suggest that a 140-minute musical, short by any informed standard, is "45 minutes too long," can only be the result of an infantile attention span and a lack of knowledge of what comprises a "good" play.

These are only two examples of the ignorance and insensitivity that infuse the critique. I cannot even begin to protest the dangling participles and sloppy writing replete in the work.

I cannot comprehend, however, that such unfounded opinions and rough writing would survive the editing process of any newspaper.

My first inclination was to resign in protest, but I soon realized that simply washing my hands of the publication, which is usually of such high quality, would be both close-minded and futile.

Instead, I am writing this to express my distress and my hope that in the future more thought and effort will be put into the writing and editing of the entertainment editorials.

Laura Stevens
Class of 1991

Letters policy

The Villanovan will print "Letters to the Editor" received at its offices in 201 Dougherty prior to the weekly deadline, Tuesday at 2 p.m. All letters must be typed and double spaced. The editors will withhold a name upon request, but all letters must be signed and should include the writer's telephone number. Because of limited space, not all letters can be printed. Others may be edited. Letters may be sent by mail to: the Villanovan, Villanova University, Villanova, Pa. 19085.

On Campus

By PATTON TRIMBLE
Staff Photographer

This week the Villanovan asks: What are you going to do for this summer?

We are getting initiated into Delta Gamma.
Sarah Skinner
sophomore
English
Christine Cornelius
sophomore
political science

Traveling around the world and picking up all the balloons released on balloon day so no animals will die.
Kevin Fogarty
senior
mechanical engineering

Make up for all the sun we didn't have here.
Regan Ford
freshman liberal arts
Terri Vu
freshman
business
Laura Dooley
sophomore arts

Try to find some place to live for next year.
Coach P. junior finance

Cruise to Bahamas compliments of Sigma Pi.
Michael O'Shea
freshman
liberal arts
Patty Guenin
freshman
liberal arts

PEC recommendation probed

To the Editor:

As an alumnus of the graduate school in modern languages, I am greatly disturbed by the report of the Program Evaluation Committee (PEC).

Although undergraduate education must continue to be recognized as the main thrust of education at this institution, it is nonetheless greatly disquieting that all the proposed cuts are to be made in the graduate school, with modern languages to be meat-axed. This situation is greatly distressing to me, for various reasons.

I earned an M.A. in modern languages in 1982. Since then, the degree has proved to be of questionable value in the job market. This is amply proven by the fact that my current employment with the U.S. Government is in an unrelated field.

Now my degree is to be eliminated. If I were to try changing jobs, I can already hear some interviewer devalue my degree with: "They eliminated this degree at Villanova, so how much good is it?"

It is a demonstrated fact that the U.S. Government cannot find the needed specialists in Russian, Arabic and Oriental languages. These languages are now being taught at Villanova.

German is also being given short shrift by the PEC. May I remind you that West Germany and Japan are among our biggest trading partners and that we regard the Soviet Union as our adversary. Thus, given the obvious demand for persons skilled in the above languages it appears that the PEC has not given the matter due deliberation, as the PEC appears first in the future only modern-minded degrees in French and [illegible] awarded.

Finally, I disagree that the GRE should be a requirement for future graduate students. I have a 3.85 g.p.a. in the graduate school at Rutgers University where I am currently pursuing a Ph.D. Yet, my GRE score is a miserable 380! Why that score was so low is still a mystery that even my department was unable to solve. This shows the questionable validity of the GRE as a barometer of future performance.

In conclusion, I urge you not to implement the PEC report. In my opinion, that would be a gross disservice to the University and to current and future students. It would also [illegible] to the good [illegible]

I would be remiss to not point out that [illegible] modern languages.

[illegible]

Features

Fraternity "battles" to help kids

By NOEL E. FALCO
News Editor

In center city Philadelphia, amidst hustling traffic on one-way streets leading nowhere, there is a tiny fenced-in playground next to a beer distributor. The playground, with its children of different colors and sizes, belongs to the Center For Early Childhood Services, Inc., a state-approved partial hospitalization setting and psychiatric outpatient clinic.

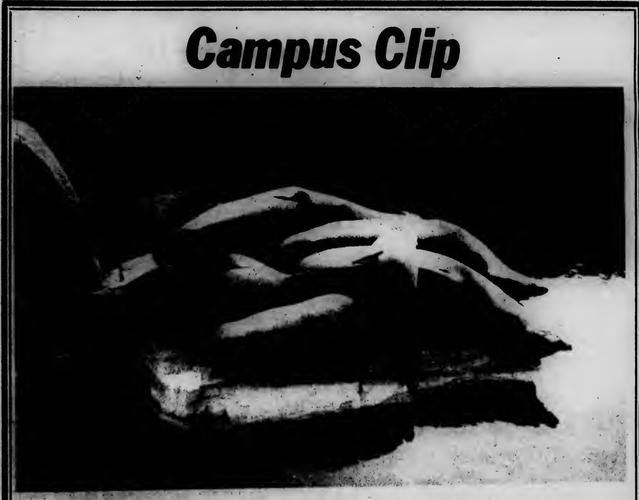
While the center is state-approved, approval does not convert into dollars. According to Dr. M. Harris Schaeffer, the executive director, the center has a $98,000 deficit because "governmental fees for service are so low." This deficit prompted discussion at a board of directors meeting about the need to seek fundraising in order to be able to complete the year.

It was at this meeting that MaryPat Bonner, a Villanova senior, mentioned Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity's interest in working on a service project. Schaeffer said he contacted Craig Zappetti, president of the fraternity, to see if he was interested in such a large-scale project.

Zappetti said he came up with the idea of the Battle of the Bands and adapted it to make it more marketable. He and fraternity members then publicized the event both with the Interfraternity Council [IFC] and the student body.

The event itself took "a lot of man-hours," with approximately 60 brothers working for five to six hours, said Zappetti. Lambda Chi Alpha was able to present Schaeffer and the Center a $1,400 check on April 13. Zappetti, along with Vice President Jim Maguire and Fraternity Educator Chris Johnson, represented the fraternity at this presentation.

Schaeffer, who said this was both his and the center's first time working with a student organization, commented that it was a good experience. He added that he sent letters of commendation to Zappetti as president of the fraternity and to IFC. He also said that Lambda Chi Alpha would be honored at a June reception for benefactors. A plaque will be presented to the fraternity and to Zappetti at this time.



(Photo by DiDomenico)

Members of Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity pose with children in class in the Center for Early Childhood Services.

Schaeffer told Zappetti, Johnson and Maguire, "It's not the money, though the money means a great

(Continued on page 14)

Campus Clip

Pictured below (or is it above?), the Glee Club members do their famous seal imitations at an aquarium in Mystic, Conn.

Is the zoo for you?

By JEANNE SAVITSCUS
Staff Reporter

This summer the Philadelphia Zoo is offering internships for children ages 11 to 13. The sessions run from July 5 through 28 and August 1 to 24, from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. The cost for one Session is $195, but some scholarship money is available.

The program was started 10 years ago by Janet Jackson-Gould, the curator of education. It was started as a response to the needs of children in the area, as an alternative to summer camps.

The internship offered to 11 to 13-year-olds is not the only program available to children. Starting as young as 18 months, there are various programs run. Some last for only one Saturday, such as "Marvelous Mammals." It is a program where children come in and learn about mammal's eating habits, living habits and reproduction. Other workshops run for approximately one month, such as "Water Lovers." The zoo caters to children of all ages, from their "tiny tot" groups (age 18 to 20 months), to the junior internship (11 to 13 years).

The junior internship allows the kids to explore their interests. They go behind the scenes, talk with the keepers, the vice president and curators. "They get a glimpse of the zoo as a business," said Jackson-Gould. This program "allows children who love animals to explore the different careers associated with the zoo." Jackson-Gould added, "It teaches them all about the zoo, animals and the people related to it."

After age 13, the zoo offers volunteer positions for people 14 to 18. The positions range from working in the children's zoo or pony rises, or selling animal foods to the daily animal shows.

If you are interested in working for the junior internship program, there are paid positions open for biology majors and other related majors. You would work with a group of 12 children, help them decide on a career choice, and get paid for it. For more information, contact Hedy Cerlinka, the volunteer coordinator.

In retrospect . . .

By SUSAN E. CORCORAN
Features Editor

It is getting to be that time again — the end of the school year. It is hard to believe another one is almost over. The time to start worrying about finals has once again arrived. The weather is starting to get nicer day by day and it is getting harder to keep our minds off the beach, white shorts and summer tans. It should be a time of stress, anticipation and also excitement, but it can also be a time of sadness.

The end of the school year means the end of a time in one's life. We are getting older and wiser as each year passes. Yes, we are only 19, 20, 21, etc. . . . but we are now adults and the carefree problems of our youth have made way to serious problems of money, jobs, and relationships. Each year brings more responsibility, more commitment, and more conflicts. It is one more step toward maturity and handling our lives on our own.

The end of the year also reminds us of the fun and happiness we have enjoyed, the special people we now know, and the closeness we shared with them. These precious times are remembered with a smile and stored in our mental scrapbooks of happy college days.

In retrospect, the closing of another school year allows us to take stock in ourselves and in what we learned about ourselves through our experiences and the people we have met. It is a time to look back and remember with smiles and tears a small part of your life spent here at Villanova.

Greek-aid

(Continued from page 13)

deal to me, but it's the endeavor. It speaks to me of the group and the individuals. I'm really touched."

Johnson replied, "It gives us just as much pleasure to give it to you."

The Battle of the Bands, whose only expenses were stage crew and sound, earned money from collecting donations at the door. Its success has moved Schaeffer to send letters to IFCs and Greek organizations at other colleges, mentioning Lambda Chi Alpha's achievement and asking for support next year. Schaeffer said he is seeking at least one Greek-sponsored event on each campus he contacted.

Schaeffer spoke of the center's need to focus on funds for the following year because of lack of national support and endowment. He told the three representatives, "Because of your efforts and everyone else's efforts, we have made it through this year. We were expected to close on Jan. 1. Now we have to start worrying about next year."

He added, "I hope you [Lambda Chi Alpha] have set an example for fraternities and sororities in the Philadelphia area ... this is a positive reflection on the fraternity, Villanova University and students."

(Photo by DiDomenico)

Dr. M. Harris Schaeffer, director of the Center for Early Childhood Services, thanks Craig Zappetti, president of Lambda Chi Alpha, for his fraternity's efforts.

who knows, who cares

This who knows, who cares is brought to you by the illiterate, unethical and childish Editorial Board ... and those are the nice things we've been called this year ... year ... trashing was the word of the year ... we made the Final 8 and trashed the Oreo when we lost to the Sooners ... we held an election and Villanovans were trashed ... we trashed whatever and whoever deserved it and you trashed us back in the letters to the editor ... we seem to be taking the blame for everything around here ... but we will not take the blame for the disappearance of the Bartley guardhouse ... we've been called unprofessional, sexist and uninformed ... thank you ... at least you're reading us ... but not for the next four months ... but in the summer ... who knows, who cares ...

Edited by the Villanovan Editorial Board.

Word of the Week

STINKIBUS

a) A person with a negative attitude towards life

b) Bad liquor

c) A SEPTA vehicle after it has hit a skunk which was unavoidably mutilated by the force of the vehicle

d) A quarrel between lovers

Solution page 16

Rubes® By Leigh Rubin

"...And if you can't wait until morning, use this."

Thanx
J.C. and S.C.
for helping me
thru a rough nite.
B.V.

UNITED PARACHUTE CLUB

JUMP LOCATION — NEW HANOVER AIRPORT • SWAMP PK. & RT. 663

P.O. BOX 166, GILBERTSVILLE, PA • WEEKEND PHONE 215-323-9667

The Intramural Department would like to congratulate this year's champions:

MEN'S SPORTS

Football – Sigma Pi III

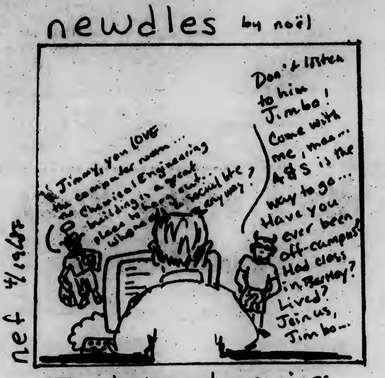
Basketball –
"A"-Saco East
"B"-Alumni I
"C"-Spunkers

Soccer – Mud

WOMEN'S SPORTS

Football – Turfbiters

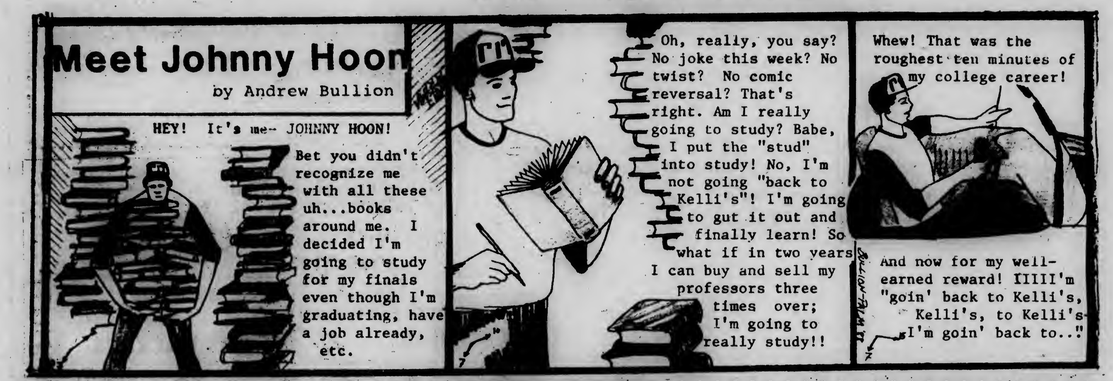
Basketball – Off the Glass



Softball – Big Bogers

COED SPORTS

Softball – Mud I



Volleyball – Flintstones and Jumping Jacks

THE ART BIN

527-4330

FAST FREE DELIVERY!!
WITH $6.00 MINIMUM ORDER

LA NOVA PIZZA COMPANY

789 Lancaster Ave. • Villanova, PA

Hours: Sun.-Thurs. 11 a.m.-1 a.m. • Fri. & Sat. 11 a.m.-3 a.m.

Owned and operated by Vincent Amendola, former owner of Vincent's Pizza in Overbrook
Considered the best Pizzeria in West Philadelphia

NOW HIRING

PIZZA	Large	Medium	Small
Cheese	6.15	4.75	3.75
Pepperoni	7.45	5.75	4.55
Mushrooms	7.45	5.75	4.55
Sausage	7.45	5.75	4.55
Ground Beef	7.45	5.75	4.55
Green Peppers	7.45	5.75	4.55
Onions	7.45	5.75	4.55
Anchovies	7.45	5.75	4.55
2nd topping	1.10	.80	.65
3rd topping	.90	.60	.50
Special	10.50	8.50	7.30
White Pizza w/ch.	6.15	4.75	3.75
Broccoli Cheese	7.45	5.75	4.55

	Lg.	Sm.
Stromboli
Italian	8.85	5.75
Pepperoni	7.50	5.00

Sicilian
(one size only)
$10.50

Steaks Available Soon!!

HOAGIES

ITALIAN SPECIAL	3.30
(imported ham, genoa salami, capicolla, provolone cheese and prosciutto, topped with pure olive oil and spices)
ITALIAN HOAGIE	2.95
HAM & CHEESE	2.80
PROVOLONE & SALAMI	2.80
TUNA	3.10
TURKEY	3.30
ROAST BEEF	3.60
CHEESE	2.60

(All our meats are delicatessen quality!)
Sandwiches also available HOT!!

Tax is not included

MONDAY & WEDNESDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 pizza any size
Get 2 toppings for the price of 1!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

TUESDAY & THURSDAY
With this Coupon
Buy 1 large pizza
get two 16oz. sodas FREE!!
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

WITH THIS COUPON
$1.50 OFF
SICILIAN PIZZA!

FRIDAY-SATURDAY & SUNDAY
Buy a large pizza
with one topping
Get one FREE liter of soda
(Not valid with any other offer!!)

Campus Ministry

By BARBARA HAENN
Associate Campus Minister

They make movies based on lives such as his. But you will not find him in Hollywood, Washington or Wall Street. His home is the impoverished area of Port-au-Prince, Haiti called Cite Soleil (The City of Sun), and his name is the Rev. Lawrence Bohnen.

A Salesian father, Bohnen left his university teaching post in Belgium 35 years ago to begin the "missionary" chapter of his life. At first, he was assigned to the missions of Vietnam, and within two years, was reassigned to the poorest country in the western hemisphere — Haiti.

Haiti, a Caribbean country about the size of Maryland with 6 million citizens, was a former paradise that has been beaten into poverty over the last 200 years. Once a land rich in natural resources, the earth is now unable to produce economic security for its people as a result of multiple colonizations and exploitive economic practices. The average family income per year is $200, a reality that is difficult for most North Americans to comprehend.

Into this world walked Bohnen, in 1955. He was 42 years old. He realized that the hope of the Haitian people would lie in their enormous faith, and in future educational efforts. His dream was to establish a school system and lunch program that would liberate both body and soul. Over the past 33 years, he has established 151 mini-schools, and a lunch program that feeds 15,000 children 365 days of the year.

It was Villanova's privilege to be able to work with Bohnen when groups of students traveled to Haiti to learn more of the realities of life for people living in the Third World. Hunger Awareness Week, 1986 and 1987, directed their fund raising goals toward successfully financing the building of a school that contains eight additional mini-schools in Bohnen's Cite Soleil compound. The school bears the name of Villanova University.

In recognition of Bohnen's dedication, work and accomplishments for the people of Haiti, Villanova University will award Bohnen an honorary doctorate at the arts and sciences, nursing commencement ceremonies on May 22.

Fr. Lawrence Bohnen takes a break from his work at the school in Haiti that was funded by Villanova's 1986-87 Hunger Awareness Week.

Congratulations
Mike and Jackie
on
Phi Kappa Phi

Word of the Week Solution

STINKIBUS b) Bad liquor

BLUE MOON
SURFWEAR
STONE HARBOR * AVALON
WILDWOOD CREST, NJ
NOW HIRING
MANAGERS & FULL-TIME & PART-TIME SUMMER JOBS
Call (215) 527-4188 for INFO

GOLDEN IMAGE would like to thank Villanova students for their patronage
CONGRATULATIONS AND BEST WISHES TO SENIORS
GOLDEN IMAGE TANNING CENTERS
• Safe UVA Tanning
• Open 7 Days
• Complete Privacy
• Relaxing Atmosphere
• Trained Technicians
• Wolff Coppertone Products
566 Lancaster Avenue
Haverford, PA
Located Next to Al E Gators
CALL FOR AN APPOINTMENT
525-7125
We feature: Nuvolarium Lamps exclusively from patented SCA Wolff System "The World's #1 Choice in Indoor Tanning"
COLLEGE DISCOUNT — 20% OFF ANY PACKAGE

Classified and Personal Advertising

CLASSIFIEDS

Two-Bedroom Apartment, Radnor House condo. Available July 1, $785/mo.+ utilities. Call evenings, 446-7547.

Part-time, evening, live-in tutor, in exchange for room and board; Junior/Senior B.A. or Graduate Student; background in math, science, or language helpful; 649-1858 Jeanne or Cindy.

Sitter for 5-year-old boy, two to three days a week in June. Flexible to fit your schedule. Call 527-4845.

3 houses for rent: 2 unit house in Gulph Mills, 3 BR/1 BR; 4 BR house in West Conshohocken. Call 525-2751/leave message!

Two-bedroom apartment for rent, one bathroom, Radnor House, 1030-Lancaster Ave. Short walk from Villanova. Available June 1, 1988. Call Nicolena Tosi for information. Day, 1-584-2100, evening 1-368-7250.

Working in New York City next year? I am looking for a roommate to share a house in Northern New Jersey, 45 minutes outside N.Y.C. $300 per month, plus utilities. Call (215) 430-0693.

Berwyn area, 3 to 5 hours per week to assist family with light housekeeping. Must have car. $5/hour. Call 648-0577.

Wanted: Roommates for shorehouse in Avalon. Great location! For details contact Bill Petrino at 527-6448 ASAP!

Delivery people needed. Fitty students with their own cars needed. $6 an hour plus gas allowance. Must interview now for next fall. Call Paul at 525-2551.

Summer help wanted, contact the Rev. Ray Jackson, O.S.A., Campus Ministry, full time clerical assistant for textbook; ability to use volleywriter helpful. 645-4080.

Rosemont — Radnor House Condo; two bedrooms, reduced rates; call 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. 215-563-1580, Ext. 243.

Refrigerator for sale. Perfect for dorm. 3.1 cu. ft. Excellent condition — barely used. Must sell. Call 527-3774.

Full time summer positions available starting at $6/hour. Well-established Devon-based corporation now interviewing for full-time summer personnel. We seek business, economics and arts majors to work our clients' receivables and analyze cash flow problems. Applicants must be aggressive, motivated and able to learn quickly. Supplement your resume with business experience in the most respected company in our industry. Interested? Call Steve Shaver at 687-4601 today to arrange an interview.

Roommate needed to share Radnor House condo. One bedroom w/den. Non-smoker. Female. 526-9297, Julie.

Busy executive needs household help in Villanova. Fifteen hours a week. Own transportation necessary. Year-round job beginning in July (preferably) or September. Call evenings. 525-3648; day, 896-5080.

Room and bath, furnished, private, available summer or fall, convenient location, Haverford and Bryn Mawr trains. Limited kitchen; graduate, non-smoking male preferred. $325 per month, 642-2136.

Main Line day care center needs childcare workers/teachers. Full-time and part-time positions, educational background and experience preferred. Call 527-7313.

Government Homes from $1. "U Repair." Also tax delinquent property. Call 805-644-9533 Ext. 1414 for info.

Summer Day Camp, Sesame Day Camp in major Monig. Co./Norristown PA Day Camp, is looking for male/female staff. Join a team of fun, exciting, professional educators. Excellent salary, call 215-275-CAMP.

Lost: Gold rope bracelet with pearl pendant. Great sentimental value. Lost in Falvey, Vasey or maybe Connelly. Please call Diane, 527-3564.

Singers, dancers for telegrams. Must have car. Great job, flexible hours, full or part-time. 533-6440.

YAA Sports has openings for summer and next fall which pay between $8 and $10 per hour. The position entails teaching young children sports in the afternoons and Saturdays. You pick your own schedule and we provide a uniform and paid training. For more information, contact the office at 277-6787.

Prominent Center City law firm is seeking students for summer clerks to review and analyze medical related documents. Send resume to: Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay, 1600 Ave. of the Arts Building, Broad and Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, 19107, Attn: Margaret Morasca

Students: get your perfect summer job! You can lie in the sun all day and still make great pay. Ideal for summer school students. Evening and weekend shifts available in our airconditioned Bryn Mawr office. If you have good communications skills and enjoy working with people, call Joyce for an immediate interview at 527-4064.

Babysitter needed. Responsible, loving and energetic person. Part-time, 10 to 15 flexible hours per week. $4 per hour. Prefer someone with car. Must be able to work through the summer. Call Laura, 667-9565.

College Pro has summer full-time customer service positions available. Looking for reliable and hardworking people to work in our regional office. Must have good phone manner. For more information please contact Sue at 783-0602 from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A fine good weapon! The U.S. Marines are currently interviewing female juniors for a limited number of openings as Officer Candidates. Those selected receive tuition assistance, student loan deferments, travel and good pay while participating in a challenging and rewarding summer internship program leading to the offer of a commission as an officer of Marines. To learn more about this no-obligation program, call Capt. Farr at (215) 896-3567.

The following positions are available during the summer months for full and part-time help. Carpenters' helpers needed, masonry helpers, general labor, landscaping, grass cutting. Supervisory positions are also available for the summer. All work is based in the Media, Pennsylvania area. Salary will be determined per experience. Send written qualifications or apply in person to Mike Gura, Media Real Estate, 555 East Baltimore Pike, Media, Pa. 19063.

United States Marine Corps Undergraduate Officer Programs. Freshmen — the Marines are looking for a few highly qualified men who want to lead. This summer, at no obligation, you can find out if you have what it takes. We offer good pay, tuition assistance, loan deferments, aviation guarantees, and the most challenging and rewarding experience available to young men of adventure. To learn more, call 896-5068 and ask for Captain Farr.

Professional Resume Preparation — Write, edit, update, print, copy, type. Same-day service. U.S. Typewriter and Resume Center. King of Prussia Plaza, King of Prussia. 265-7898. Hours: Monday through Saturday, 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m., Sunday 12 to 5 p.m. It is never too early!

Talented singers wanted for work on Philadelphia's most exciting entertainment attraction, "The Spirit of Philadelphia." Full and part-time positions available. Call between 1 and 3 p.m. for auditions at 923-4996 and ask for Bill.

PERSONALS

M.P. — Ya Big Stud — I wish you the best of luck! Love — J.D.

Noel — A box of two dozen costs $7.38. They carded me, too. — J. Phil.

B.V. — Last paper . . . last personal . . . of a very "intense" and interesting year. . . Love . . .

Meg (of Carr & Meg), Do not forget to go to Smoke's on Friday for Carr & Meg nite! Maybe we'll get in?!

Chris T — I never thought Tacos and tickling could be so much fun. Can't wait for dinner tonight! XXOO ME

It's Happy Hour Again. Johnny H — Stay away from jealous boyfriends. Al — watch those play reviews. You two are great friends! Let's do the Popcorn's thing real soon. — Butch.

Kevin Charles, I'd like to just wish you a happy 19th birthday, but it doesn't work like that — we tried it that way. Je t'aime beaucoup, and maybe someday I'll see what I haven't seen. Remember, I only purr for you! Love, Kitten.

Boob, Buttcheek, Dew, Mar and Janette — My bestest buddies . . . thank you for all you are to me . . . Everything! Love — Susan.

Dear Curtis, I've had so much fun this semester, I look forward to a lot more. LYBH.

Marine — Happy Birthday! I hope the celebration continues all weekend. Only 364 more days 'till you're 21. Love, Colleen.

Rob-Bob, Do not forget us on Tuesday for 'Wonder Years'. Love — Your Brownie-making women. P.S. — Don't forget the Diet Coke.

Jen, Elliott and Kinsey Chris — Philadelphia will never be the same, unfortunately my stomach is still feeling the effects of a diverse variety of flavorful milkshakes. I'm tired of playing Mommy! Thanks for a much needed fun time! Love, Johnnies.

Laura Salsano — Congratulations on making the Rams Squad! All that work and bike riding paid off!!

Pete, we love Lukas! What more is there to say? Love — the women in black. P.S. — Love that butt!

Advice from Butch Baxter

Dear Butch,
I am writing to commend you on your fantastic job this semester as advisor to the Villanova community. You have seen us through out difficult times, shared our laughter and our tears. I guess I just want to say: "Don't go changin', to try and please me, I love you just the way you are." Can't wait to read you next year!
Signed,
Stephanie Pendersnoot,
Chairperson,
Friends of Butch Baxter

Hey Cupcake,
I appreciate your show of support. Maybe this summer we could go to the auto show (I hear Miss August, 1969 will be on the "Skoal Bandit" Trans-Am Funny-Car!) then go out for a little ... Maddog 20/20. Have yourself "arrestful" summer. Don't call Butch, he'll call you.

Dear Butch,
Well, it's the end of the school year again. The only problem I have is that my old job as a cook is not waiting for me, because my boss hired a full-time chef from Paris named Jaques. Personally, I am a little skeptical about him. He looks exactly like the old cook at that Jewish-Japanese restaurant, the So-sue-me. I guess Ed's Escargot and Eggs will operate without me this summer. Any thoughts on how I could have fun this summer and make some money?
Signed,
S.A.S. (Student Against Snails)

Hey Snailman,
Don't feel too bad. I know you can find better ways to pass your summerdays than food preparation of garden pests. There are many great job opportunities in fields relating to your area of study. These jobs will help prepare you for the "real world" and will make your future dreams come true. But, forget about these jobs.
There is an old prison saying, "If the guard lets you, slug him in the gut." In other words, take your shot while you are still young and have the chance.
Spend the summer doing something you've always wanted to try, but were afraid to. Dare to dream; work as a lifeguard, a race-car driver, a septic tank cleaner, a road-striper, a hairdresser-to-the-stars, an ambassador to South Yemen or the spy who glues the finishing anatomical touches on store mannequins. It is up to you how far your dreams will take you. I also recommend you spend your summer close to someone you love.
As for myself, I will be hanging out with my parole officer, who has also become my best friend.

Dear Butch,
The name's Dweebster, Gordon Dweebster. I've always had bad luck in romance so I've decided to change my image, calling myself 6.37148 (it's my favorite number) in the hopes of being able to shake, not stir, feelings of love in the hearts of all women. Unfortunately, I haven't had much luck.
For example, last week I tried to save a girl walking across Lancaster Avenue who looked like she was going to be hit by a car driven by a Communist guy. But, as I ran into the street, my calculator fell out of my pocket, causing me to trip and lose my glasses. I ended up causing a 12-car accident and getting a citation for public clumsiness. Then today, I saw a possible conquest in Sheehan. She was sitting on her window ledge with the window open. I saw an international thief, disguised as an R.A., standing behind her, threatening to push her to her death if she didn't hand over all her jewelry.
I tried to climb up to save her, but fell onto 12 lovely Sheehan Beach sun bathers. They bluntly turned down my offer to rub suntain oil on their backs.
Butch, surely you've had some romantic experience and can give me some tips on improving my license to thrill. I'm sure all I need is a few minor hints in order to get some sweetie to whisper "Oh, Gordon" in my ear.
Signed,
6.37148

Hey 6.37148,
I know I should never say never, but you'll probably never get a date. I don't want to scare the living daylights out of you but my advice to you is to lose this new image and take whatever romance comes your way. After all, you only live twice, and it just might take that long. If worst comes to worst, have Q invent an inflatable girlfriend for you that will explode if she falls into enemy hands.

The characters and letters are purely fictitious, and any resemblance to persons living or dead is purely coincidental.

Bicycle and balloon through the continent

By SHEILA SULLIVAN
Staff Reporter

How would you like to pedal down the French countryside of Paris, or coast through the Rhine River Valley? Does biking and ballooning across Burgundy sound interesting? These are just a few of the many tours sponsored by McBride's Earth Ventures. The tours encompass both western culture and history — thrusting out from Rome up the Aurelian Way, along the Rivera and through the Rhone Valley into central France.

On the tour, the cyclist will see the Roman ruins in France, Greek art in Rome, opulent chateaux, lush green forests, gondolas in Venice and the Appian Way. They will also ride from Rome to Terracina and swim in Capri.

Tours are loosely structured, allowing the individual to travel alone, paired off, or with the group. Nights are spent in comfortable hotels and country inns. The evenings include a short briefing on the next day's ride; handing out of maps, a description of areas of interest and an update on road conditions and landmarks.

The bicycle tours are designed with both beginners and experts in mind. A leisurely pace of 10 miles per hour is taken, totaling 40 to 50 miles a day. If the cyclist gets tired and choses not to ride he/she may be picked up in the Sagwagon.

The first tour starts in Rambouillet, France, and ends in Gien, France. It is a nine-day tour which includes ballooning over the Chevreuse Valley and Beauce Plain and possibly even over the Chartres Cathedral. The cyclists will enjoy biking the length of the Loire River from Cinon to Gien, and visiting the Parc Floral which is known for Europe's greatest flower show.

The second tour takes place in the Rhone River Valley. Travellers will enjoy the festival of Provence, with world-class performances in Ancient Roman theatres. Roman ruins are everywhere.

Another tour one might consider is biking and ballooning across Burgundy. The tour takes place from Sept. 20 to Oct. 10, during the Burgundy grape harvestime. The tour starts in Auxerre, a Medieval city. Next, the group travels to Velezy, where there is the reknown Romanesque cathedral. A gondola ride may be enjoyed at night, or even a flight in a balloon. The town of Burgundy has many shops, cafe-studded squares and a huge outdoor market. The trip ends in Cluny, but one may travel on to Nice, Paris, or Geneva, which is 90 minutes away.

Another tour one might chose is one of the Italian Riviera. Here one may experience quaint, colorful villages, along with the lively tourist and gambling centers. The cycling is most difficult on this tour, therefore, it is set up so the rider travels a very low mileage each day.

Renaissance and historic Italy begins in Venice with the spacious outdoor cafes around Piazza San Marco. The traveller can enjoy a gondolier ride or soak up the sun at Lido, one of the world's most fashionable beaches. Other destinations include Tuscany, San Gimignano, and Siena, one of Italy's best preserved medieval towns. A farewell celebration takes place in Rome.

The North Italian Lake Tour starts out in Stresa, a town filled with elegant townhouses and fine villas, tropical flowers and magnificent gardens. Lake Maggiore provides a refreshing ride for the cyclist. The romantic Lake Como, with its 14th century cathedral, medieval towers and a Romanesque church. A visit to Verona imposes all three types of architecture: medieval, renaissance and modern.

The Emperor's Playground is a tour through Lahum, Campania, the Bay of Naples and the Tyrrhenean Sea. Riding on the Appian Way, the cyclist will visit Tivoli — once a holiday resort for wealthy patricians. One can also take a swim on the sunny beaches of Lapium. Pompeii provides a glimpse into how provincial Roman citizens really lived. A chair lift ride will take you to an active volcano. Capri provides a pint-sized paradise and a wonderful departure site.

The England and the western countryside tour begins in Winchester where Kig Arthur's Round Table is stored. Cycling across the Salisbury Plain and down the Thames River Valley is extremely picturesque. Longleat provides a live jungle, as lions, cheetas, giraffes and monkeys rome the grounds of the Elizabethan home.

South Australia is the home of the Monto Carlo-like casino. It is also the location for the Davis Cup tennis match. Adelaide's hills provide everything from delightful Italian market gardens, to small villages and farmlets resembling the English countryside.

In Kapunda, one may visit the oldest copper mining town on the continent. "The Shiek" offers camel rides. Visit Kangaroo Island, which, strangely enough, is not famous for its Aussies, but for its seal colony. Victor Harbor provides an opportunity to see an old whaling port. Mr. Gambier, which is situated on an extinct volcano, is the final destination.

A final tour which one might chose is to Tasmania. In Tasmania one can walk in the footsteps of convicts and colonists. The trip begins in Launceston, Australia's third oldest city. Riding along the coast line, one visits many fishing villages. The Hazards, cliffs of solid red granite rise from the sea 1,000 feet. A ferry ride will take you to Maria Island, the former penal colony. The Tasmanian Peninsula has many parks where the Tasmanian devils, wombats and other species live. A trip to Hobart, one of the most beautiful harbor cities in the world, concludes the trip.

For further information, contact McBride's Earth Ventures, 6608 St. James Dr., Indianapolis, Ind. 46217, (317) 783-9449.

STORAGE FOR THE SUMMER AND ALL YEAR ROUND
Secure your TV's, VCR's, CD's, Furniture and other valuables.
HELP!
• Storage units from 5'x5' to 10'x15'
• Climate control
• Full-time manager & security system
• Low month to month rates
• U-Store-It, U-Lock-It
• Easy access seven days a week
CALL:
A STORAGE DEPOT
2461 N. 54th St.
(rear of Berman Bldg)
Phila., PA 19131 215-878-0800
Opening Early May '88
Special 10 Percent Discount
W/College I.D. Card

The good, the bad and the ugly

(Photo by Shafie)
Some of us discovered strengths we never knew we had ...

(Photo by Shafie)
Many of us made new friendships to help us cope with the pressures of school ...

Through it all we knew we were not alone; We were all part of the Villanova community. (Photo by Shafie)

(Photo by Shafie)
Sometimes we were confused and didn't know which way to turn ...

(Photo by Shafie)
We had time for horsing around ...

(Photo by Shafie)
A crash course in productively doing nothin was offered every afternoon at Connelly Square ...

(Photo by Shafie)
We gave it all we had and accomplished more than we hoped was possible ...

(Photo by Shafie)
Some days it felt as if the world was dealing us a lousy blow ...

(Photo by Shafie)
It may not be the Ritz, but at least there is no housing shortage ...

By DANA SHAFIE
Photography Editor

To borrow a quote from an old friend of mine, "It was the best of times, it was the worst of times." It was Spring 1968 at Villanova. I assembled a random collection of seemingly unrelated photographs from this fun filled semester, (gag). I hope you enjoy viewing them as much as I enjoyed taking them, if not go get your money back. Have a great summer Villanova (I just had to say that).

(Photo by Shafie)
We persevered through trying times ...

ANNOUNCING

The Fourth Annual Zeta Psi Invitational Golf Tournament

To Benefit The Ronald McDonald House For Kids

MONDAY, MAY 2

AT THE MELROSE COUNTRY CLUB

$40 To Sponsor a Hole

$60 Player Fee INCLUDES:

- 18 holes of golf
- golf cart
- lunch
- banquet dinner
- three hour beer bar
- prizes
- and a worthwhile donation to The House For Kids

FOR MORE INFORMATION, CONTACT TOM MARRON AT 354-9048

MCAT·GMAT LSAT·GRE

GAPS gives you the knowledge, confidence and the competitive edge you need to succeed on critical exams.

SCORE HIGH

Thousands of bright, otherwise eligible students are unfairly penalized every year for being underprepared, for not knowing critical test-taking skills or for freezing up during the actual exam, thus concealing their true "aptitude." You can overcome these problems if you know what kind of questions to expect, have learned proven test-taking strategies, and have practiced under simulated test conditions.

GAPS puts the proven learning techniques from the classroom into a convenient, study-at-home format.

NOTE: The number of cassettes and pages of text may vary slightly according to current exam content. Remember, these exam are changed frequently . . . and, unlike other courses, the GAPS program is constantly updated to change with them.

MCAT Of the over 50,000 students who take the MCAT each year, only one out of three is admitted to medical school. Produced in accordance with American College Testing Program testing procedure, GAPS can give you the edge you need.

THE ADMISSIONS PROCESS AND INTERVIEW
90 pages, 2 cassettes ..... Price: $65
PHYSICS
95 pages, 9 cassettes ..... Price: $130
CHEMISTRY (ORGANIC AND GENERAL)
279 pages, 17 cassettes ..... Price: $130
READING COMPREHENSION AND QUANTITATIVE SKILLS
198 pages, 6 cassettes ..... Price: $130
BIOLOGY
460 pages, 12 cassettes ..... Price: $130
MCAT COMPLETE COURSE (includes all sections above)
1122 pages, 45 cassettes ..... (Save $1961) Price: $349

GMAT Competition is fierce at the nation's best business schools. Are you willing to make a low-cost, high-yield investment in your future? Brush up on all sections of the test, or a single one. Produced in accordance with Educational Testing Service testing procedure.

VERBAL SKILLS (covers reading comprehension, usage and sentence correction and practical/business judgment)
113 pages, 6 cassettes ..... Price: $120
QUANTITATIVE SKILLS (covers data sufficiency, problem solving, data interpretation, geometry and algebra)
465 pages, 8 cassettes ..... Price: $90
GMAT COMPLETE COURSE (includes all sections above)
570 pages, 14 cassettes ..... (Save $341) Price: $179

LSAT Just a few points in your score could make the difference between going to a top law school . . . or to no law school at all. Produced in accordance with Law School Admission Services testing procedure, this course covers reading comprehension, logical and other, logical reasoning, analytical reasoning and writing samples.
287 pages, 10 cassettes ..... Price: $150

GRE The better the school, the higher the score you'll need to compete. Select a specific topic area, or purchase the complete GRE course. Both modules is produced in accordance with Educational Testing Service testing procedure.
VERBAL ABILITY (covers vocabulary building, antonyms, sentence completions, analogies, and reading comprehension)
194 pages, 7 cassettes ..... Price: $80
QUANTITATIVE AND ANALYTICAL ABILITY (covers problem solving, logical reasoning, data interpretation, quantitative comparisons, geometry and algebra)
133 pages, 10 cassettes ..... Price: $120
GRE COMPLETE COURSE (includes all sections above)
727 pages, 17 cassettes ..... (Save $160) Price: $189

100% MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE
The Graduate Admissions Preparation Service gives you the most risk-free guarantee available. You must be completely satisfied with your GAPS exam preparation course—from its content to its format—or we'll refund your money. Just return the course within 10 days of receipt for a full refund. No questions asked.

Mail to: GAPS Center
500 Third Avenue West
Box 34057
Seattle, WA 98124-1057

VISA or MC orders call:
(800) 426-5537 x 1241
(206) 281-1241 in WA State

ORDER FORM 2000

Your Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ ZIP _____
Your Exam Date _____ 899
Your phone no.: (_____) _____
Enclosed: Check ☐ MO ☐ VISA ☐ MC ☐
VISA/MC Account Number (all digits):
Expiration Date:
Signature (required):

SECTION/COURSE	PRICE
Choose shipping cost per course:
UPS Surface* $7.00
Postal Delivery† $14.00
Rush for LSAT, GRE, GMAT* $14.00
Rush Delivery for MCAT* $21.00
Subtotal
Wash. State residents add 7.8% sales tax
TOTAL ENCLOSED

*No P.O. Boxes, AK, HI, PR, Alaska, Hwy PO. Boxes, AK, HI, PR, Alaska

NOTE: Allow two weeks for regular delivery (LPD), four to five days for rush or delivery. Prices are in U.S. Dollars.

Local Band tells all

By DIANE DRAGONETTE
Staff Reporter

Who says that great things cannot come from Battle of the Bands and Lutheran church gigs? Only two years ago were such venues familiar turf for the Missionaries. Nowadays, The Missionaries are no strangers to the likes of the 23 East Cabaret and Revival. In a recent interview, the band talked about what they love best: rock-n-roll.

The Missionaries all grew up in the Main Line area, and the band consists of Jim Wronoski (lead vocals, guitar), Tom Valentine (lead guitar), John Valentine (drums), and Paul Quigley (bass). Important musical influences include the Rolling Stones, The New York Dolls, Iggy Pop and The Replacements. The Missionaries deliver honest music each time they play. Wronoski said, "We can't stand pretentious attitudes. We're out to have a good time and just be ourselves."

The Missionaries' live show is quite an experience. It is not uncommon for members of the audience to join the band on stage for a song or two. Tom Valentine explained, "We don't like to plan out the show and ruin all the spontaneity. Our practices are basically jams, which is what we do on stage."

One aspect that stands out in the Missionaries' music is that the band avoids using anything synthetic.

The Missionaries have mixed feelings about the Philadelphia music scene. Quigley commented, "A lot of bands become such a product that they lose any originality."

Tom Valentine continued, "That takes all the humanity out of music. We're more concerned with substance." The Missionaries have a realness about them that puts them ahead of other bands in the area.

The Missionaries have played a wide variety of places, and they spoke about their favorites. John Valentine recalled, "I remember playing an all-girls dorm at St. Joseph's. It was a cramped room with a Coke machine on stage." Wronoski added, "I like Revival because that is where we won The New Band Showcase. Revival was the first place to really respond to our original material."

The Missionaries just completed a tape with 12 of their hottest songs. The band sent the tape to various radio stations and record companies to familiarize people with their music. One song which stands out is "Going Down To Texas." Wronoski said, "That song is about Farm Aid. Tom and I are the only people in the world who went to all the Farm Aids, and we found Texas particularly rude."

During March, the Missionaries did pay a visit to Villanova's own WKVU for an interview over the air. The Missionaries are big fans of college radio because they find Philadelphia radio to be very closed. Tom Valentine explained, "Cyndy Drue is the only one who plays local music on WMMR's

(Continued on page 22)

Blue Period speaks out

By JEFF GILLIES
Assistant Entertainment Editor

"Hi, we're the band." If you have ever seen Blue Period play, you have probably heard this simple introduction from one of the band members, who race to the stage to have the honor of saying it. However, after all the hard work they have put into their endeavors and the loyal following of students they have won over, Blue Period probably does not need the introduction.

The Villanova-based band was formed in January 1986 when long time friends Mike Robinson and Brian Seymour decided they wanted to combine their musical talents. Seymour then met Greg Castano in his orientation group and soon found they had the core of one of the best bands on campus. Multi-talented musician, Pete Clerico and bass player Jerry Dugan joined in, and the band was complete.

After only three months together, the band landed their first job, playing a dance on campus. Soon afterward, they played the spring festival.

Today, Blue Period, with new bass player Marc Franciosa, can be found almost everywhere. They are monthly regulars at Barleycorn's, and often play at semi-formals, fraternities and Live at the Terrace. In addition, Seymour can be found on his own on a weekly basis at Marita's.

After talking with Seymour, Franciosa and Clerico, many of the behind the scenes personalities and desires of the band members came into focus.

All the members are currently juniors, except Franciosa who is a sophomore, they are all on the dean's list. Musical interests range from jazz to new wave and the band plays covers of groups from R.E.M. to Springsteen and Led Zeppelin.

From our conversation, it became clear they are quite serious about their music, but definitely have their share of fun.

From our conversation, it became clear that they are quite serious about their music, but definitely have their share of fun. Sense of humor is certainly not lacking in this band.

The question I really wanted to ask was concerning their name. Expecting some type of perverted answer, I was surprised to learn the real one. The band was in desperate need of a name and Seymour found it on a poster from Picasso's Blue Period that hung on his wall. Though the meaning behind the name is quite innocent, it has caused some problems. The band was turned down at Rosemont College because someone felt the name was "pretentious." As Seymour explained, ensuring his honesty in the matter, "Until then, I had never thought about it in that sense."

During our conversation, the jokes flew, most of which were directed at Franciosa. Being the newest and youngest member of the band, he seems to have learned to live with this role, taking it all in stride. "Don't ask about one of us being late because of a hurricane," said Seymour, glancing at Franciosa. Seymour explained that Franciosa works as a volunteer fireman and used a hurricane as an excuse for arriving late one night. "There really was a hurricane," Franciosa emphatically stated.

When the subject of bar brawls came up, Franciosa's eyes lit up as he exclaimed, "I almost got in a fight once!" It seems an overenthusiastic fan jumped on stage and did not intend to leave. He was pushed off after one song, and in the process of trying to climb back up, nearly pulled Franciosa off the stage. This is a common problem for Blue Period. Since people readily recognize them from classes, they feel they can climb up and join the party. Seymour explained that he wishes he could allow everyone to join in, but equipment breakage gets to be very expensive.

Castano is reportedly the band jester. According to Seymour, "He's always trying to make us laugh, making hand gestures and doing crazy things. He's usually doing everything but playing the drums and he's such a good drummer that he can get away with it and nobody notices."

Although it sounds as if the band is all fun and games, there is a great deal of work involved. "People often think that it's easy. They hear we go on at 9 p.m. and play until 12 p.m. or 1 a.m. and don't consider there's more to it. Set up takes about two hours and then afterward we're there until 3 a.m. taking our stuff down."

The future of the band is uncertain. Robinson will spend time in the Navy as an engineer and Clerico is undecided what he will do with his engineering degree. Castano is also undecided, leaving Seymour and Franciosa as the only two with long term hopes for Blue Period. In the near future, they hope to play 23 East Cabaret and gain a following in the Philadelphia area. Seymour dreams of landing a recording contract, but knows it will be difficult.

No matter how things turn out, Seymour recognizes the people who have helped the band's dreams come true. "A lot of people have come out, which really helps. We would like to thank them because their support means a great deal to us."

If you get the chance, be sure to go see Blue Period play some night. You will not be disappointed and for the band's sake, get out on the floor and dance, and do not forget that infamous and pervasive question, "What about Mike Porter?"

Scarlett and Black soothes

By CINDY BOSNIAN
Staff Reporter

Scarlett and Black
Scarlett and Black
Virgin Records
★★★½

The duo of Scarlett and Black, a.k.a. Robin Hild and Sue West, are showing their true colors with the release of their self-entitled debut album. Hailing from London, the duo met while both working for the band Doctor and the Medics at the Stonehenge Music Festival in 1983 — West as a backing vocalist and Hild as recorder of their demo tapes. For the next few years, the two collaborated on intensive songwriting and demo sessions, using only a drum machine and sequencer. Finally they sent a tape to a friend in the business, who forwarded it to the newly formed Virgin Records. The company brought the band to L.A. to record their debut LP.

The album features basically upbeat music with a romantic flair. Many of the songs maintain an "everything will-be-all-right" attitude, fusing elements of several other artists yet managing to produce a new sound. Hild's nasal tonality often reminds one of Tears for Fears' Curt Smith or Roland Orzabal, while the music contains interesting synthesizer effects and triumphant trumpets characteristic of Howard Jones.

The first single, "You Don't Know," is a catchy number which has received extensive airplay over the past few weeks. Judging by the virtual sell-out of their album already, the duo is definitely making a name for themselves with the release of this single.

The pace picks up a bit with the catchy "Let Yourself Go-Go," which advises us to make the most of life. Trumpets help celebrate the occasion.

Hild's synthesizer takes on a dreamlike quality in "Dream Out Loud," a significantly slower number. The dream motif continues in "Someday," as Hild wishes that "Someday, someway, I believe we could be together."

Scarlett and Black next pose the eternal question "What is Love." Although a good song, their version does not maintain quite the same originality as Howard Jones' hit of a few years back. And of course, we cannot forget the inevitable "Is it the real thing?" which is asked in the song "Real Love." A faster number than "What is Love," it boasts a "hooky" catch.

The lightheartedness of many of the songs is abandoned in the more mysterious "Miracle or Mirage," which is perhaps the best song next to the first single. An intriguing, often eerie, synthesizer steals the show and makes for interesting listening.

The inspirational "City of Dreams (The Last Frontier)" alludes to the glitz/glamor of Hollywood and L.A. The duo sings about the last great American frontier, which, they regret, has become somewhat of a "cellophane suburbia."

Scarlett and Black offers basically mellow music featuring a lot of synthesizer, yet cannot be categorized as either "New Wave" or "techno-pop." Rather, it is a soothing blend of styles which succeeds in its own right. It is the kind of music to listen to when you just want to kick off your shoes, put on your headphones and sink back into a comfortable chair after a long day.

Midnight Oil gains U.S. fans

By KATHRYN QUIGLEY
Entertainment Editor

Diesel And Dust
Midnight Oil
Columbia Records
★★★

Midnight Oil is an Australian band whose latest album, Diesel and Dust, went to No. 1 in Australia the week it was released and is climbing the U.S. college charts. The album is full of chugging rhythms, acoustic guitar and meaningful songs.

The band is comprised of Peter Garret (lead vocals), Rob Hirst (drums), Jim Moginie (guitar and keyboards), Peter Gifford (bass) and Martin Rotsey (guitar). They have written an album that is full of catchy choruses but occasionally repetitive and droning verses. It is almost as if their songs are divided into two separate parts — verses and choruses — and they do not always connect.

It is almost as if their songs are divided into two separate parts . . . and they do not always connect

The first two songs on the album are good examples of this. "Beds are Burning" is perhaps the group's best known song. It is about the land that was taken from the aborigines, much like the plight of the American Indian. A line from the song is, "It belongs to them/we're gonna give it back."

"Put Down Your Weapon," is about nuclear war. It shares with "Beds Are Burning," the distinction of having a chorus that sticks in one's mind and lyrics that go in one ear and out the other. Yes, the whole purpose of a chorus is to be the hook of a song, but not at the expense of the rest of the tune. The words to Midnight Oil's songs should not be overlooked, because they deal with topical problems in Australian society, nuclear war and modernization at the expense of values. This is no Bananarama album.

The problem could be Garret's voice. While it can be intense and hushed ("Put Down Your Weapon"), it is just not very tuneful. This is why the verses seem to drone; almost every song picks up

(Continued on page 24)

On The Scene . . .Entertainment Tidbits

By STEPHEN POWERS
Staff Reporter

The 1987-88 television season was not a good one for the three networks. Overall viewing was down over 10 percent, and only two new shows placed in the Nielsen Top 20. But there were a few gems on TV this year, and they are included on my list of the season's highlights and lowlights.

First, the winners: "Cheers," NBC: Many thought that Shelley Long's departure would be the kiss of death for this sitcom, but the producers introduced a new situation — having a woman in charge of the bar — and breathed new life into the show. Kirstie Alley fits in nicely as Rebecca, Sam Malone's new boss and love interest. The rest of the cast also turned in their usual strong performances, especially Kelsey Grammer as Frasier, and Bebe Neuwirth as his super-intelligent wife, Lilith.

"L.A. Law," NBC: This drama is so well done that it even makes its two mediocre leads, Harry Hamlin and Susan Dey, look good. The courtroom cases are riveting, shocking and sometimes touching. As for the lawyers' personal lives, who can ever forget Douglas Brackman and his wife, Sheila, fighting it out right in the middle of Ann and Stuart's wedding? It was just one of the show's many memorable scenes. Hopefully, next year we will see more of Abby (Michele Greene) and the courtroom antics of Jonathan Rollins (Blair Underwood).

"St. Elsewhere," NBC: This is easily the best program on television. "St. Elsewhere" has it all: drama, comedy, a great cast and outstanding writers. Special recognition goes to Emmy-winners William Daniels and Bonnie Bartlett, whose real-life marriage lent authenticity to the relationship between their characters, Mark and Ellen Craig. They made us care, which can be pretty hard to do.

However, "St. E." only has a short time to live, and will resolve its storylines in the weeks to come. The Craigs will reconcile and St. Eligius will be returned to its rightful owners. On a sadder note, Elliot (Stephen Furst) will suffer a fatal heart attack, and Dr. Auschlander (Norman Lloyd) will finally succumb to liver cancer. The final episode promises to be a real tear-jerker.

Unfortunately, all shows cannot be as good as "St. Elsewhere." The following programs deserved more criticism than praise.

"The Cosby Show," NBC: The ratings fell by 20 percent this year, and deservedly so. This once-highly entertaining show can now barely be called a sitcom because its plots are paper-thin — who really cares whether or not Vanessa can wear makeup? No one, except the smug, sanctimonious Clair. The Huxtables really love themselves, and it shows.

"Moonlighting" ABC: This show is another 20 percent loser, and it also deserves it. Cybil Shepherd and Bruce Willis whined every episode — that is, every episode in which they bothered to show up.

The producers jerked the audience around with a senseless storyline instead of giving us the witty mysteries that made this show a hit in the first place. On top of all this, only 13 new episodes aired, so the viewers were plagued with an endless number of repeats. "Moonlighting" was once something special, but now the magic is gone.

"Family Ties," NBC: This sitcom is still amusing, but has suffered a marked decline in quality and is becoming formulaic. Up until this year, the series focused on the entire family, but is now exclusively centered around Michael J. Fox and Justine Bateman.

Fox's lines, once hilarious, are now predictable, and while Bateman's Mallory used to show some signs of intelligence, she has turned into a cardboard cut-out of a character, the biggest airhead on television. In addition, Fox and Courtney Cox, who plays Alex's girlfriend Lauren, have absolutely no chemistry. Next season will be this show's last, and it may not be a moment too soon.

"Thirtysomething," ABC: A talented cast is wasted in a show with some of the most trivial plots on television, plots even comparable to those of "The Cosby Show." For example: what should Michael and Hope do when they cannot find a babysitter? Tragic. This so-called drama is nothing more than a whine-off for annoying yuppies.

"A Different World," NBC: College life never seemed so boring. Lisa Bonet does not have the screen presence to carry a show, and even though some of the supporting players are good, they are saddled with weak scripts. The cast and the audience deserve better.

Now that the season is over, the big question is: will next year be any better? Tune in this fall to find out.

Cheap Trick sings in Lap of Luxury

By JACK KOLMANSBERGER
Staff Reporter

Lap of Luxury
Cheap Trick
Epic Records
½

Throughout the band's history, Cheap Trick has managed to entertain through the use of catchy tunes and a distinctive guitar sound. Cheap Trick has never intended their songs to do anything but entertain. Therefore, if you want music with a deep message, you had better get a Sting album. But if you want to hear some very listenable, fun music, Cheap Trick could be the ticket.

Lap of Luxury is Cheap Trick's recent release. This album, their first in several years, features a change in the band's lineup. Original bassist Tom Petersson returns to Trick after a hiatus; Petersson plays the 12-string bass; Robin Zander uses his extraordinary vocal range to the fullest on every track.

On guitar is Rick Nielson, whois noted for wearing funny little caps and playing a huge assortment of gimmicky guitars. Anchoring the band is the solid drummer Bun E. Carlos. Carlos will never win a solo contest, but he is certainly a fun, competent drummer.

A change from earlier albums is the fact that only three songs were written solely by members of the band. The other songs are either cover-versions or songs co-written by Nielson and a non-band member. In the past, with the exception of covers such as "Ain't That a Shame" on the classic Live At Budoken album, the band members handled their own song-writing.

Side One opens up with "Let Go." This song is a cliched look at ending a relationship. It is a catchy, upbeat song and is highlighted by Nielson's searing guitar riffs. "No Mercy" follows and features Zander sounding very much like U2's Bono. The drum and bass lines dominate the sound, with Nielson again providing some rough licks on guitar.

"The Flame" is the first single to be released. Perhaps the best song on the album, "The Flame" is a slow number and Zander sings it very well. Although this is not a guitar-dominated song, the video gave Nielson a chance to showboat his extensive guitar collection collection, including a heavy five-necked guitar and another that looks like a saxophone.

A smooth cover version of "Space" is next. This song was most recently done by Charlie Sexton on his debut album. Its

(Continued on page 26)

Missionaries

(Continued from page 21)

Street Beat. Philadelphia radio and Philadelphia bands should work together in order to improve the area's music scene."

One aspect that stands out in the Missionaries' music is that the band avoids using anything synthetic. Quigley said, "We would like to use piano sometime, but we're not into synthesizers." John Valentine continued, "I like collecting shakers and castanets which add a different sound, but I shy away from drum machines." The Missionaries' style calls to mind the raunchy sound of The Rolling Stones.

The Missionaries plan to give music their best shot before they fall back on their college degrees for a job. Wronoski stated, "My original plan was to be an engineer, but I have to go for the music while I'm still young." Valentine concluded, "I'd hate to come home when I'm an old man and know that I never really went for it."

The Missionaries are currently building up strong support in Philadelphia, and they would like to expand into other areas. Definitely check the Missionaries out when they play a town near you. Philadelphia has produced several Cinderella stories, and the Missionaries may well be the next one.

Happy 21st Birthday Lisa Ani!
Hope it's as special as you are!
Love, Sam
XO

CONGRATULATES their new initiates!

Joni Altmeyer
Diana Barton
Andrea Battista
Andrea Begley
Karen Bergmueller
Sue Berkman
Susan Berrettini
Megan Boylan
Christine Brualdi
Cindy Buch
Sheila Callaghan
Courtney Chester
Susan Corcoran
Christine Donohue
Kerry Donovan
Heather Duggan
Amy Early
Regina Finn
Heather Flick
Pam Foody
Robyn Frohlin
Patty Guenin
Eileen Hageney
Bridget Hughes
Andrea Ianniello
Kelly Jordan
Amy Koterski
Kelley Madigan
Catherine Mahoney
Cindy Malonoski
Maria Massimino
Kristina Maxwell
Kathryn McCarthy
Jessica Meredith
Teri Messenger
Kathy Neary
Erin Nolan
Katie O'Brien
Alicia Poretta
Claudine Rippa
Andrea Roehl
Gia Rys
Jennifer Scannell
Lynda Seller
Mindy Sica
Lisa Smith
Tricia Tarantolo
Claudia Tarradellas
Aimee Thomas
Vanessa Warzynski
Roseanne Watson
Andrea White
Jennifer Wickes

We love you!

Friendly Floppies . . . .

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

FERRARI FORMULA ONE ELECTRONIC ARTS AMIGA

Ferrari Formula One is the second entry in Electronic Arts' Sports Legends series and ends up being the best racing game to come out lately. This racing simulation goes for realism, making you assemble your car from scratch and put it through its paces. Mauro is your computerized crew chief in Ferrari Formula One and helps you to make choices in car parameters, from engine and tires to gearbox and suspension. You race with the mouse and control all elements of the game with the mouse and optional keyboard keystrokes.

There are 16 tracks available and a full Grand Prix circuit can be played. You have full control over every element of the race, from when to make a pit stop to trying your Ferrari out in the wind tunnel or on the test track. The race sequence follows the real pattern of practice and qualifying races. Excellent graphics appear also.

GLOBAL COMMANDER DATASOFT C64/128

This game is unique because of the ego trip it gives you in your goal. In Global Commander, you are basically the person assigned to watch over the entire world, which is made up of 16 nations in the United Nuclear Nation (UNN). You have one major objective: to keep the world from destroying itself in a nuclear war. To do this, you must get along with each country, help the UNN nations get along with each other, fulfill every nation's needs and give everyone military security.

All game operations are accomplished with an icon interface. You use satellites to monitor nations and stop missiles, communicate with nations and assign the UNN task force. Graphics are great and aid you in your goal of world peace. You also monitor nations with radio and game play is made even easier with a map and counters to move around the map.

POWER AT SEA
½ ACCOLADE C64/128

Recently, not too many WWII games have been released. Most battles of that war have already been committed to disk. Power at Sea lets you relive the Battle for Leyte Gulf, but in a fun way — not like boring war games. In this action game, you must command a fleet of battleship, aircraft carrier, troop ship and fighter bombers. The goal is to destroy four Japanese shore bases. In the process, defense from air strikes and Japanese gunboats must be successful.

The fleet is commanded from the bridge and four stations (communication, navigation, damage and weapons) must be monitored. Graphics are standard Accolade fare — colorful and well animated. The action is fast in Power at Sea and the goal is challenging. Be prepared to switch from plane to ship and fire your big guns. A descriptive manual helps you in your goal to beat the Japanese.

RETURN TO ATLANTIS
½ ELECTRONIC ARTS AMIGA

This game has been in the process of creation for a few years and the result is a very carefully crafted role-playing adventure. The bulk of Return to Atlantis takes place in the sea, with your character taking part in all kinds of missions, from finding treasure to searching for Atlantis itself. The game is entirely mouse-controlled and the user interface is a unique set of controls, menus and boxes. The graphics are superb and stereo sound and synthesized speech are well developed as well.

After creating a character with unusual attributes like telepathy and programming, the game moves to the ocean, where you follow commands from ART, the ship's computer. To aid you in your journeys, a remote-controlled robot named RUF helps in tight situations. Return to Atlantis is tough to master, but the individuality of the game more than makes up for it.

BREAKTHRU DATA EAST C64/128

Once again, Data East has captured all of the excitement of one of their arcade games for the home computer market. Break-Thru puts you in charge of retrieving the PK430 secret fighter plane from the enemy and flying it back to your own base. To help you in your mission, a special vehicle is at your disposal. You must use your vehicle to make it through different terrain to reach the plane. The different terrain you will encounter are: mountains, bridges, prairies, cities and the enemy airfield.

BreakThru is a tough game to finish, especially because if you mess up, the game starts you at the beginning of the nearest checkpoint in the game. Sometimes, these checkpoints are far away from where you are and you have to repeat more difficult areas. However, the action is fast and the graphics are excellent. Just remember to get the parachute when it comes out.

PANZER STRIKE!
½ SSI C64/128, AP

Panzer Strike! is the most incredible combination war game and construction set that deals with WWII. The armies that can be pitted against each other in this game are the Germans, British and Russians. Wars can be fought in the Eastern Bloc countries, in the Western Front and in Northern Africa. The game is fully contained on two disks and features various scenarios for playing or modification. The most important thing about Panzer Strike! is the amount of detail that is put into the various units and variables in the game.

The war game will make you feel as if you are actually in the midst of a battle because of the attention to detail made in the game. You can deploy tanks and guns instead of just battalions and regiments. Terrain affects conditions as well. There are two manuals full of information with Panzer Strike!. Be ready for a heated battle!

W K V U Top 20

April 9	April 28
9.	1	Morrissey "Sued Head" (Sire-Reprise)
1.	2	Sinead O'Connor "Mandinka" (Chrysalis)
2.	3.	Woodentops "Maybe It Won't Last" (Columbia)
3.	4.	Midnight Oil "Beds Are Burning" (Columbia)
7.	5.	Robyn Hitchcock and the Egyptians "Balloon Man" (A & M)
5.	6.	Public Image Limited "Seattle" (Virgin)
4.	7.	INXS "Devil Inside" (Atlantic)
10.	8.	New Order "Touched by the Hand of God" (Qwest-WB/Giant)
8.	9.	Talking Heads "(Nothing But) Flowers" (Fly/Sire-WB)
15.	10.	Mighty Lemon Drops "Inside Out" (Sire-Reprise)
7.	11.	Cure "Hot, Hot, Hot!" (Elektra)
11.	12.	Church "Under the Milky Way" (Arista)
12.	13.	Godfathers "Birth, School, Work, Death" (Epic)
13.	14.	David Sylvian "Orpheus" (Virgin)
14.	15.	Sonic Youth "Beat on the Brat" (SST)
32.	16.	Sisters of Mercy "Lucretia/My Reflection" (Elektra)
16.	17.	Firehouse "Sometimes" (SST)
17.	18.	T-Bone Burnett "Killing Moon" (Columbia)
18.	19.	Crazy House "Burning Rain" (Chrysalis)
33.	20.	Pay Attention "Dust" (Diana)

Entertainment Calendar

Music

Ambler Cabaret
43 East Butler Pike
Ambler, Pa.
215-646-4727
April 29 — Britny Fox with Dirty Looks
April 30 — Matthew Kelly's Kingfish
May 3 — Stinger
May 7 — Flamin' Caucasians

Chestnut Cabaret
38th and Chestnut streets
215-382-1202
April 30 — The Dead Milkmen
May 1 — The Dead Milkmen (All ages show)
May 3 — Smithereens

23 E. Cabaret
23 E. Lancaster Ave.
Ardmore, Pa.
215-898-6791
April 29 — Tommy Conwell and the Young Rumblers
April 30 — The Daves with John Fritz Project
May 3 — WKVU College Night
May 6 — Ben Vaughn with Ocean Blue

Valley Forge Music Fair
Route 202
Devon, Pa. 19333
215-644-5000
April 29 — George Carlin

Theater

Annenberg Center
University of Pennsylvania
3680 Walnut St.
Philadelphia, Pa.
215-898-6791
May 25-29 — Philadelphia International Theater Festival For Children

Philadelphia Festival Theatre for New Plays
3900 Chestnut St.
Philadelphia, Pa.
215-222-5000
April 29, 30 — Soulful Scream of a Chosen Son

Latest literary releases reviewed

By JOE McGOWAN
Senior Reporter

2061: Odyssey Three
Arthur C. Clarke
Ballantive Books
279 pp.
* * * *

From the Pasteur Space Hospital orbiting earth, a veteran astronaut eagerly awaits sight of comet Halley's return. The year is 2061 and this particular astronaut has been chosen for a special team that will make a rendezvous with Halley.

The astronaut is Heywood Floyd, who, at 103 years of age, has outlived the expectations of most readers of the Space Odyssey cycle of Arthur C. Clarke. Floyd is permanently confined to the 1/6 Earth gravity of orbiting space stations and ships for the sake of health, but his wits are every bit as sharp as ever.

The first half of 2061: Odyssey Three deals with the Halley rendezvous. Here Clarke provides a fascinating, if speculative, look at what a landing on this object might encounter. In an ice cave on Halley there seems to have been some sign of life detected, but a distress call draws the team to the vicinity of Europa..

Anyone who has seen or read 2010 knows that the Jovian satellite Europa is off-limits to human beings, according to the messages sent by the mysterious powers beind the monoliths. Between 2010 and 2061 much has changed — Hewood's son was killed in a space accident, most of the Discovery project's personnel have also died, and Ganymede, a neighbor of Europa, has been fully colonized (its inhabitants are known, sometimes disdainfully, as "Medes").

The rescue mission to Europa has an especial urgency for Heywood — his grandson Chris was on the mission that "accidentally" crashed on the forbidden plant. As Clarke is wont to do, political speculation has found its way into his latest novel. This time the political crisis is over South Africa, now the United States of South Africa, a black-ruled confederacy. Boer exiles have formed their own secret terrorist organization (much like the contemporary Broderbund) to subvert the fledgling African nation.

This rivalry finds its way into space, as did the Central American crisis in 2010. The rescue on Europa finally sheds some light, but not much, on just who is behind the monoliths. And the destruction of Jupiter, the birth of the second sun Lucifer, produced a startling effect on Europa.

Although the revelation of the beings behind the monoliths may disappoint some readers, Clarke is to be credited this time around for making Heywood Floyd such a powerful character in 2061. Clarke has concentrated his energies in giving life to Heywood, and his characterization is often quite perceptive and sensitive, such as when Floyd becomes engrossed in painful memories of play as a child — memories difficult for a man who has outlived all of his friends and coworkers.

Belfast Diary: War As A Way of Life
John Conroy
Beacon Press
218 pp.
* * * *

Based on his 1980-85 stay in Northern Ireland, John Conroy's Belfast Diary offers one of the most striking portaits of a conflict that has involved not only the Irish themselves, but Irish-Americans as well. Conroy, a correspondent for the Chicago Daily News and contributor to the New York Times Magazine, lived quietly in the Clonard section of west Belfast's Catholic ghetto to get some notion of how the civil war influenced the average person in Northern Ireland.

Conroy's choice of Clonard provided him an intimate, and dangerous view of the workings of a civil war. A wall of corrugated iron divided Catholic Clonard from Protestant Shankill and even stronger barriers divide the people psychologically. While the majority of the people feel caught in a struggle over which they have little control, (one which the British, even if not solely responsible for what has come to be called "The Troubles," have managed to make worse after the collapse of the Northern Irish Stourmont government after the 1969 riots), many nonetheless line up with the side of either the Irish Republican Army (IRA) or the government or the Ulster Defense Association (UDA) or some other Protestant equivalent of the IRA.

Since the activities of the IRA and, to a lesser extent, the UDA, have focused world attention on the Northern Ireland conflict, must of Belfast Diary is preoccupied with incidents involving the two. Divisions exist even among thse organizations; between the IRA and the Irish National Liberation Army (INLA) and the Provisional IRA ("Provos"), and between radical Protestant factions in the UDA and the Reverend Ian Paisley's Third Force.

The Reverend Paisley is one of the prominent characters portrayed in the book. A militant Protestant Unionist (those who favor union with the United Kingdom), Paisley is considered by the North's Catholics to be the single most important recruiter for the IRA next to British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher. The Reverend Robert Bradford, another Northern Protestant MP in the Paisley school, at the funeral of hunger striker Bobby Sands told Conroy that he enjoyed the spectacle. Bradford, like many other Protestant extremists, took great delight in the funerals of "Taigs" ("Taig" is a perjorative term for Catholics) and hoped to see more. More hunger strikers would die, but so would Reverend Bradford, by an IRA assassin's bullet.

Conroy's stay in Belfast coincided with one of the most widely reported events of the decades — old war — the hunger strike by inmates of the Maze penitentiary. Though the IRA man Bobby Sands received the most media attention, ten strikers in all died (seven from the IRA, three from the INLA). The hunger strikers' quest for political prisoner status fizzled due to pressure from the families of the dead and dying strikers and the race riots in Liverpool and Brixton back in Britain..

It was in the midst of the riots that the British Defense Minister said that his forces would refrain from using the dreaded plastic bullets since he felt that they were lethal — a concern never raised over the frequent use and deadly effectiveness of the bullets by the Royal Ulster Constabulary (RUC) and the British occupying forces in Northern Ireland. As Conroy noted in Belfast Diary, to the Thatcher regime Norther Ireland may as well have been in the South Pacific for all the concern it raised on Downing Street.

While Belfast Diary carefully plots the devices and means by which Catholics are daily harrassed, another side of the story also unfolds. Every war needs at least two active participants and the war in Northern Ireland is no exception. The IRA, particularly the "Provos," rank with the world's best terrorist organizations in terms of cruelty and force. Their operations have often commandeered cars and houses of neighboring Catholics, and such tactics have often jeopardized their native support — until the Protestants manage to pull off some atrocity of their own.

The most pleasing point of Belfast Diary is that its scope is that of "The Neighborhood." Events such as the Twelfth of July (a raucous celebration by Protestants of William's victory in the Battle of the Boyne), or the deaths of the hunger strikers are shown as they affect the neighbors, from Conroy's landlady Mrs. Barbour to the area "Provo" commander. The chief success of Belfast Diary is the translation of what is, in the press, an amorphous conflict, into human and understandable terms.

Conroy's sensitive portrait of, in particular, several neighborhood youths, makes their fortunes and misfortunes all the more vivid. Many of these, educated in a substandard system for a future with no work, end up being "knee-capped." "Kneecappings" are the punitive procedure by which the IRA and UDA keep local troublemakers in line — the accused is shot through each knee at close range. His subsequent handicap and use of crutches is supposed to provide a living example of what will happen to those who step out of line (when Conroy revisited Northern Ireland for the last time some "Provos" had increased the penalty and were simply shooting suspected troublemakers through the head).

Belfast Diary has lighter moments as well. One is Conroy's account of the quiet Argentinian sculptor who rented the apartment above his — several months later this Argentine, Adolfo Perez Esquivel, would win the Nobel Peace Price. Another is that of a community organizer's plan to reduce the phenomenon of "joy-riding" (stealing a car and running it at a high speed through an army checkpoint) among Belfast youths. The organizer suggested setting up a public race course for the youths, since such a program had been successful in Britain in channelling the energies of your car thieves into more legal enterprises. A detractor had spoken out that such a program was doomed to failure since for the Belfast youths racing along would not provide enough excitement — they would need the additional sport of having someone fire automatic weapons at them as they raced.

What Belfast Diary points to time and again is the inculcation of violence in the generations that have been born into the conflict. As Conroy noted after witnessing a Protestant re-enactment of the battle of the Boyne, the war could go on for generations more since both sides have been at it for so long that neither needs any practice.

Midnight Oil album

(Continued from page 21)

as soon as the rest of the band sings, too.

Aside from Garret's voice (and one does get used to it after a few listens) and sing-speak verses, this is a hard hitting album. No song is a "nothing" song. Midnight Oil, much like U2, has built a reputation for writing about issues and Diesel and Dust lives up to that.

Lead singer Garret is very involved in protesting nuclear weapons and being an activist for environmental issues. Diesel and Dust has songs of a wider scope, however. In a recorded interview from Columbia Records, called Interchords, Garret described the album.

"This is a record that's about the experiences that five people have had in their own country ... [it's a] collection of songs with themes that are responses of the writers."

Almost every song is about Australia: the aborigines ("Beds Are Burning," "Dead Heat," "Bullroarer"), different parts of the country that the band saw while on tour ("Warakurna," "Dreamworld") or the landscape ("Sometimes"). Non-Aussies can appreciate this album, even if they are not totally familiar with Australian-society issues, because the ideas are self-explantory. The music is just good solid rock. There is a lot of tight guitar work, with violins and horns interwoven.

"Sell My Soul," is a good dance tune; "Dreamworld" is a song that you will find yourself singing long after the album is off your turntable; "Bullroarer" has great desert imagery in its lyrics, "in the desert in the dry/ sun sits so high/long day's mile and the/ radio crackles and the bones bleached white." Hirst, the drummer, said the band was trying to get the, "great quiet of the desert on this album ... (the) enormity of the skies ... (the) colors."

Diesel and Dust uses the colors of Australia, its people and its problems, to paint an album. It has its flaws, but the lyrics and originality of this album make up for it.

Richard & Company
UNISEX HAIR STYLES
773 E. Lancaster Ave., Villanova
527-2080
Villanova Student Discounts
(On tanning, perming, coloring & more!)
Open Mon. thru Sat. (Wed. & Thurs. Evenings)
Appointments Requested

ALPHA PHI WELCOMES
THEIR FIRST PLEDGE CLASS AS THEIR NEW SISTERS!!

Cathy Austin
Lynne Ayotte
Jeanine Bambino
Anne Behan
Danielle Bianchini
Michelle Bogosian
Stacey Breen
Suzanne Burke
Lisa Capestro
Danielle Carbonara
Cindy Clabbers
Christine Cresanti
Marie Dancheck
Anne DiCerchio
Kate Donovan
Jeannine Feneran
Susan Greenwood
Melissa Hamel
Tania Harkess
Debbie Hedin
Janet Hill
Jennifer Hoffman
Lil Hoyas
Evin Krouse
Lisa LaCorte
Kathleen Lamberty
Lisa Lejeune
Anne Marie Lombardi
Mary Loughman
Kristin Maitland
Stephanie Manzella
Jill Mathews
Kristin Mosher
Eilleen McCaffrey
Collette Nally
Laura Novak
Christine O'Connor
Donna Phillips
Jennifer Reda
Julie Rowley
Tracey Setlock
Tara Siligato
Kim Simonton
Sandi Stanger
Kerry Stromberg
Lisa Sturman
Joan Tebeau
Candi Thompson
Mary Tierney
Gretchen Wetherall
Leah Weisel

Pretty Girls examines modern college life

By VICKI DISTEFANO
Staff Reporter

Pretty Girls
Garret Weyr
Crown Publishers
*

Pretty Girls is the ugly tale of three neurotic college students whose chronic complaining makes up the bulk of this tedious novel. Garret Weyr has successfully poured her personal demons into 213 venom packed pages.

Chapel Hill College, North Carolina, is Weyr's alma mater and the setting of Pretty Girls. The central characters are a trio of girls who call themselves "the Amazon Club" because their appearances do not conform to southern standards of attractiveness, and because they are defensive about their intellectualism, which they erroneously assume to be socially unacceptable in a female. The girls blame these two attributes, unconventional looks and uncommon intelligence, for their misery and resort to ridiculous antics to vent their anger.

Weyr actually feels sorry for the pathetic monsters she has created and fails to recognize their shallowness. It is impossible to muster sympathy for such a vile group of spoiled, superficial cynics. It is a comfort to know that, in a world where human tragedies like cancer and AIDS run rampant, there are people whose most serious afflictions are their rejections by other worthless people. Who really wants to read a novel about their self-induced neuroses?

Penelope is perpetually frustrated because she habitually sleeps with homosexual men. She cannot understand why they will not date her. This misfortune only serves to ignite her nymphomania, which she claims is her revenge against her father. Why she holds malice for Dad, an ambassador whose liberal allowances enable his daughter to frivolously waste money on hackneyed hairdos and the like (only to complain in later chapters that she detests her looks) remains to be explained.

Caroline is just as despicable as Penelope. She is enraged because her boyfriend left her and anyone unfortunate enough to be in her immediate vicinity falls victim to her vile demeanor. Her abandonment is no mystery because she is one of the most wretched, whining complainers this side of Joan Rivers

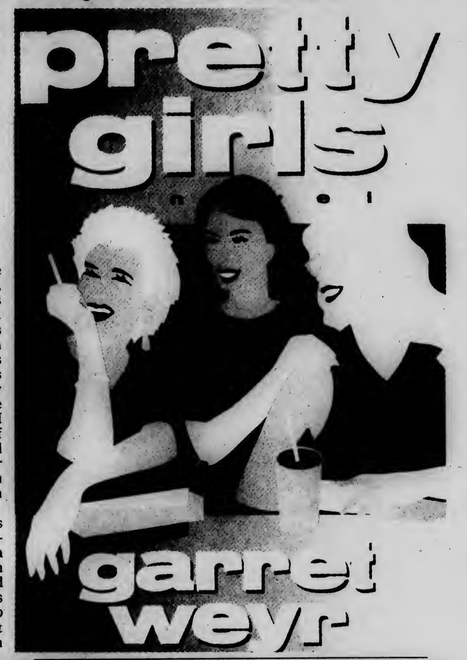
Alex, whom Weyr modeled after herself, is a loud-mouthed ogre of dubious sexual orientation. She is insanely jealous of anyone suspected of having a good time. Alex sports five earrings, not unlike plenty of other collegians, but so many superfluous paragraphs are devoted to them that the earrings attain the prominence of an additional character in the book.

The Amazons are not just bad apples, they are rotten to the core. These allegedly brilliant girls are forever demonstrating their abysmal ignorance. They are convinced that their self-inflicted problems are everybody else's fault. They are incapable of accepting responsibility for their actions or making attempts to amend their lives. One of the most laughable hypocrisies is their condemnation of all males. The girls are infuriated that the men they like do not return their interest because they are not "pretty" enough. Yet, the threesome's sole criteria in judging guys is their looks. They feel that they are entitled to the best looking guys, who are not expected to be concerned about the way that they look. How is that for a twisted double standard?

Another crippling aspect of the book is the way that Weyr perpetuates the primitive mentality of the Amazons. During promotional interviews, she clarified her intention to bring to light the plight of women who do not fit society's stereotypes of the female gender. Weyr's mission backfires.

After reading Pretty Girls, one might assume from their erratic behavior that these "exceptional women" are all suicidal, nymphomaniac, bulimic, neurotic, lesbian men-haters.

Alex, whom Weyr modeled after herself, is a loud-mouthed ogre of dubious sexual orientation.



Particularly annoying to the reader is Weyr's style, or rather, lack thereof. It is painfully obvious that Pretty Girls is her first novel.

The conversational sequences are mass confusion and it is a challenge to differentiate who is saying what. Dialogue sounds contrived and foreign to the way most college students speak. The Amazons overuse the phrase "I love you" amongst themselves. If every "I love you" were extracted from the text and lumped together at the end, the consolidation would be long enough to form an extra chapter.

Weyr employs cheap gimmicks in ill-fated attempts at sensationalism. The jacket cover lists a potpurri of modern issues, such as pregnancy, homosexuality and suicide, but none of these topics exists in print long enough to make any impact. It seems that the author wrote an attention getting sleeve paragraph, then decides at the last minute to insert these ideas into the text.

The repetitious use of song lyrics is trite, and lends the novel about as much profound meaning as a barroom conversation.

Weyr's greatest accomplishment in regards to Pretty Girls is her ability to find a publisher for this fictitious travesty. Coincidentally, she is the daughter of a literary agent. Her mother would have been wise to advise her to more appropriately retitle this book, "Mad at the World," "I Hate Men," "Life Rots," or "Whine, Whine, Whine."

Coming in September
the
USED BOOK EXCHANGE
Aug. 31 to Sept. 9
ALUMNI GYM
Sell Old Books For Cash
Buy Used Books At Low Prices
Remember to bring your used books back to school next semester.
Sponsored by Student Government

Money and Class In America intrigues

By JIM CROSSAN
Staff Reporter

Money and Class in America
by Lewis H. Lapham
Weidenfeld & Nicolson
Scarlet and Black
Virgin Records
★★★½

Lewis H. Lapham, an intelligent and humorous journalist, has analyzed Money and Class In America and, having been surrounded by wealthy people throughout his life, has discovered some terrifying conclusions. Consider some of the following quotes he uses to begin his creatively titled chapters: "The rich are like ravening wolves, who, having once tasted human flesh, henceforth desire and devour only men." (Jean-Jacques Rousseau); "Whoever expects to walk peacefully in the world must be money's guest." (Norman O. Brown); "To stay rich, people must be nearer to the dead than the living." (Stephen Vizinczey), to name just a disturbing few.

Lapham tells us these elite describe happiness as ". . . the feeling of suspension in a world" outside of time."

When conversing with a lawyer, Lapham is told the pathetic story of a woman, who after many additions to her house, is still unsatisfied. "She needs the icebox (in the bathroom) to chill the cologne. She said that there is nothing so unpleasant as to step out of a bath on a warm day and have to wear tepid cologne." Shame, shame!

This insightful book nestles in the 'equestrian class' and sees the world from this position, rarely looking at the lower levels of society. Lapham tells us these elite describe happiness as ". . . the feeling of suspension in a world outside of time." It is as if they had inherited the Fountain of Youth from a grandparent. This group is offered no reason for growing old, except getting richer.

The children who are born into money, as was Lapham, feel that nothing else is required of them. Obviously, Lapham had other ideas, but, when talking to a Duke University student, he found this response: "It seems like all we [other students] talk about is money . . . it is really important to be comfortable, and you can't be comfortable without money."

Although these elite may enjoy the hedonistic bathing in the carefree fountain, as most of us probably would, towel off!

In a 1905 newspaper William K. Vanderbilt stated, "Inherited wealth is a big handicap to happiness. It is certain death to ambition as cocaine to marility." Most of this 'equestrian class' is involved in the purchasing of self-esteem, and it was this behavior that surrounded Lapham and makes this book so interesting. Sorry, Alex P. Keaton, but the watery happiness you seek is only a mirage, which has already captured many.

Money and Class In America knows no bounds, and soon finds itself stepping on the feet of the Declaration of Independence. Americans feel if they could double their possessions, they would achieve the American Dream promised in the Declaration of Independence.

Lapham has seen this predicament and suggests once an American doubles his estate, he will not be content until it is done again, and again. The rich man clings to his money as if it were life itself! Lapham is seeking a change in the trends of America, and believes the rich attain a "desire for exclusivity" and essentially distort the ideal, all men are created equal.

He goes on to say, ". . . freedom is a privilege fully available only to those who can afford it." Americans place so much value on money that we are the only nation who actually wash our money.

This is a book well worth the time spent reading it and depicts a scene of a class we all look at with lust.

Americans must view both sides of the spectrum of money; one being the dissipation of reality and ignorance of others around you, while also giving the rich man pleasures most others, including Robin Leach, could not enjoy. Psychiatrists who deal with many Wall Street bankers have come to the conclusion, "An 'injection' of money can make people feel instantly secure, victorious, strong, loved, proud and sexually attractive. Money becomes the antidote of a perceived sense of insufficiency." This sense is exploited throughout this entire book.

Money, it seems, intensifies a need, instead of satisfying a want. Lapham noticed Europeans wondering why a country such as ours borrows so much money for superfluous gifts. A lesson is to be learned from a man whose fortune is well known, Rockefeller, "I know of nothing more despicable and pathetic than a man who devotes all the hours of the waking day to the making of money for money's sake."

Lapham wants a change in all people, not just the rich. He states if we were rich, we would act like the rich, therefore a change is needed in the lower classes' views of the rich as well.

He has courageously attacked the media, the Eastern Establishment's prestige press, and both political parties for their gluttonous behavior in terms of money. This is a book well worth the time spent reading it, and depicts a scene of a class we all look at with lust.

College students are often sucked into conformity with a narcissistic view on money and class, whereas money becomes an end within itself. "I never knew how poor I was until I had a little money," says a New York banker.

This book is easily qualified to be used as required reading in business classes, and to end this review of an excellent book by an extraordinary author, here is a quote from the bookseller Rault in a letter to his brother in 1786: "Curl yourselves up tightly in your little den, let the madmen get on with their folly, and let us try to remain simple spectators when the hollow mountain, that groans beneath the weight of all these thousands of brainless fools who are crawling over it, finally comes crashing down."

Cheap Trick album

(Continued from page 22)

inclusion on this album is a surprise, albeit a pleasant one. Side One closes with a Zander/Petersson song called "Never Had a Lot to Lose." This is the best rocker of the album. Vocals are traded between Zander and Petersson with background harmony "whoa-oas" for added effect. Nielson finally does a little jamming on guitar. Everything falls into place well, and the song sounds like something you would expect from Cheap Trick.

Side Two opens with a cover of Elvis' "Don't Be Cruel." Once again, Zander's voice works perfectly, while Petersson trades bass lines for Nielson's guitar riffs. While it may be questionable for Cheap Trick to cover Elvis, it does work out well. "The Wrong Side of Love" is the least appealing song on the album. However, Nielson's guitar playing does make the song listenable. "All We Need is a Dream" showcases Zander's vocals. The song itself is very enjoyable until the end when the chorus is repeated over and over. Nielson does manage to stick a decent little solo in the middle of the repetition. A slower, dreamy-sounding "Ghost Town" follows. This is also a song about lost love but takes a different view than "Let Go." The album closes with "All Wound Up." Once again, this is a distinctive Cheap Talk song. Nielson really jams on this song, the only one where he really dominates.

While Lap of Luxury may not be as their 1979 classic The Dream Police, it is a solid album. The album contains many different styles. The one common link between the songs is that they are all basically good songs that you will enjoy listening to. Zander's vocals shine, Nielson's guitar is full of bite. Petersson is a master on the bass, and Bun E. Carlos is his usual solid-self. All in all, Cheap Trick's new album is enjoyable and worth purchasing.

HAPPY
21st BIRTHDAY
LYNN!!!

DAEDALUS
EDUCATION SERVICES
LSAT
Now At Villanova!
GO FOR IT!
GRE • GMAT • LSAT
GUARANTEED SCORES, or YOU
Repeat Your Test Course Free.
CALL
215-449-6911

Scintilly of California
California Fashions!
Sensational!
Unique!
Featuring
Swimwear
Sportswear
and Accessories
1 KNOLLBROOK CIRCLE, MALVERN, PA.
640-0452
Located off of New Lane between Swedesford Rd. and Rt. 401
Just seconds from Rt. 202
Why Not Call For An Appointment Today!
"THE BOUTIQUE WITH A DIFFERENCE"

Two veteran bands offer new releases

By TOM CHRISTMAN
Staff Reporter

Savage Amusement
Scorpions
Polygram Records
★★

If you are in the mood for mindless, repetitive, head banging heavy metal, Savage Amusement by the Scorpions should suffice. Expectations for this album have been high since it has been over four years since their last album, Love at First Sting. Included in this platinum album were the chart busters "Rock You Like a Hurricane" and "Big City Nights."

The Scorpions, a German band, is composed of lead singer Klaus Meine, lead guitarist Rudolf Schenker, rhythm guitarist Matthias Jabs, Bassist Francis Buchholz and Herman Rarebell on drums.

"Rhythm of Love," the albums first single is well done. However, one quickly realizes that any of the other seven hard driving songs sound remarkably similar. Unfortunately, the lyrics repeat as much as the rhythms. The love theme inherent in many heavy metal albums is present in Savage Amusement. "Passion Rules the Game," "Love on the Run," and the rock ballad "Believe in Love" glorify quick easy love, which most prefer to call casual sex.

Savage Amusement does have a few redeeming qualities. The song writing is solid, as is the overall sound quality of the album. Blazing guitar solos throughout the album by Rudolf Schenker, prove once again that he is one of heavy metal's finest guitarists.

In light of their last album, Love at First Sting, Savage Amusement is quite disappointing. Loyal fans with great expectations will most certainly be let down. The overall quality of this album is as pathetic as the cover design.

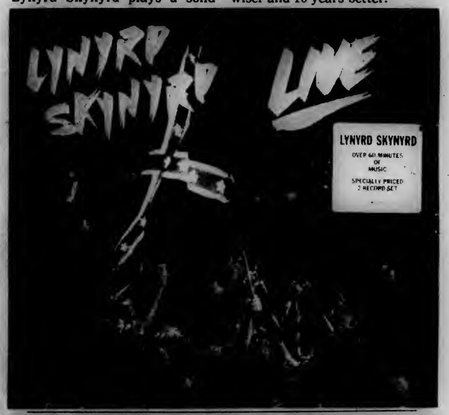
Lynyrd Skynyrd Live
Lynyrd Skynyrd
MCA Records
★★★½

Back in the saddle and better than ever, Lynyrd Skynyrd rocks America with their live tribute album, Southern by the Grace of God. This double album set is dedicated to the memory of former lead singer Ronnie Van Zant and guitarist Steve Gaines, who died in a plane crash along with several crew members in 1977. After this tragedy, which occurred during their peak of fame and fortune, Lynyrd Skynyrd suddenly collapsed.

Emerging after a decade of silence, in 1987 Lynyrd Skynyrd reunited to do a tribute tour in memory of their lost friends. Southern by the Grace of God documents the energy and enthusiasm of Lynyrd Skynyrd's latest tour.

With 10 members, Lynyrd Skynyrd appears to be a small organization rather than a band. This live album marks the first time guitarist Gary Rossington, keyboardist Billy Powell, bassist/vocalist Leon Wilkeson, drummer Artemus Pyle, and guitarist Ed King have played together since the band's break-up in the mid '70s. Jonny Van Zant, brother of the late Ronnie Van Zant, took over as lead vocalist and did a splendid job. Back-up vocals are by the sexy Carol Bristow and Dale Krantz Rossington.

Southern by the Grace of God has a crisp, clear sound despite that it was recorded live in Atlanta, Nashville and Dallas. Lynyrd Skynyrd has not changed much since their heyday. Their rhythm and blues-based rock is still executed with whole-hearted enthusiasm. Guest appearances by Charlie Daniels and Steve Morse note some high points in this concert album.

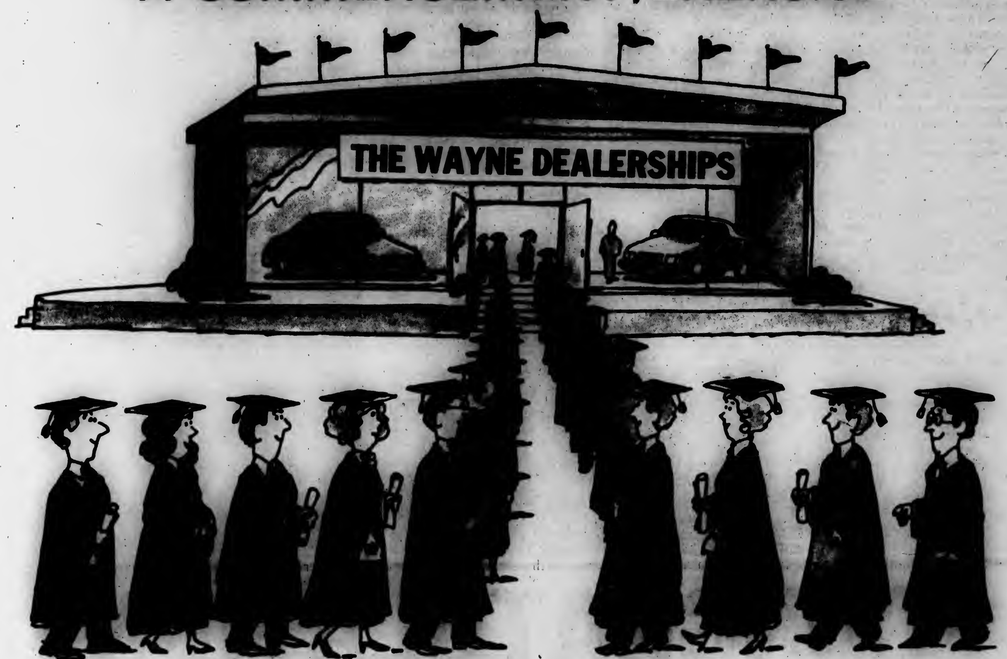


Southern by the Grace of God offers their fans an array of classic Skynyrd tunes. Crowd pleasers such as "That Smell," "You Got That Right," "What's Your Name?" and "Swamp Music" sound remarkably similar to when they were first recorded.

"Gimmee Back My Bullets," although it is less popular, is an excellent quick paced rhythm and blues song. The song's finale includes a roaring solo by guest guitarist Steve Morse, which brings this song some new energy. With the help of Charlie Daniels, Lynyrd Skynyrd plays a solid version of "Sweet Home Alabama." Included in this song are fantastic solos by Billy Powell on piano and Ed King on slide guitar.

The climactic instrumental version of "Freebird" takes up the whole fourth side of the album. When introducing the song, Jonny Van Zant states, "There's only one man who can sing this song on stage, that's Ronnie Van Zant. So I'm not gonna do it for you . . . it's up to you to do it." The concept of the audience singing has good intentions, but it does not work well.

Southern by the Grace of God is an overwhelming success. New and old fans alike will appreciate this album. Despite the passing of a decade, Lynyrd Skynyrd is still playing quality rock and roll. Keyboard player Billy Powell comments "Sure we're 10 years older now, but, we're also 10 years wiser and 10 years better!"



CONGRATULATIONS
TO ALL THE NEW KAO SISTERS!

Catherine Bowen
Tracey Boyle
Christine Casullo
Diane Cilione
Valerie Cilione
Sheila Cosgriff
Sue Cracraft
Lisa Delconte
Nancy Draghi
Mary Dugan
Sheila Dunleavy
Kelly Durkin
Noel Falco
Carol Filicetti
Sarina Giordano
Marisa Giurastante
Susan Glancey
Anne Grabowski
Eileen Grady
Cathy Healy
Cindy Hinrichs
Peggy Hudome
Karen Kahrman
Sharon Kavanaugh
Leigh Ann Keane
Judy Keating
Jackie Kuhnert
Colleen Lange
Jennifer Lundgren
Juliane Lynch
Kelly McGinley
Susan Mooney
Koleen Morris
Adriana Muolo
Tara Murphy
Kim Nader
Bethan Naples
Mary O'Neill
Laura Redding
Maureen Stapleton
Christine Sullivan
Lisa Tassone
Lauren Valuckas
Mary Waters
Karen Winter

CLASS OF '88
YOU'RE INVITED TO ATTEND A COMMENCEMENT EXERCISE

WHERE: THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS
WHEN: MARCH 1, 1988-DECEMBER 31, 1988
FOR: • PRE-APPROVED CREDIT FROM THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS
$400 CASH BONUS FROM THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS

* LEASING AVAILABLE
* PREFERRED INTEREST RATE
* EXTENDED TERM FINANCING
* MINIMAL DOWN PAYMENT

BUICK FORD DODGE

THE WAYNE DEALERSHIPS

OFFICIAL SPONSORS OF THE VILLANOVA WILDCATS

COURTESY WAYNE

Rollie suggests you see the people at the Wayne Dealerships to take advantage of this special offer to Villanova graduates.

ANTHONY WAYNE BUICK
233 E. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
688-4800

WAYNE FORD
325 E. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
964-9100

WAYNE DODGE
201 W. LANCASTER AVE.
WAYNE, PA.
687-4491

JUST ONE MILE WEST OF THE UNIVERSITY

For What It's Worth . . .Commentary

By BILL CARR
and MICHAEL AIMETTE
Staff Reporters

No, there was no INXS concert this spring at Villanova. Nor did any other band make an appearance on these sacred grounds this year. Did you ever notice that there are always concerts going on at other area schools like Penn and Temple? And not just any concerts, but good concerts. One of the best bands around, 10,000 Maniacs, played at Penn just this past weekend.

There are tons of very good, very interesting bands out there. Why is it that Villanova lets them all slip away? The last rock concert here was General Public, who came early last year. There were rumors last spring that the Psychedelic Furs would come, but like the INXS rumor, this piece of information proved insubstantial.

Villanova certainly has a reputation strong enough to attract bands to play here. And with the duPont Pavillion, we have certainly got the facilities. There is a lot of interest and enthusiasm among Villanova students for live music. Unfortunately, many bands who cater to college tastes play only at clubs in Philadelphia; not only are these clubs hard to get to without a car, but you must be 21 to get in them. Also, would not this school look more attractive to prospective students if it could boast of a strong social program, featuring, among other things, live concerts? Let us face it: people do look strongly at social life when considering which college to attend. A revamping of the concert policy at Villanova (or at least an extra burst of energy) would substantially benefit both the students and the University. Let us not be afraid to take risks, Villanova.

It is not exactly folk. It is not really punk. It is something completely original. It is the infamous Pogues with their latest album, If I Should Fall From Grace With God, and it is great. This band has always had a strange appeal — they play traditional Irish instruments (banjo, accordian, tin whistle, guitar), yet play them faster than most hardcore bands. The melodies tend to be pretty traditional-sounding Irish played in double-time and laced with every vulgarity you could imagine. One cut, "Bottle of Smoke," stands as a prefect example of a Pogues song — a great melody with absolutely unprintable lyrics. The first single "Fairytale of New York," shows another side of the Pogues, their interpretation of the plight of the Irish immigrant — a sad and poignant story.

Also, would not this school look more attractive to prospective students if it could boast of a strong social program, featuring, among other things, live concerts?

Lead singer/songwriter (and dentist's nightmare) Shane MacGowan blends anger, frustration, and humor into one brilliant drunken package; his lyrics only fuel the furious pace at which the rest of the band plays. And, like all good Irishmen, MacGowan never hesitates to take a few unfriendly swipes at England; "Let Englishmen fight English Wars, it's nearly time they started," he declares in "Medley." To be honest, The Pogues certainly are not for everyone, but if you want to hear what an authentic Irish rock band sounds like (sorry, U2) — this uncompromising group of drunken uglies is the real thing.

R.E.M. recently signed a major deal with Warner Brothers. The break from I.R.S. sounds like a potentially scary move; conglomerate record labels like Warner Bros. have a tendency to impose their will on a band, usually for the worse. But then again, these guys deserve the cash that this contract will bring. Will monetary success spoil the members of R.E.M.? Considering that Michael Stipe does not even own a car and Mike Mills drives a beat-up Chevy, it seems highly doubtful.

In 1986, an unknown New Haven, Connecticut band named Miracle Legion wrote a brilliant EP titled The Backyard, which contained seven emotional, well-crafted pop songs. After that auspicious debut, Rough Trade Records decided to sign Miracle Legion to their label, and, earlier this year, they released Surprise, Surprise, Surprise! as their first album. Lead singer and songwriter Mark Mulcahy is responsible for their reflective and uplifting song material, and he is not afraid to confess a definite reverence for an irretrievable past. His somewhat "therapeutic" lyrics have struck a responsive chord with listeners. He explains, "Some musicians can project thier music in such a way that it's comforting for whatever ails you; other music has done that for me, and I'm really glad to be able to do that for someone else." Miracle Legion, often compared to R.E.M., deal with real things (family, death, things past, etc.) and manage to convey a feeling of cheer while covering somber material. It is unfortunate that a band as good as Miracle Legion will probably never be heard by people who would ordinarily love them, but hopefully this vote of confidence will lead you to hunt down this excellent record.

Holocaust is remembered in new book

By JOE McGOWAN
Senior Reporter

The Drowned and the Saved
Primo Levi
Summit Books
203 pp.
* * * *½

The late Italian author Primo Levi has written of the Holocaust before — first in 1947 with Survival in Auschwitz and later in The Reawakening. A chemist by profession, Levi entered late into the literary world and won a series of literary prizes for his novel The Periodic Table. He has since been placed on a level with another late contemporary, Italo Calvino.

Levi's writings on the Holocaust have been considered among the most perceptive, sensitive and thoughtful ever penned on this difficult subject. An Italian Jew and anti-fascist activist deported to Auschwitz, Levi was able to survive largely because of his training as a chemist, since the Nazis could better exploit him while alive.

In The Drowned and The Saved, a series of essays, with titles such as "The Memory of the Offense," "The Gray Zone," "Shame" and "The Intellectual in Auschwitz," Levi conducts a post mortem on the Nazi era and its system of concentration camps, or Lagers. His analysis is painful for both author and reader because of the questions he asks and does not answer.

Memories of the Holocaust filter through The Drowned and the Saved, but throughout this, Levi's third book on the subject, is the search for who the Germans were, how the events that happened could have come about, and an examination of guilt and shame.

One of the most powerful commentaries made by Levi in this book is that on the "depression" felt by the Lager prisoners liberated by the Allies: "Coming out of the darkness, one suffered because of the reacquired consciousness of having been diminished ... I believe that it was precisely this turning to look back at the 'perilous water' that gave rise to so many suicides after (sometimes immediately after) liberation."

In the last chapter, "Letters from Germans," Levi presents samples of letters received from readers of the first German translation of his Survival in Auschwitz. Many of these thank him for writing the book, others beg him to understand their inability to refuse cooperation to the Nazi brutality. Some try to reply to his declared inability to understand the Germans. Others, Germans themselves, assert that they too did not understand the Germans. One reader even delivered a copy of his book to the imprisoned Albert Speer.

Levi painfully grapples with the notion of an entire nation that deliberately willed ignorance of such an atrocity: "Willingly or not we come to terms with power, forgetting that we are all in the ghetto, that the ghetto is walled in, that outside the ghetto reign the lords of death, and that close by the train is waiting."

The book opens ominously with the quotation from Coleridge's Ancient Mariner: "Since then, at an uncertain hour,/ That agony returns,/ And till my ghastly tale is told/ This heart within me burns." And the title The Drowned and the Saved refers to those that perished in the Lagers and those freed but overwhelmed by the experience and the memory of it. Levi was fast becoming an increasingly prominent literary figure in Europe when he died last April, apparently a suicide. It seems that the "drowned" include not only those that died in the Lagers.

Band is talented

By CINDY BOSNIAN
Staff Reporter

Walk This Way
Walk This Way
Polygram Records
***

Another new duo emerging with debut potential is Walk This Way (no relation to Aerosmith or Run D.M.C., thank God), consisting of songwriter/instrumentalists Greg Chapman and Paul Ring. The two first met in 1981 in Ring's L.A. recording studio but their musical differences — Ring as engineer and Chapman as creator — kept them separated until they were approached as a duo to write songs for a few artists.

Ring had previously worked with the likes of the Four Tops, the Temptations and Smokey Robinson as well as X and The Cramps. Meanwhile, Chapman was busy fronting various club bands, touring as a drummer with Stevie Wonder in Japan and working extensively with Club Nouveau and the Isley Brothers in a recent collaboration at Warner Bros. Records.

Soon the duo decided to produce a demo tape of their own, which resulted in the production of their just-released self-titled LP. This debut album offers a variety of musical styles, from somber ballads to danceable "get down and boogie" tunes.

The first single is a slow song entitled "In My Room" and features a melodic saxophone as it reflects on the past relationships we all think about when we are alone in our rooms. Definitely a strong contender for a first release, the song should prove fairly successful.

Synsonic drums pick up the tempo on the next number, "One Love," which along with "The Heat," with its funky bass lines, offer two of the more danceable songs on the album.

Probably the most interesting song and likely next single is "Save it for a Rainy Day." Basically a melancholy cut, a hopeful message is conveyed in the lyrics, "Save it for a rainy day. Don't just give it up cause your sky turned grey."

Another song worth mentioning is "Do Ya," which accentuates the rich, smooth harmony of the duo's singing.

Maintaining a variety of R and B and soul, the LP stands fairly solidly on the potential of three or four songs. This is not to say that the album is without faults — sometimes the songs get rather boring.

But the band remains confident. Ring and Chapman want to be known as Walk This Way, not for their individual talents, which perhaps explains why the two are not identified by name or musical abilities on the LP. As Ring aptly puts it, "We don't want to walk that way."

The Sisters of Kappa Kappa Gamma would like to Congratulate Their New Sisters:

Caroline C. Bannerton
Kristen M. Barnicle
Jeanne M. Blumberg
Courtney L. Bova
Pamela R. Burdett
Kristan L. Carey
Grace Chun
Susan A. Cornille
Beth Ann Darby
Amy L. Del Grosse
Kelly T. Donohoe
Debra A. Doubrava
Kathleen A. Driscoll
Karen Durning
Brittney M. Elzy
Mayalen Fernandez-Llanio
Maggie A. Fischer
Colleen N. Fitzsimmons
Helene E. Glavin
Catherine M. Hall
Jennifer C. Healey
Wuela E. Heceta
Kelly Henry
Kerryanne E. Henehan
Kristen M. Hogg
Pamela L. Hovey
Moira D. Kelly
Lisa A. Kennedy
Margaret M. Kenney
Candi J. Lanciano
Denise Marie Lenahen
Catharine F. Macaulay
Leah T. Maggio
Kathleen McCauley
Kelly A. McInerney
Laurie M. Monte
Jill T. Motley
MaryBeth Murphy
Eileen M. O'Boyle
Torrey S. Ollison
Christine M. Orr
Janette L. Parker
Karen L. Plasse
Sara J. Racek
Diane T. Randazzo
Lisa A. Scarpa
Giselle C. Schoenle
Christine M. Sciarappa
Winifred A. Scott
Marissa D. Simone
Suzanne Stabile
Stacy E. Sullivan
Pamela A. Wood

CONGRATULATIONS!

RSA

"CAMPUS HOTLINE"

RSA

THANKS to old RSA BOARD

Cory Kohl
Elia DiTaddeo
Lynn Callahan
Cathy Healy
John Horan
Mary Jo Yannacone
Paul Clemente
Jill Mortimer

COFFEE AND DONUTS

8 p.m.-12 a.m.

WED. SUN.
THURS. MON.
FRI. TUES.

REFRIGERATOR PICK-UP

MONDAY, MAY 2

Sullivan Hall	6 to 7 p.m.
Sheehan Hall	6 to 7 p.m.
Moriarty Hall	7:15 to 7:30 p.m.
St. Mary's Hall	7:30 to 8 p.m.
Stanford Hall	6 to 6:45 p.m.
St. Monica's Hall	6:45 to 7:15 p.m.
Katharine Hall	6:45 to 7:15 p.m.
Good Counsel	7:15 to 7:45 p.m.
Corr Hall	6 to 6:30 p.m.
Alumni Hall	6:30 to 7 p.m.
St. Rita Hall	6:30 to 7 p.m.
Austin Hall	6:30 to 7 p.m.
Fedigan Hall	7 to 7:30 p.m.
Simpson Hall	7:30 to 8 p.m.
Delurey Hall	7:30 to 8 p.m.
O'Dwyer Hall	7:30 to 8 p.m.

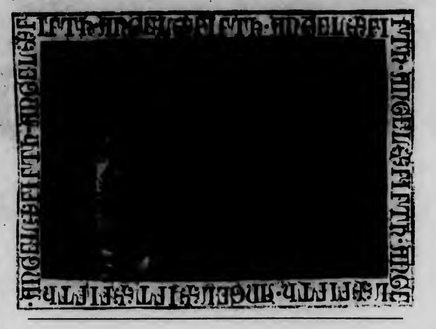
CONGRATS!
to
"ANYTHING GOES" WINNERS

ALUMNI & DELUREY HALLS

THANKS TO ALL HALLS THAT PARTICIPATED

RSA

RESIDENT STUDENT ASSOC.
215 DOUGHERTY HALL
645-7210



Fifth Angel has own style

By RUSS CECCOLA
Senior Reporter

Some bands are so unoriginal that they really have no reason to exist except to sound like someone else. Others create their own style, form, image and sound, relying only upon their talents and vision. Thankfully, Fifth Angel is a member of the latter group. Combining a lot of different elements of hard rock and heavy metal into one album, Fifth Angel is diverse enough to appeal to people into most areas of that type of music. The music is hard and fast, yet melodic, and the songs deal with mythical topics and modern-day travesty.

A first look at the album cover and band name brings thoughts of the bible. Although there are pages from the bible pictured on the back of the album and the name of the band comes from the Book of Revelation, the band is not a Christian band like Stryper. Fifth Angel use the imagery hinted at in Revelation to create a group of songs that deal with the end of the world and the injustice among man that will bring it about. If you think of the message in the songs as a warning against the evil in man, it is a lot easier to understand the lyrics.

The first thing that you will notice about Fifth Angel is Pilot's vocals. He sounds a lot like Joe Lynn Turner, formerly of Rainbow. Tearing into "In the Fallout," Pilot demonstrates his abilities as the rest of the band speeds up in this song that deals with the aftermath of a nuclear war. "In the Fallout" is one of the faster numbers on Fifth Angel and is the easiest to remember from the album.

The collection of talents that form Fifth Angel are: Ted Pilot (vocals), James Byrd (lead guitar), Ed Archer (guitar), John Macko (bass) and Ken K. Mary (drums). Pilot, Byrd and Archer do the majority of the songwriting, with the emphasis on vocals and guitar riffs testament to that fact. At times, the guitars in the songs sound like Yngwie Malmsteen, at others like Adrian Smith and Dave Murray of Iron Maiden. Regardless of possible inspiration, the guitar sounds are unique and fit the songs perfectly.

"Shout It Out" and "Call Out the Warning" deal with that central theme surrounding Fifth Angel. The message is that the people who laugh at, use and persecute others will pay for it at the end of the world, during the day of the coming. To be prepared is better than to be caught offguard. "Wings of Destiny" finishes off Side One — a ballad about war and fighting of any type that takes the children and marches them off to war without experiencing life, like pawns on a chessboard. Also on Side One is "Fifth Angel," which has a riff like Dio's "Holy Diver" and tells of the coming of the fifth angel toward the end of the world as he brings death to the followers of evil.

"The Night" opens Side Two with a brutal criticism of the celebration of suffering, death and murder on television and in the streets. This is the fastest and hardest song on the album, dominated by the guitar work of Archer and Byrd. "Only the Strong Survive" offers a message of hope to get through this world and features some good musical diversity between the chorus and verses. "Cry Out the Fools" has addictive riffs backed by pounding drum beats and sounds a lot like Dio-era Black Sabbath. "Fade to Flames" finishes off Fifth Angel with a mixture of fast guitars and a slow beginning to offer a tale of temptation and loneliness.

Although Fifth Angel's songs are both musically and lyrically very different, one vein runs through it all — a heavy sound with good background/lead vocal harmonization. The album was released before on a smaller record label, but with Epic behind it more success should be found. Of particular interest is the fact that drummer Mary is now on tour with Alice Cooper as his band's skinsman. Once that tour is over, Fifth Angel should probably go out on the road to tour clubs and small halls.

What impresses the most on Fifth Angel is the degree of effort put into the music. The members blend well and there are not any spots where the music falls apart. This factor is essentially important for a band's first efforts. If the music does not hold its own, then neither will the band. Fortunately, Fifth Angel is tight. If their sound were to be classified, it would probably be a combination of Iron Maiden and Dokken, with hints of Waysted. But their uniqueness transcends all of these comparisons to offer what is hopefully a start of better things to come.

Happy Birthday!

now, belated, future

Janet Diefenbach	Collette Mitchell
Doug Scancarella	John F. Swift
Jen Reidy	Kevin Heil
Allen Ambrosino	Johanne C. Sharp

Best of Luck to Our Graduating Seniors

Russ Ceccola
Mary E. Charest
Joanne L. Conrad
Kevin A. Hecht
Joe McGowan
Coleen Moore
Siobhan Roder
Stephen J. Schlager
Michelle Shanahan
Susan Tolve
Susan Sherry
Robert Clarkin
Katie Krackeler
Monica Boscia

the Villanovan

THE 1988

BELLE AIR YEARBOOKS

ARE IN!!

Distribution Times:

May 7 10:30 a.m.-5 p.m.

May 8 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

May 9 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Books will be distributed in the North Lounge of Dougherty Hall. If you forgot to order a copy, additional copies are available at $45 each. Past years yearbooks (1985-1986, and 1987) will also be available.

DON'T MISS IT!

Clarke leads golf

(Continued from page 36)

did please Ficco, he could not help thinking they could have done better.

"Other teams improved greatly [after the first day] and we didn't," said Ficco. "We should have shot better, considering Jim's (Clarke) score. However we did finish ahead of Princeton and Rutgers and they were ranked ahead of us."

On April 20, at a tournament at the Indiana University of Pennsylvania, 'Nova slipped to a disappointing fifth-place finish in the nine-team field. Chris Cappello fired a 78 to lead Villanova, with Rogerson and Rongaius (79s) closely behind. Clarke (82) and Marcantognini (83) finished out the scoring for the Cats.

Villanova is now preparing for the Eastern Invitationals, to be held May 7 and 8. The 36-hole tournament, which will take place in Easton, Md., at the Hog Neck Golf Course, will be a major factor in determining bids to the NCAA Tournament.

"It would be really hard for us to get together and all play great, but if we played to the best of our abilities, you never know what could happen," commented Clarke.

Massey unplugs Outlet

By JOHN G. RICCO
Sports Editor

On April 26, Alley Cat 1988 concluded with one of the most exciting finishes in the tournament's eight-year history. The Gary Massey-led Legion of Doom, previously unbeaten, surrendered 21-20 to Doug West's Outlet team in the first contest, but rebounded for a 21-18 win in the final to capture the tournament crown.

Alley Cat, for those freshmen out there, is a double-elimination intramural tournament held each spring in which one men's varsity basketball player is permitted on each roster. Games are played in a "win by two" format to 15 and are without referees.

If a game is tied 14-14, the teams continue into "overtime" until one reaches 21.

Headed by the Rev. John P. Stack O.S.A., dean of students, for the last seven years, the Alley Cat tourney attracts nearly 40, six-man teams (38 this year) each spring. The $2.50 entry fee per player was donated to the Ballroom Day fund.

Explaining why he both runs and participates in the annual event, Stack said, "It's fun both for me and the students. It gives me a chance to meet a lot of the students, and they enjoy playing with or against the varsity players."

The Outlet, which had been sent into the losers bracket by the Legion earlier in the tournament, advanced to the finals with a victory over Kenny Wilson's Fast Break club. West's team, however, needed back-to-back victories over the Legion to take the title. They were able to win the first contest, but fell just short in the second.

The victorious Legion of Doom team was led by Massey, but consisted of a host of talented players. Complementing the junior forward were Kirk Schulz, Bob Brady, Chris Seeger, John O'Brien and Mike Seeley.

"I compete in it because its fun," said Massey. "We finally get a chance to relax after the season and play some 'street ball.' "

Athlete of the Week

JIM CLARKE

This week's Saco East Athlete of the Week is Jim Clarke.

On April 22 and 23, Clarke fired rounds of 73 and 76 to lead the men's golf team to a sixth-place finish in the Princeton Invitational.

Clarke, a sophomore from Washington, D.C., finished in fourth place overall in the individual standings of the tournament.

SACO EAST University Sportswear

JACKETS ● CAPS ● T-SHIRTS ● PROMOTIONAL ITEMS

1045 LANCASTER AVE., BRYN MAWR 527-4188

The Ripper and James
Thanks for the Memories

—John Swift

Baseball Statistics

PLAYER	AB/H	RBI	2B	HR	SB	SLUGZ	GWH	BA
Jim Sears	48/21	14	5	2	2	.667	1	.438
Bob Coia	26/10	5	2	0	0	.462	1	.385
Rick Petrone	64/24	19	8	1	0	.578	1	.375
Bill Ellis	83/31	18	6	1	4	.530	1	.373
Bob McCreary	173/57	35	14	3	8	.486	4	.329
Marc Alderfer	124/40	23	7	3	9	.452	0	.323
Kevin Cain	59/19	14	5	1	3	.492	2	.322
Corey Williamson	50/16	9	0	1	6	.380	1	.320
Gary Scott	132/42	37	13	5	6	.561	3	.318
David Carr	133/40	26	8	3	12	.444	2	.301
Mike Svanson	77/23	12	0	0	0	.299	1	.299
Garrett Clancy	67/20	13	3	3	1	.507	0	.299
Rafael Novoa	27/8	4	1	0	0	.333	1	.296
Dan Farren	61/18	13	2	1	1	.377	2	.295
Frank Matrone	99/27	13	9	1	0	.394	1	.273
Mike Shick	99/27	24	3	3	5	.414	3	.273
Mike Wismer	46/12	11	4	3	1	.543	1	.261
Dave Shiesser	40/9	5	2	1	0	.400	0	.225
Dennis Gallagher	25/5	2	1	0	0	.320	0	.200

(includes 44 games and at least 20 at bats).

Standings

SOUTH DIVISION	BIG EAST W	BIG EAST L	Overall W	Overall L	T
*VILLANOVA	14	1	26	18	0
*Seton Hall	11	4	29	8	0
Georgetown	4	11	12	27	0
Pittsburgh	1	14	5	20	0

NORTH DIVISION	W	L	W	L	T
*Providence	11	4	18	19	0
St. John's	6	6	16	11	1
Boston College	5	7	9	12	0
Connecticut	5	10	18	15	0

TOYOTA

GRADS & SENIORS, BUY OR LEASE A NEW TOYOTA, NO MONEY DOWN!*

COME IN NOW!

You may qualify to buy or lease a Toyota car or truck, with no down payment at all!* Toyota's unique college financing program makes it easy. Beginning today, you can enjoy miles and miles of Toyota style, quality and performance.

If you're a senior in a 4-year college or graduate degree program, and will graduate within the next six months, you may qualify for the Toyota car or truck of your choice. And you have one year from receipt of your degree to take advantage of this program. Bring a current driver's license and proof of employment or job offer, and Toyota's special financing program for college grads and seniors could be the easiest course in advanced economics ever offered! Come in today for a test drive and an orientation to no-money-down financing.

See Your Student Sales Representatives:
CHRIS MANCINI
RICHARD «BUZZ» BASS

TOYOTA QUALITY
WHO COULD ASK FOR ANYTHING MORE!

Get More From Life...Buckle Up!

ONICELLI TOYOTA "FOR A BETTER BOTTOM LINE"

CARRIAGE TRADE AUTO COMPLEX
1200 RIDGE PIKE, PLYMOUTH MEETING, PA. (215) 8-TOYOTA (215) 825-7128

*No down payment required, provided the amount financed is not more than the Toyota manufacturer's suggested retail price, and the cost of factory-installed optional equipment and required tax and license fees. Proof of insurability required and no negative credit history. Employment to begin within 120 days of loan approval date.

© 1988 Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc.

Villanova's 1987-88 Unsung Heroes

Karyn Lodise
Softball

Mike Rouse
Men's tennis

Jim Riley
Waterpolo

Michelle DiMuro
Women's Track

Edwin Modibedi
Men's Track

The above athletes registered standout performances in their respective sports this past season, but were never recognized as "Athletes of the Week." The Villanovan Sports Editors would like to acknowledge their efforts and honor them in this final issue as Villanova's unsung heroes.

(Courtesy of sports information)

(Photo by O'Neill)

The men's lacrosse team dropped a pair of lopsided decisions this past week.

Lacrosse drops two

By JOHN FAY SWIFT
Statistician

The lacrosse team continued what has been to this point an exciting season, to say the least. The Wildcats dropped a pair of tight games at Lafayette on April 20, and Hofstra on April 23 at Villanova Stadium.

If there is one game that the team would like a chance to play again, it could be the game at Lafayette. Villanova was flat and dropped a disappointing 7-6 defeat at the hands of a very beatable Leopard squad.

Sophomores John McEvoy and Michael Balitsaris each scored two goals in the losing effort. Freshman Chris Sullivan added two points with a goal and an assist, while junior Steve Ciarrocca and sophomore Joe Lingle split the goaltending chores for Villanova.

In their next game, the Cats were faced with one of their toughest foes on the schedule. Hofstra University can be said to have a "big time" lacrosse program. In any regard, the Cats would have to be considered underdogs as they entered this contest.

But it has been the way of this team not to shy away from any opponent. It almost seems as if the better the quality of their opponent is, the better the Cats play. This game proved to be no exception.

Whether Villanova was looking to avenge their defeat earlier in the week, or they were just fired-up to play a team like Hofstra or it was a combination of both, Villanova played much better against the Flying Dutchmen of Hofstra.

The Wildcats started the game well enough, but by the end of the third quarter, Hofstra was able to build a comfortable 9-3 lead.

Villanova, however, as they have proved throughout the season, does not quit. The Cats scored three quick goals to start the fourth quarter and pulled within three goals at 9-6 with 10:40 remaining in the game.

The teams traded goals to make the score 10-7 with 9:04 left in the game, but Hofstra's Flying Dutchmen proved to be a bit too much for 'Nova and outscored the Cats 6-1 down the stretch handing them a tough 13-8 loss.

The Cats record is now 5-7 with one game remaining. That game will be against the Princeton Tigers, a perennial lacrosse powerhouse. The Wildcats will also play an alumni game on April 30 at Villanova Stadium at 4 p.m.

Owls nip Cats in tournament

By ANDREW BULLION
Staff Reporter

The Villanova men's volleyball team took second place in the Atlantic Men's Intercollegiate Volleyball League Tournament, played April 27. The Wildcats lost in the finals to tournament host Temple University, 2-1 in best of three play.

Also competing in the A.M.I.V. championship tournament were Eastern College, who placed third, Haverford College, who took fourth, Swarthmore College, Cabrini College, Penn State-Delco, Lehigh University, the University of Delaware and Spring Garden College.

In the first round of play Villanova easily dominated all of its opponents, dropping only one first-round game out of eight. 'Nova swept both games from Penn State-Delco, Delaware and Swarthmore before splitting, 1-1, with the desperate, upset-minded Eastern College.

During these first-round matches Villanova's big front line, headed by Oklahoma native Patrick Schloss, simply overpowered the competition. Freshman sensation Ron Coffey, hailing from Rhode Island, was almost unstoppable, hitting out of the middle.

In the semi-final match Villanova faced an overachieving Haverford team. Haverford played over its head for a brief period and actually made this semi-final close until midway through the first point when setter Mike Dolan took things into his own hands. Dolan served up the ball to outside hitter Brian Good, who pounded it home, saying "The 'G' is 'O'!" (The Game is Over). And indeed it was; Villanova crushed Haverford 15-6, 15-2.

Villanova Head Coach Tom Lowy said about Haverford, "They're a respectable team; we just wanted this more than they did."

Villanova roared into the finals, only to be sidetracked and then completely derailed by the defending A.M.I.V. champions, the Temple Owls. While all three games in this best-of-three final were close, the first game was undoubtedly the most emotionally draining for the Wildcats. Undaunted by Temple's frenzied, screaming fans, the Wildcats hustled to a 7-3 lead in the first game, due primarily to Dolan's setting and the excellent hitting of John Constantakis.

As this first game wore on it was evident that Constantakis was the money-man, and he collected eight successful spikes as well as a 100 percent kill ratio for this game. But even in the face of this, Temple's powerful hitters caught and passed the Wildcats and won the first game 15-12.

The second game found the Wildcats back on track as Brian Good and Mike Dolan, who went on to be named to the all-tournament team, paired up to fuel the Wildcats to a 15-9 win to even the score at one game apiece.

The third and final game, however, was the downfall of the Villanova squad. With the incredibly shrill fans vocalizing their dislike for the Wildcats, and the Temple players sensing 'Nova's reaction to the noise, the Owls jumped out to an 8-3 lead. Temple never released their stranglehold and eventually won 15-10.

This tournament marked the end of Villanova's 52-game season. The rebuilding and injury-plagued Wildcats, 28-24 (.538) for the 1987-88 season, will return all starting and reserve players and build on that next year.

Tennis

(Continued from page 36)

scores of 6-7, 6-4, 7-5. Teresi, Leonard and Loughman all lost in straight sets. Only Ackerman was undefeated in singles play this past week.

Loughman's loss to Washington's David Marshall, 7-6, 6-2 brought an end to a 28-match unbeaten streak for the Hingham, Mass. freshman, dating back to last fall's Big East Tournament.

The season has, overall, been quite a successful one for Coach Langran and his Cats. Their record now stands at 22-4 with two matches remaining.

Get A Break, Earn A Buck.

Earn quite a few bucks, in fact, while on any break from your studies. We offer temporary assignments to work when you want — as long as you want. It's a great help just when you need the money most. And you could even gain valuable experience. Call us before your next school break.

Western TEMPORARY SERVICES.

King of Prussia	(215) 337-2970
Bensalem	(215) 245-6708
Cherry Hill	(609) 779-8836
Media	(215) 556-9000
Philadelphia	(215) 564-1516
Willow Grove	(215) 657-7200

Clerical • Marketing • Medical • Technical Light Industrial • Santa • Photo • Videotape

BOB-MFN

1988 Football Recruits

Ben Agosti	5-10	174	RB	Marian Catholic/Tamaqua, PA
Randy Crane	6-3	235	DT	Cliffside Park/Cliffside Park, NJ
Nathaniel Davis	6-0	180	RB/DB	N. Brunswick/N. Brunswick, NJ
Scott Donald	6-6	230	TE	Sun Valley/Aston, PA
Joey Dotro	6-1	210	LB	Union/Union, NJ
Chris Grychowski	6-5	230	DL	Erie Cathedral Prep/Erie, PA
Jeff Johnson	6-1	195	RB	Hopewell/Aliquippa, PA
Patrick Kennedy	6-2	180	TB	St. Ignatius/Cleveland, OH
Kevin Long	6-2	185	DB	Joseph Foran/Milford, CT
Tim Matas	6-3	240	OT/DT	Pottsville/Pottsville, PA
Chuck Murray	5-10	170	DB	Stapler/Westport, CT
Chris Nanni	6-4	220	LB	William Penn Charter/Phila., PA
Michael Possenti	6-7	260	OT/DT	Salesianum/Wilmington, DE
Pete Ravalico	6-5	250	OT	Archbishop Carroll/Radnor, PA
Dan Summers	6-5	210	LB	Monsignor Bonner/Drexel Hill, PA
Tim Tarpey	6-3	260	OL/DL	William Penn Charter/Phila., PA

Cats fly at Rutgers Relays

By TERRY KELLY
Staff Reporter

For most of the men's track team this past weekend was spent preparing for this coming week's Penn Relays. However, the whole team was not dormant as several runners participated in the Rutgers Relays at Rutgers University in New Jersey.

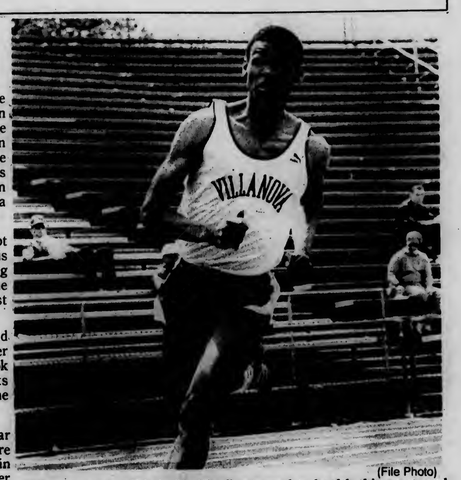
The high point of the meet for the team came in the 400-meter run. The Cats took three of the first four spots including first place.

The trio of 'Nova runners was led by Edwin Modibedi. The senior from Bophuthatswana, Africa is starting to make the most of his final college season after suffering an injury during the winter season.

This marks the second week in a row that Modibedi has helped the Cats take a first place. Last week, it was by anchoring the mile relay team to victory. This week it was by winning the 400 on his own. His time of 46.6 gave him almost a full second victory over Tim McCrossen of St. Lawrence.

Finishing next for the Cats (a tenth of a second out of second place) was sophomore Mark Rainey in third place. His time was 47.5. He was immediately followed by the other half of the sophomore Mark(c) connection, Marc Jones, who finished fourth in 47.7.

In the 800-meter run the results were not quite as good, but considering the competition they were not shabby at all. The first Cat finisher was freshman Aidan O'Regan in third place. He was immediately followed by teammate Finn Kelly. Kelly, also a freshman, finished only a hair behind O'Regan, .01 seconds behind to be exact.



The two freshmen have to be happy though, because they finished .07 and .08 seconds, respectively, behind former Olympian (and 'Nova alumnus) John Marshal, who won the race in 1:51.01. If these two young Cats can continue to progress as they have, they should be a big key to the future success of the team.

Last, but not least at all in the meet, was the performance of Jan Friedli in the 3000-meter run. The sophomore from Denmark ran an extremely strong race to take third with a time of 3:53.8, less than two seconds behind Jim Casey of the West Chester Puma team.

The reason the team did not take more runners to the meet is that they were at home preparing for the Penn Relays, one of the events the team places the most importance on.

The Penn Relays will be held for the 94th time this year. After 28 years in which the team took one or more relay title, the Cats have only had titles in two of the last four years.

The Cats hope that this year they will again be able to capture a title. After the team's upset win in the NCAA indoor 4x800-meter relay, every one around the team is quite optimistic.

(File Photo)

Villanova senior Edwin Modibedi returned to health this week and captured a first place at the Rutgers Relays.

Crew captures regatta, looks to Georgetown

By MAUREEN STAPLETON
Staff Reporter

Behind the strength of the women's team, the Villanova crew team won the regatta held on the Chester River on April 23.

The women's team, coached by Suzanne Standish-White and Anne Dollarton, was dominant throughout the day. The novice four won their race against Washington College in choppy conditions by seven boat lengths. The novice eight competed in a close race and finished in 6:54.9 behind George Mason University (6:41.8) and Washington College (6:45.8).

The varsity eight grabbed first place with a time of 6:42.3, two boat lengths ahead of George Washington University (6:55.3) and George Mason University (7:11.4). Competing in the heavyweight four race, the lightweight four also turned in an impressive first-place finish.

In the men's varsity races the Villanova heavyweight four placed second. The men's heavyweight eight finished a close third. The lightweight eight rowed an excellent race and lost the race by only a second.

Tomorrow, the Wildcats will be racing against Georgetown University, Temple University and Ithaca College on the Schuylkill River.

Looking ahead, the city championships, the Bergen Cup, will be held on May 7. In these races, the teams will be competing against all of the other Philadelphia schools.

Finally, the team will be racing in the Dad Vail Championship to be held May 13 and 14. This prestigious championship attracts colleges from across the country and the competition is fierce.

Miller selects V.U.

By WAYNE CRESSKILL
Staff Reporter

On April 25, David Miller, a senior from Bridgewater West High School in Bridgewater, N.J., announced he will attend V.U. and become 'Nova's fourth 1988 basketball recruit.

Miller, a 6'1" guard, was a three-year starter at Bridgewater West, where he led his team to a combined 63-5 record.

In his senior year he averaged 21 ppg., eight rpg. and six assists per contest as Bridgewater West went 29-1 and won the N.J. Group III Championship. He also shot over 50 percent both overall and from three-point range.

A Newark Star Ledger All-State Group III second team selection, Miller finished with 1,111 career points. In addition to his basketball talent, Miller was an excellent football player as well as an "A" student.

CALL CAPT. FARR AT 386-5557

Searching?

ARE YOU SEARCHING?
WE ARE, TOO . . .
Searching for young Catholic men, like you . . .
To live and work with the poor . . .
To share their sorrows and joys . . .
To care for the needy little ones . . .
To bring Christ into their lives . . .
To join the Columban Missionary Priesthood . . .
If you have a heart big enough, JOIN US!

COLUMBAN FATHERS
MISSIONARIES
in ASIA and LATIN AMERICA

FOR MORE INFORMATION, WRITE OR CALL:
Father Michael O'Loughlin
Vocation Director
Columban Fathers
St. Columbans, NE 68056
(402) 291-1920

Name
Street
City State Zip
School/College Age
Phone: ( )

Sports

Baseball rips Georgetown, Haverford

By DOUG SCANCARELLA
Sports Editor

After Villanova's baseball team dropped three games to Philadelphia rivals Temple, Pennsylvania and Drexel, the Cats rebounded to sweep three games from Big East foe Georgetown. A day later, 'Nova topped Haverford.

"It is an odd situation," remarked third-year Head Coach George Bennett. "Every week we play well on the weekends and do not play well at all on the weekdays."

Bennett was correct. The following game, Tuesday, 'Nova was ripped by Delaware, 9-2.

Shortstop Bob McCreary summed up the situation explaining, "We are more up for the Big East games because they are more important to win."

The Big East games are very important. V.U., with three wins over the visiting Hoyas, improved their Big East record to 14-1, a record which puts them atop the conference and guarantees them a spot in the Big East Tournament.

In the opener with the Hoyas, 'Nova raced out to an 8-0 first-inning advantage, thanks mostly to three-run home runs by Jim Sears and Dave Carr. The Wildcats eventually won the game 9-4. Pitcher Rafael Novoa collected his fourth win of the season and improved his overall record to 5-3.

In the second contest with Georgetown, Villanova cruised to a 9-7 victory. Junior pitcher Mike Shick, a 1987 member of the Big East All-Tournament team, pitched seven and one-third innings and earned the win. Bob Coia came on in relief and got the save.

We got up for Georgetown, we knew we had to sweep them in order to be up for the Seton Hall series.

—Gary Scott

Villanova finished up the series with a 14-7 victory. McCreary, who in the previous game captured the Villanova record for most career doubles, smacked a two-run home run in the sixth inning. The towering shot broke a 7-7 deadlock and gave the Cats a lead they would never relinquish. Once again Coia came on in relief. This time the ace reliever allowed only four hits and no runs.

The Cats sophomore third baseman Gary Scott, who improved his consecutive-game hitting streak to ten, commented, "We got up for Georgetown, we knew we had to sweep them (Georgetown) in order to be up for the Seton Hall series."

The Seton Hall matchup, which is next weekend, is a huge series. The Cats travel North to take on the Pirates, with first place on the line. 'Nova leads Seton Hall by three games, but still needs to beat the Pirates in order to be placed first going into the Big East tourney.

The Cats concluded the week with a victory over Haverford and a loss to Delaware. Haverford shocked Villanova as they surged out to a first-inning 6-0 lead. V.U. came roaring back behind a three-for-five plate performance by Sears and eventually claimed an 8-6 victory.

Also adding to the win was John Oakill, who went two-for-three from the plate, Bill Ellis, who walloped two home runs and Rick Petrone, who hit a game winning two-run home run.

"We knew we were a better team than Haverford and realized it would only be a matter of time before we took the game over," explained McCreary.

'Nova now looks to the Big East Tournament, which takes place on May 17.

(Photo by Trimble)

The Villanovan baseball team swept Georgetown last weekend and topped Haverford the following day.

Rouse, Teresi lead 'Nova as men's tennis rallies past St. Joe's, Millersville

By STEVE KIRSCH
Staff Reporter

The Cat netters rolled into their final full slate of matches last week and came out with their 20th victory of the season and an overall record of 22-4. Coach Dr. Robert Langran's Cats will finish up their season this week with matches against Swarthmore College and Widener University. Swarthmore is ranked No. 5 among NCAA Division III schools.

The week began on April 19 with an 8-1 trouncing of visiting St. Joseph's University. 'Nova swept the Hawks in the singles matches, led by No. 1 Mike Rouse's 6-3, 6-3 win over Rick Suma.

No. 2 Taylor Teresi followed with a 7-6, 6-4 victory and No. 3 Pete Leonard, No. 4 Mike Loughman, No. 5 Mike Freedman and No. 6 Greg Ackerman all followed suit. Only Freedman needed three sets as he disposed of Chris Drexler 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

The doubles teams of No. 1 Loughman-Jeff Gorsky and No. 3 Dave Rizzo-Thursten Claus won their matches in two sets. No. 2 John O'Dwyer-Bill Shea suffered the lone defeat at 6-4, 6-0 and the final score was 8-1.

The following day, 'Nova scored their 20th victory of the year with a 6-3 triumph over visiting Philadelphia Textile. Rouse, a junior, led off with a 6-1, 6-3 win over Herman Richter.

Following a loss by Teresi, 6-4, 6-1 the Cats won the next four singles matches. Leonard won 6-3, 0-6, 7-5 and Loughman won 7-5, 4-6, 6-0. Freedman and Ackerman each coasted to easy two set victories and the score was a lopsided 5-1 at that point.

After losses at No. 1 and No. 1-2 doubles by the team of Gorsky-Mark Tully and Rizzo-Shea, the No. 3 team of Ackerman-O'Dwyer finished up the contest with a 6-4, 6-3 win to ice Coach Langran and the Cats' third straight 20-win season.

The team traveled to Millersville the following day to play the 19th-ranked NCAA Division II team and returned home with a 6-3 victory. Rouse won 7-5, 6-3 over John Wylie, but Teresi lost a close match, 7-5, 4-6, 6-2. Then, as against Textile, the Cats No. 3 through No. 6 singles players won their matches to jump out to a 5-1 lead. Only Freedman needed three sets to win.

And, also as against Textile, the No. 1 and No. 2 doubles combinations lost. This time the teams were composed of Rouse-Loughman and Leonard-Gorsky. Again the team of sophomore O'Dwyer and junior Ackerman won their No. 3 doubles match, this time by a 6-1, 6-1 score. This brought the final tally to 6-3 for the Cats twenty-first victory.

On April 22, the Cats traveled to Ursinus and won a shortened match easily by a 6-1 score. Rouse led off with a three-set victory. Teresi followed with another in a string of very competitive matches, but lost 4-6, 7-5, 6-3.

At the No. 3-No. 6 singles spots, Leonard, Loughman, Freedman and Ackerman all captured two-set victories. Ackerman-O'Dwyer won the lone doubles match in one set, 8-5.

The lone defeat of the week came on April 24, when Washington College of Maryland came to 'Nova and soundly whipped the Cats, 5-1. Washington is ranked No. 1 among NCAA Division III schools.

Six singles matches were played and only Ackerman was able to capture a victory. He won by scores of 6-1 and 6-4.

Rouse lost 4-6, 7-5, 7-6 to Larry Gewer and Freedman lost by

(Continued on page 34)

(Photo by Pritchard)

Chrissy Russel and the women's softball team endured another tough week, with two wins and four losses.

Golf finishes 11-1

By JIM BOWMAN
Assistant Sports Editor

In a home triangular at Aronomink Golf Course on April 25, the Villanova men's golf team added the finishing touches to a successful dual meet season with victories over East Stroudsburg University and Lehigh University. Their final record stands at 11-1.

Sophomore Todd Rongaus led 'Nova with a 77, followed by freshman Kevin Rogerson (79) and junior John Marcantognini (80). The team finished with a score of 402, well ahead of both Lehigh and East Stroudsburg. Third-year Head Coach Don Ficco, whose career dual meet record is now 37-3, was pleased with the results of his team this spring.

"We had a very good season. The key was consistency. Nobody had real high scores and everybody was pretty close, as far as the competition goes.

"We don't have the killers yet, those one or two guys who have the great scores every time, but we were still pretty good."

On April 22-23, the team captured sixth place in the prestigious Princeton Invitational. Sophomore Jim Clarke, who had struggled all spring, almost single-handedly led the Cats to their lofty finish. His two-day total of 149 (76, 73) netted him fourth place overall.

"I changed my attitude. I just relaxed a lot more," explained Clarke. "I put a lot of pressure on myself to do well this spring and I've really struggled, but I feel great about my game right now."

Although the sixth-place finish

(Continued on page 33)

Golf Head Coach Don Ficco

Drexel downs softball

By AMY C. SPENCER
Staff Reporter

Villanova women's softball had another down week, losing four of six games to bring their season record to 9-16.

The week started well, with a win in the first game of a doubleheader against LaSalle University on April 19. The Cats came out strong, scoring two runs in each of the first two innings and held on to win by a score of 5-4.

Jill Karpinski was the offensive power of the game, with a single, a double and three RBI's. Kris Branca notched the win, a complete game victory.

Branca also pitched the second game of the series, this time losing 4-2. She gave up eight hits and two walks.

The Drexel Dragons clawed the Cats in an 11-0 exhibit game April 21. Villanova's lone hit was by Karyn Lodise in the third inning. The Cats committed eight errors to aid Drexel's romp to victory. The Dragons had 10 hits including a double and a triple.

Villanova also lost the second game of the doubleheader, 6-0. Drexel held the Cats to but three hits. Branca again took the loss for the Wildcats.

The Cats lost their first game against Seton Hall April 24, 8-0. Lodise yielded 10 hits including back-to-back triples in the sixth inning.

The Cats got back on the ball in the second game, however, beating the Pirates 6-2. The game featured eight Villanova hits, including triples by Lodise and Rita Basile.

Seton Hall led 2-0 after two innings, but a [illegible] in the fourth helped the Cats [illegible] the victory. Branca was the winning pitcher.

CONTINUED

ON

NEXT REEL

END OF

REEL

PLEASE

REWIND